The Northwestern Paper company has decided to erect a paper mill at Brainerd. The present capacity of the pulp mill will be doubled, the mill and the race being continued down the river. The paper mill itself will be located just south and west of the pulp mill and will manufacture news print paper only. The two mills together will employ about 130 persons, mostly men. It has not yet been decided whether to run the machinery of the paper mill by steam or by electricity generated by water power. As soon as work on the project is started from 200 to 300 men will be given employment for several months.

THAW IS DELUGED WITH FOOD

RUMOR OF TROUBLE BETWEEN PRISONER AND CATERER—FRIENDS GET BUSY.

New York, Aug. 11.—Harry K. Thaw yesterday was suddenly an object of general and varied generosity, for food poured in on the prison authorities for him for some time. Chicken, roast beef, stews, ragouts, soups, fish, vegetables, pies, puddings and coffee figured in the list. One order from a Wall street cafe was large enough to have kept the prisoner supplied for several days. Moreover, accompanying all these eatables were knives and forks, which prisoners charged with capital offenses are not allowed to use with their meals.

The warden had difficulty in stopping the stream of messengers bringing food. The incident was due to a report that Thaw had quarreled with the prison caterer who has been furnishing him with meals, and that in consequence he had breakfasted on ordinary prison fare. The report had it that the disagreement was due to Thaw's insisting on having a knife and fork with his meals. Later Thaw's attorney, Clifford W. Hartridge, explained that there was no foundation for the report beyond the fact that Thaw's caterer had been taken ill and could not work yesterday.

NOTABLE TRIO IN PERIL.

Gov. Warfield, Gov. Harris and Gen. Kiefer Barely Escape Death.

Springfield, Ohio, Aug. 11.—Gov. Warfield of Maryland, Gov. Harris of Ohio and Gen. J. Warren Kiefer missed death by two feet yesterday when an automobile in which they were riding was caught between the gates of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis railway here.

The men jumped from the machine just as the limited train dashed by at the rate of fifty miles an hour, the automobile being less than a yard from the rails.

Gov. Warfield has been attending the reunion of the Ohio Maryland association here, the automobile ride being part of the entertainment in his honor.

HARLAN HEARD FROM.

Killing of Japanese Not Expected to Result in Complications.

Washington, Aug. 11.—The department of justice yesterday received a telegram from District Attorney Harlan at Fairbanks, Alaska, regarding the killing and capture of the Japanese poachers at St. Paul island. The telegram contained no facts which had not been covered by Solicitor Sims' report.

Mr. Harlan asked for instructions, which will be sent to him in the course of time, but not until additional information has been received. The revenue cutter McCulloch, under directions of the president, will immediately resume patrol duty about the Pribiloff islands.

The opinion is still generally held in the state department that the killing of the poachers will not result in any unpleasant international complications.

MURDERER IS CAPTURED.

Sheriff's Posse Storms Cabin, Killing One of the Desperado's Pals.

Middlesboro, Ky., Aug. 11.—Frank Ball, who recently escaped jail at Richmond, Ky., was captured yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Rice Johnson and posse after a fight, which raged for an hour.

Ball some time ago killed Jack Bolen, a Middlesboro barber. He broke jail and has been in hiding in the mountains. Wednesday night Ball was located in a log cabin near Rose Hill, Va., and Sheriff Johnson and sixteen deputies went to the cabin and demanded Ball's surrender. This he declined. Yesterday afternoon fire was opened on the cabin and after John Lee, one of Ball's men, had been killed, Ball surrendered. Ball will be taken to the Kentucky penitentiary at Frankfort.

Candidate Cole has at last been endorsed. The fifty or seventy-five people who attended the banquet given in honor of Mr. Cole at Walker soon after the Tom Shevlin convention unanimously agreed that "Mr. Cole is a man of integrity, is charitable and kind, a true friend of all loyal citizens, and well qualified to fill with credit to himself and honor to the state the high office of governor."

This indefinite and chilly indorsement is handed out as an expression of "the citizens of Beltrami, Cass, Crow Wing, Hubbard and Itasca counties." The people present did not number one-half of one percent of the voters of these counties, and pronunciamentos savor largely of presumption. The three tailors of Tooley street once volunteered to resolute for the people of England and their assumption of authority was not much more farcical than the resolutions passed by the folks who ate Mr. Cole's grub and drank his wine.

IS IT WORTH WHILE?

Belle Plaine Herald: Candidate Cole will soon be wondering whether that nomination was worth while. It has been a cheerless, bandless, bouquetless campaign for him so far.

CLEAN CANDIDATES FIRST.

Albert Lea Enterprise: What is the use of preaching public rights and fighting for clean government and at the same time advocating Tom Shevlin—that is, his nominee, for governor.

COLE HELPED KILL TWO GOOD BILLS.

Little Falls Herald: It appears from the legislative record that Candidate Cole helped kill the bills for reciprocal demurrage and for a two-and a-half cent passenger rate. Those would have been practical aids for state developement.

VOTERS CANT BE CORRUPTED.

Those back of Shevlin in nominating Cole are cheerful givers to the campaign fund. It is learned from the inside that many thousands of boodle have already been raised, and that the supply will be unlimited. After the votes are counted, the conspirators will be surprised to learn the number of people who voted against corruption of electorate. Minnesota is not yet in the Pennsylvania or "rotten borough" class.

UP TO THE COMMISSION

Willmar Tribune: If the "merged" roads are not giving fair rates it is up to the railroad commission of the state, composed entirely of republicans, to remedy the matter. It is true that the commission is supposed to be quite friendly to the roads, but as Governor Johnson had nothing to do with the selection of the members of the board he cant in fairners be charged with their shortcomings. The party that nominated them and the people who elected them have to answer for their actions.

JOYFUL OVER JACOBSON'S DEFEAT.

Is Tom Shevlin, the Minneapolis Millionaire Lumberman, running for an office on the state ticket? Judging from the newspaper mention he is receiving—most of it of an uncomplimentary nature—it would seem that he is, but a scrutiny of the tickets in the field so far fails to locate him. Tom's fling at fame came as the result of his spectacular participation in the Duluth convention and in consequence not a few have been trying to make him out as bottle holder for the republican nominee, but those who are engaged in the task are besmirching themelves worse than they are Mr. Cole. Tom did figure a few at Duluth, he did let go of a little long green when it was all over, but he talked more. As for Cole's nomination, he was as much surprised at the result as any one. He just climbed in the band wagon when it was over. Pin him down and he will tell you that he was celebrating the defeat of Jacobson rather than the success of Cole. In any event his connection, remote as it is, is unfortunate and the stuff some people are trying to create out of it is serious.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Mr. Shevlin was with anyone to beat Jacobson and more especially Mr. Cole, as he knew that candidate was the only one who could do it. The dispatch admits that the celebrated banquet given and entertainment provided the Hennepin County delegation by Shevlin after the convention was in honor of Jacobson's defeat. Will that paper tell the people why Mr. Shevlin, the lumber baron, was so afraid of Jacobson? The voters of the state know that they will resent the action and the use of money to accomplish his point at the polls in November.—Mankato Review.

SKIN DISEASES
FIERY ACIDS IN THE BLOOD

All skin diseases are due to the same cause—an excess of acid in the blood caused by faulty assimilation of food and poor bowel action; this fiery acrid matter is forced to the surface through the pores and glands. Pustules are formed, discharging a sticky fluid which dries and makes a crust, causing intense itching. When the crusts or scabs are scratched off the skin is left raw and bleeding. Sometimes skin diseases are in the dry form, and bran-like scales come on the flesh, or the skin becomes hard and dry, often cracking, and the painful itching causes acute suffering. It does not matter how the trouble is manifested, the cause is the same—an excess of acid in the blood. Salves, powders, cooling washes, etc., while they relieve the itching and give the sufferer temporary comfort, cannot cure the trouble because they do not reach the acid laden blood. The best treatment for all skin diseases is S. S. S., a remedy that is purely vegetable and one which acts directly on the blood with a cleansing, healing effect. S. S. S. neutralizes the acids, and purifies the blood so that the skin instead of being blistered and burned by the fiery fluids, is nourished by a supply of cooling, healthy blood. Special book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired will be furnished without charge.

Dear Sirs—My body broke out with a rash or eruption which in spite of all efforts to cure continued to get worse. The itching, especially at night, was simply terrible. I had tried many highly recommended preparations without benefit, and hearing of S. S. S. determined to give it a fair trial, and was inexpressibly delighted when a few bottles cured me entirely.

THE Brangwyn Mystery

"My governor didn't say anything about being out to-night," said Gervase. "He's a very regular party as a rule. But that's how things happen, and of course you may expect a cove to be away when most he's wanted."

"My governor's the cove for regularity," said Gervase's friend. "He comes home about seven o'clock in the morning with his dress tie under one ear, and swears at me because I won't let him go to bed in his boots. He takes his half-bottle at four or five, breakfasts at six, dresses for the theayter about eight, and turns up at seven hay hem with his tie under the other year. Then for a change he'll cry because I won't let him go to bed with his boots on, but he can always be relied on with regard to hours. That's been his line of life ever since I've been with him, and he's as strong as a bullock and as healthy as a footballer in full training."

"That's the queer part of it," said Gervase. "It's the unequal way as things are distributed. Now my governor, he's obliged to be pretty nearly as careful as I am. A little bit of gaiety and he'll be knocked clean off his perch for a month of Sundays. We'll have just one more, and then I think it would be as well if we had a bit of a snooze."

"All right," his friend returned. "You take your snoose and I'll keep watch. My tulip won't be home for three hours yet, and I shall be through with him in half an hour."

Gervase bestowed himself for slumber. The morning hours passed uneventfully, and in a little while all the three under that roof were asleep. The tulip's guardian was awakened by the sound of a heavy and uncertain footstep on the stair, and darted out to the performance of his customary morning functions.

Billery slumbered more like death than life to look at, and Gervase, disturbed by his companion's departure, arose to bathe and dress and to arrange the rooms for his master's arrival. It was near noon when Alexis appeared, perfectly attired and groomed, but looking pale, tired and harrassed.

"Why, what in heaven's name is this?" he asked, as his eye fell on Billery. "Isn't that fellow recovered yet?"

"Yes," said Alexis, "I left him here. He was drunk, confound him, and I put him on my bed. What's this dreadful smell of gas, Gervase?"

"Can you smell it still, sir?" Gervase inquired. "We've had the windows open hours and hours. There's been a dreadful business here, sir;" and he began to tell the story with many windings and circumlocutions, whilst Alexis listened apparently more in wrath than sympathy.

"The drunken brute," he said. "It was a wonder he didn't kill himself."

"Well, sir," said Gervase, "its none so certain that he hasn't. It was half an hour before the doctor was sure that there was a pulse left in him. He's been in twice to see him, and he's none too hopeful. The gentleman hasn't moved a little finger since we laid him there, and I shouldn't be surprised, sir, if he never moved another."

Alexis walked to the side of the couch and looked down at the recumbent figure. Billery's face was all puffed and swollen; his lips were lead-color, and his cheeks of a greenish gray.

"I think he is breathing a trifle freer than he was, sir," Gervase said. "You'd ha' took him for a corpse at five this morning, sir."

"Well," returned Alexis, reluctantly, "I can't turn him out like this. You can make room for him somewhere, I suppose?"

"He'd be as well off as anywhere in the library," Gervase suggested, "but he'd get the properest nursing at the hospital."

Alexis still stood looking down at the puffed features. He stooped to take the wrist between his thumb and finger, consulting his watch meanwhile.

"Well, well!" he said, as he allowed the hand to fall. "This poor beggar was a friend of mine until he went to the dogs through drink. I suppose we must look after him, Gervase. When do you expect the doctor back again?"

"From what he said, sir," Gervase answered, "he might be here at any minute now. That's him, I expect, sir."

In effect there was a ring at the bell that moment. It did not herald the advent of the doctor, however, but of two young ladies in summer morning costume, looking delightfully dainty, fresh and cool, and sparkling with health and high spirits.

"'Twas I that brought her here," said Belle Malloy, in her laughing Irish voice. "We've stolen a holiday to London, and I persuaded her to let me chaperon her here, because I wanted to have a look at these elegant quarters of yours that I've heard so much about. But what's that?"

"It's Mr. Billery," cried Lilian. "Alexis, what is the matter with him? He isn't dead?"

"No," said Alexis. "It's hardly so bad as that, but he's had a narrow escape, poor chap. I don't quite like to talk of it, but I suppose you know about his little failing?"

"Oh, yes," said Belle. "Poor Billery. We've heard of that." She looked at him with pity in her eyes, whilst Lilian shrank back a little, with her eyes widned and her fine nostrils dilated. The training and experience of the two girls had been widely different. Miss Molloy, the too jovial old Irish admiral's daughter, saw a regrettable commonplace, and Lilian saw an undiluted horror.

"He came here last night," said Alexis, "in rather a deplorable condition. I laid him on my bed and left him here, and somehow in the night he contrived to turn on the gas in the fire-grate. He seems to have had a very narrow escape from asphyxiation, and, to tell the truth, he isn't out of danger, yet."

"Oh, poor Billery!" said Belle. "Barrin' that fault, a better creature never breathed. Oh, ye poor, silly man, what d'ye do that for? What's the good of it to ye?"

"We must do our best for him," said Alexis. "I was away when the thing happened, but my man found him and sent at once for a doctor. He has youth and a sound constitution on his side."

"Can we be of use in any way?" asked Lilian. "Tell me, Alexis, if there is anything that we can do."

"There is nothing to be done at present," he answered. "When I have had a talk with the doctor I shall know how to act."

CHAPTER VIII.

Billery did not die that time, but he lay for a week in the balance. Alexis suffered a good deal from the necessary invasion of his privacy, and the discovery of Billery's terrible secret was all the harder to endure because in the very nature of things it was impossible for him to seek any sort of friendly consolation or advice. It was not a thing to breathe a word about to any human creature, and whilst Billery lay under his roof unconscious his host went almost crazy with anxiety and with wonder as to what course of action he would take when he recovered. It was quite impossible to know whether that drunken declaration of his resolve to do his duty and to make his knowledge common property would be put in effect or not. He had always been so much of a weathercock that he could be blown this way or that by any gust of feeling; but for the time being, at least, Billery was not amenable to reason, or in a state to be appealed to, however gently.

If under these conditions Alexis sometimes found his self-possession severely tested, and if at times he allowed that fact to be seen, it was, perhaps, hardly to be wondered at. It was evident to most of those who were close to him at this period of his trials that he put a great restraint upon himself with regard to Billery. He was sometimes on the very verge of an angry outbreak with Gervase, who had hitherto found him the least exacting of masters, the suavest tempered, and the most easily pleased. Now that unhappy servitor stole about his duties with a sense of an overcharge of electricity in the air and a constant expectation of a thunderstorm. There were two nurses in waiting on the patient, one attending by night and one by day, and the abruptness of Alexis's manner kept them both in fear. But there was simply no end to his patience and kindness to Billery, who, when he began to approach recovery, was extremely trying. He brought him grapes and jellies and all manner of comforting and strengthening things, and he was so uniformly gentle in the sick room that everybody preferred to encounter him there rather than elsewhere.

But when Billery was well on his way to convalescence his host's instability took such a hold upon him that sometimes he would march from the room in which the invalid sat or lounged at rest and would ease his mind by the use of vigorous language until he felt that he had let off steam enough, and that it was safe for him to return.

"Well, Alexis," said the convalescent one evening when they were alone together, "I suppose I must be off tomorrow. I shall never find words in which to say how much I thank you for all your kindness. You've been better than a brother to me, old chap. I came here and blurted out that dreadful news of mine when I wasn't in a fit state to tell it. I've been a ghastly nuisance ever since, imposing myself on you as if you were an institution for the relief of submerged inebriates, and you've been a miracle of forgiveness. I'm deeply touched, Alex, and I'm profoundly grateful, and on top of it all, old chap, I'm more ashamed than I can say."

And Billery, being still very weak and very shaken in nerve, cried a little, and applied his handkerchief to his tears without disguise.

"Don't say any more about it, Hamilton," said Alexis, in a sort of quiet exasperation. Then he broke out, "The thing was lost in darkness. It was seven years old, and everybody concerned had forgotten it, or consented to put it out of mind. Why in heaven's name should it be dragged into the light again at this time of day, when all the misery and suspicion and suspense had been suffered long ago and had been lived down? More misery, more suspicion. Open shame, by heaven! And nothing to end it all but suicide or the gallows."

He went up and down the room in a swift, irregular walk, wringing his hands.

The valet's step sounded lightly in the corridor. He passed into his own quarters, and the listeners heard him close the door behind him.

"It's hard," said Billery. "It's bitter hard."

Alexis stood still and held up his hand.

The electric bell sounded shrilly, and Gervase opened the outside door. A moment later he appeared.

"Grimaud is here, sir. He wants to know if he can have the honor of a word."

"Send him in," said Alexis. Grimaud entered, hat in hand. His aspect of cheap fineness had disappeared. He was still overdressed, but his clothes were well cut and new. His boots, gloves, hat, and linen were all irreproachable. He stood bowing at the entrance, and offered a very passable imitation of a gentleman. "Come in, Grimaud; come in," said Alexis, heartily. "Sit down, my good fellow. You remember Mr. Billery, of course. You knew him well in the old days of the studio in the Cite d'Antin."

"I have the honor to remember Mr. Billery," said Grimaud.

"Gervase," said Alexis, "bring whisky and soda and cigars. Come in, Grimaud, and sit down when you're told, like a reasonable person. And what is the news, Grimaud?"

Billery found a reason for it in less than half a minute later, but Alexis's manner at first wholly puzzled him. It was as artificial as that of an unpracticed actor on the stage, as falsely genial and as forced. Alexis had Gervase for a gallery, and when the door closed behind him for a moment he dropped into the tone of nature.

"Let us speak French," he said, "when that fellow returns."

Gervase returned with a salver laden with decanter, glasses, and a cigar box. Alexis broke out in French with the same false vivacity as before, talking of the theaters, the day's news—anything that came into his head; and none of it worth saying or worth listening to. When the man had once more retired he motioned to his guests to help themselves, and when they were supplied poured out a beaker for himself. He drank it at a gulp, fumbled in the box for a cigar with a hand so agitated that his fingers drummed at the sides, and, leaning forward with a gesture to draw his hearers nearer, spoke in a subdued voice, and still in French.

"My friend Mr. Billery knows of the discovery on which you lighted, my Good Grimaud, and he had himself arrived at it, and had built his own conclusions on it some weeks before. You are both in my confidence and I am in yours. You are the only persons in the world to whom I can speak about this terrible affair, and I want to know what you advise and what we can do—if we can do anything — to stave off the horror of exposure. Tell me, Grimaud, when did you first begin to suspect my cousin?"

"I began to suspect the real author of the crime," said Grimaud, "within an hour of the time at which I first heard of it."

(To Be Continued.)

He'd Have Drunk It First.

Hilary K. Adair, the noted Missouri detective, was in St. Louis ferreting out a crime.

"That is pretty conclusive, isn't it?"

"It's excellent," Mr. Adair declared. "It's positive and convincing. It is as irrefutable as the testimony I once heard from a Scot.

"This Scot was a witness in a drowning case. A man named McIntosh had been drowned, and the Scot claimed that the death was accidental.

"'But you were not present at the time,' said the coroner. 'How do you know, then, that poor McIntosh didn't commit suicide?'

"'Losh, yer honor,' said the Scot, 'wasn't this Saunders McIntosh a brither Scot, and dinna the corp ha'e a wee bottle o' whiskey on't wi' ne'er a nip ta'en oot?'"

Bathing Dresses Reminded Him.

"Some of these bathing dresses," said Marshall P. Wilder, "make me think of Princess Clementine, the mother of the prince of Bulgaria.

"The princess said one day to her sailor brother, the Duc de Joinville:

"'Bring me, on your next trip to the South seas, the complete costume of a king's wife.'

"'I will gladly,' the duke answered.

"He returned from the South seas a year later, and handed to his sister, a string of glass beads.

"'These are very pretty,' said the princess, 'but you promised me a complete costume.'

"'This is a complete costume,' said the duke. 'I have never seen them wear any other.'"

Most Women Are Busy Making Men Comfortable

The Busy Woman Continually Doing Trifling Things That Seem to Count for Nothing—The Art of Making the Home Pleasant for Some One.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

When a man stays at home from business, either because he is ill or because he is taking a holiday, he is very apt to remark, benignantly, that his wife has a great deal of time on her hands. Should the man be a retired merchant, broker or professional person who has decided that he has had enough of money making and that he is entitled to enjoy himself for the rest of his days, his wife is very likely to hear a good deal about the ease in which she has spent the years that have been to him a ceaseless round of grubbing. In the latter case, the wife is fortunate if she does not often have occasion to wish that her lord would again betake himself to the counting-room or the office.

A man in the house is a very pleasant companion in the space legitimately his own. One likes to see him eat his dinner; unless one is a determined ascetic, one is not averse to the scent of his pipe or cigar, and one's evenings at home are much happier when the man of the house is domestic and does not rush off to see another man, or to spend the time at his club.

In brief, there are times and seasons when men understand women and women understand men, but an unoccupied man adrift in the home all day long is sure to be something of a discipline to his wife and daughters. If he do not interfere and interrupt and give advice and criticise, and inspect the marketing and the accounts, he probably sits about ostentatiously with a magazine or a newspaper, yawns, fidgets and wonders how under the sun women endure the monotony of their existence.

We will suppose that a woman, neither more nor less busy than women in general, goes away for an outing and leaves her husband detached from other business to keep house and take care of the children in her absence. On her return she will discover that the house has lost a portion of its immaculate and shining tidiness, that the children have degenerated into chronic ill-behavior, and that the maids are only withheld from giving warning by their loyalty to her. The man in his turn, if he be frank, will admit that his wife's routine of duties, obligations and economies, varied by incessant interruptions from the door-bell, is enough to fairly swamp the energies of the average man.

The woman who is not busy is so rare that she ought to be labeled and exhibited in a museum as an obsolete specimen of the daughters of Eve. The woman who is at once busy and fussy, who makes a point of exploiting the fact that she can never catch up with her work, who is hurried, worried and preoccupied because she is cumbered with care, is to be met in almost every house on our block. The exceptional woman who being busy still keeps her frets and cares in the background, who is serene and tranquil and accomplishes things without haste and without waste, is the finest type of American womanhood. When we meet her we acknowledge that we are in the presence of a queen regnant. She manages her affairs; they do not manage her. She may sometimes be tired, but she is tired to good purpose and has earned the sleep that refreshes the toiler.

A man may inquire "what are women busy about?" Some of them it may be replied are very busy in making men comfortable. We are not now discussing those independent bachelors who have established themselves in apartments of somewhat forlorn luxury, aloof from woman's touch and presence, but of the great majority of men who go to business every morning and come home every night. They are fathers, husbands, sons and brothers, and their clothing is brushed and repaired, their rooms are swept and dusted, their beds are made and their tables are spread for them by the provident hands of the women they love.

They go out and come in and the intervening hours are interesting and exciting and sometimes are anxious, but they go with the wave of a woman's hand to cheer them on, and they come back to the kiss of sweet womanhood of wife or daughter or mother. A man has more variety in his life and less interruption than falls to the lot of a woman who is a busy housekeeper. From Monday morning until Saturday night she is continually engaged in doing a number of trifling things that make no show and seem to her to amount to little in the end. She is making the home a shelter and a refuge for the men who abide within it.

A woman is often busy during the most beautiful years of her life in the tasks of maternity. "To bear, to nurse, to rear," epitomizes the mother's profession, and when the babies are coming and the boys and girls are growing up, growing so fast that their progress is like a miracle, wearing out shoes, wearing out stockings, wearing out frocks and trousers, going to school, taking hold of life in its initiative, the woman who mothered them is surely sufficiently busy.

Dear patient woman, o'er your children bending
To leave a good-night kiss on rosy lips.
Or list the simple prayers to God ascending,
Ere slumber veil them in its soft eclipse;
I wonder, do you dream that seraphs love you,
And sometimes smooth the pathway for your feet;
That oft their silvery pinions float above you,
When life is tangled and its cross-roads meet?

So wan and tired, the whole long day so busy;
To laugh or weep, at times, you hardly know;
So many trifles make the poor brain dizzy,
So many errands call you to and fro.
Small garments stitching, weaving fairy stories,
And binding wounds and bearing little cares,
Your hours pass; unheeded all the glories
Of that great world beyond your nursery stairs.

Many women are intensely busy in various phases of altruistic effort. How unselfish and heroic are the women who have taken the vows of some gentle sisterhood and consecrated themselves to works of Christian charity. We never see a woman in the uniform and garb of a deaconess or a nun without understanding that she has renounced the greater part of all that makes woman's hopes and ambitions, that she may devote herself to the relief of suffering and the consolation of grief.

There are women who minister to those incurably ill of cancer and consumption to which are added the stings and pangs of want. There are busy women not a few who give constant donations of time and labor to church work, to hospitals, guilds and associations of every degree. What would the world do without them?

Nothing has here been said of the vast realm appropriated to itself by that modern force, the woman's club. Here women are if not precisely rushed, yet so breathlessly busy that some of them have nervous exhaustion and require periodical trips to Europe to freshen them for another campaign. The woman's club is the sphere not so much of girlhood as of maturity, and it has aptly been styled "the post-graduate school of the middle-aged."

In all this no allusion has been made to the million women who are busy in this land precisely as men are in earning their daily bread.

They accept the hours, the conditions, the environments of men in cannot be said that they receive the same emoluments. The average pay of the woman toiler is less than the average pay of the man toiler. Notwithstanding this, her work compares favorably with his, she has as much conscience, as much diligence and as much deftness as he, and she begins as early and stays as late at her place of toil. Then, when she goes home she cooks, she sews, she scrubs, she mends, she washes and irons, she plays the piano, she entertains her friends, and she does any one of a dozen things that fall to her lot because she is a woman. She is the busiest woman of all and not the least to be envied, for she is commonly independent and happy.

BIG NEW SHOE BUILDING.

It Is Dedicated by the W. L. Douglas Co. at Brockton.

The dedication a short time ago of the new administration and jobbing house building erected by the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co. as a part of its mammoth manufacturing plant at Montello was marked by the thoroughness and attention to detail characteristic of the firm in all its undertakings.

The dedicatory program included open house from 11 a. m. to 8 p. m. with concert by the Mace Gay orchestra and the presence of a Boston caterer to attend to the wishes of all. The building itself afforded a feast for the eye, especially the offices, which are marvels in many ways. Fifteen thousand invitations were sent out, including over 11,000 to the retail dealers in the United States who handle the W. L Douglas Co. shoes, the others going to shoe manufacturers and all allied industries in Brockton and vicinity. Mr. Douglas will be glad to have anybody who is interested call and inspect the new plant, and says "the latch string is always out." All departments of the plant were open for inspection, the three factories as well as the new building, and visitors were received and escorted through the industrial maze by ex-Gov. Douglas, assisted by the heads of the various departments.

Under the present system all shoes are manufactured to order, and customers sometimes lose sales waiting for shoes to arrive. With the new jobbing house they will be enabled to have their hurry orders shipped the same day they are received.

The new building is 260 feet long and 60 feet wide and two stories in height. The jobbing department will occupy the entire lower floor, while the offices will occupy the second floor. The jobbing department will carry a complete stock of men's, boys', youths', misses' and children's shoes, slippers, rubbers and findings equal to any jobbing house in the country. Buyers are especially invited to come here to trade, and every effort possible will be made to suit their convenience. There will be a finely appointed sample room on the second floor, with an office in which both telephone and telegraph will be installed, with operators, both Western Union and Postal Telegraph wires to be used. There will also be arrangements for the receipt and despatch of mail.

Autos to Match Hair.

The New York girl's latest idea in automobiles is to have hers painted to match or to set off her hair.

A superb car that focussed all eyes on Fifth avenue a few days ago was painted a rich mahogany brown, and the chief occupant of the tonneau was a young woman with a mass of red hair, of a shade that illuminated the avenue. She was dressed in brown, the chaffeur wore a brown uniform, and by the lady's side sat a superb Boston bull terrier, done in shining shades of brown.

"Obviously," said an observant bachelor, "scarlet or green could not be so well carried out, but yellow might be."

"Yes," gasped his companion, "with a yellow pup."

Fall Was Sufficient.

One day, when Pat and Mike were out hunting they shot at almost any living creature in sight. Toward evening, as they were returning to the camp with nothing but a small amount of ammunition, Pat was telling how foolish they had been to use all that ammunition and get nothing in return.

Just then two birds flew by, and Mike took aim and killed one, which fell at Pat's feet.

On picking it up Pat discovered its neck was broken, and, turning to Mike, he exclaimed: "Sure, Mike, why did you use that shot? Why, the fall would have killed the bird."

AN OLD TIMER.

Has Had Experiences.

A woman who has used Postum Food Coffee since it came upon the market 8 years ago knows from experience the necessity of using Postum in place of coffee if one values health and a steady brain.

She says: "At the time Postum was first put on the market I was suffering from nervous dyspepsia and my physician had repeatedly told me not to use tea or coffee. Finally I decided to take his advice and try Postum, and got a sample and had it carefully prepared, finding it delicious to the taste. So I continued its use and very soon its beneficial effects convinced me of its value, for I got well of my nervousness and dyspepsia.

"My husband had been drinking coffee all his life until it had affected his nerves terribly. I persuaded him to shift to Postum and it was easy to get him to make the change for the Postum is delicious. It certainly worked wonders for him.

"We soon learned that Postum does not exhilarate or depress and does not stimulate, but steadily and honestly strengthens the nerves and the stomach. To make a long story short our entire family have now used Postum for eight years with completely satisfying results, as shown in our fine condition of health and we have noticed a rather unexpected improvement in brain and nerve power." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Increased brain and nerve power always follow the use of Postum in place of coffee, sometimes in a very marked manner.

"AN OLD PAINTER'S IDEAS."

The autumn season is coming more and more to be recognized as a most suitable time for housepainting. There is no frost deep in the wood to make trouble for even the best job of painting, and the general seasoning of the summer has put the wood into good condition in every way. The weather, moreover, is more likely to be settled for the necessary length of time to allow all the coats to thoroughly dry, a very important precaution. An old and successful painter said to the whiter the other day: "House owners would get more for their money if they would allow their painters to take more time, especially between coats. Instead of allowing barely time for the surface to get dry enough not to be 'tacky,' several days (weeks would not be too much) should be allowed so that the coat might set through and through. It is inconvenient, of course, but, if one would suffer this slight inconvenience, it would add two or three years to the life of the paint." All this is assuming, of course, that the paint used is the very best to be had. The purest of white lead and the purest of linseed oil unmixed with any cheaper of the cheap mixtures, often known as "White Lead," and oil which has been doctored with fish oil, benzine, corn oil or other of the adulterants known to the trade are used, all the precautions of the skilled painter are useless to prevent the cracking and peeling which make houses unsightly in a year or so and therefore, make painting bills too frequent and costly. House owner should have his painter bring the ingredients to the premises separately, white lead of some well known reliable brand and linseed oil of equal quality and mix the paint just before applying it. Painting need not be expensive and unsatisfactory if the old painter's suggestions are followed.

The University of Notre Dame, it appears, has some features that can not be duplicated in any other school. It is one of the old, well-established colleges, with settled traditions reaching back sixty-four years, with a distinguished staff of professors and excellent library and laboratory equipment. Its discipline is of the paternal kind—strong without being oppressive; and as it embraces in its scope the grammar school, high school and college work, its appeal is as broad as it is potent. Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the famous Indiana University, however, is the fact that it has arrived at its present marvelous development absolutely without endowment. An announcement of the courses provided at Notre Dame appears on another page.

A Question of Accommodation.

Senator Hoar used to tell the story of an incident he witnessed on a Boston street car. It was about 11 o'clock p. m., the mystic hour when all law abiding Bostonians lose their thirsts. The senator happened to notice a man running after the car and vainly trying to attract the conductor's attention. The senator notified the conductor, who stopped the car. The belated passenger, who was somewhat under the influence of liquor, had no sooner climbed aboard then he delivered himself of the following remarks. "Shay, Mr. Conductor, does thish road run to 'commodate the passengers, or the passengers run to 'commodate the road?"

A WINNING START.

Everything goes wrong if the breakfast lies in your stomach like a mud pie. What you eat does harm if you can't digest it—it turns to poison.

A bright lady teacher found this to be true, even of an ordinary light breakfast of eggs and toast. She says:

"Two years ago I contracted a very annoying form of indigestion. My stomach was in such a condition that a simple breakfast of fruit, toast and egg gave me great distress.

"I was slow to believe that trouble could come from such a simple diet but finally had to give it up, and found a great change upon a cup of hot Postum and Grape-Nuts with cream, for my morning meal. For more than a year I have held to this course and have not suffered except when injudiciously varying my diet.

"I have been a teacher for several years and find that my easily digested breakfast means a saving of nervous force for the entire day. My gain of ten pounds in weight also causes me to want to testify to the value of Grape-Nuts.

THE BOY WITH RED HAIR.

BY A. HARWARD.

From my couch by the window overlooking the street I see a good deal that goes on, though I have no part nor lot in the outer world. The years come and go, and I know that the seasons are passing, by the pledges they lavish, some of which reach even me in my prison-house of pain.

Perhaps it is because my vision is so limited, that I am always looking out for something young and attractive. It was this that led me first to notice the red-haired boy next door. Only his mother could have thought him handsome; but I found in the earnest face, notwithstanding snub nose and freckles, something decidedly attractive.

The boy was at the leggy stage, and looked about 18. He passed my house every day, and on one occasion I observed my niece, who lives with me, coming down the road at the same time. Heavy snow had fallen, and she was picking her steps daintily, her hands full of parcels. As she neared the gate the red-haired boy sprang forward and swung it open for her. Lettice paused to thank him in her gracious way. He grew scarlet to the roots of his hair as he stood cap in hand. Then she turned, and I heard her run lightly upstairs, singing as she went.

That night I questioned her about him. She laughed and shrugged her pretty shoulders.

"I know him well by sight. He goes to school still. I have heard that his people cannot induce him to make up his mind what he is going to be."

"You might bring him in some day, Lettie. I should like to talk to him."

She nodded and went to the piano. Music was a passion with both of us, and I looked forward to the evening hour in which she sang and played to me. As the winter weeks went on we were joined by a third, the lad Leonard Smith, whose simple enjoyment of that hour was a pleasure to witness.

Ah, well! I am an old fool—I might have known! Lettice was lovely with the loveliness of some delicate flower, and young blood flows fast. She smiled his heart away.

I knew the truth when I noted how his plan for the future varied. Did Lettice read out the news from the seat of war, her fair face glowing as she spoke of brave deeds, his would burn in response. He would be a soldier! Or a sailor's life had charms for him when she pictured the delights of visiting strange lands. And thus through every profession it was possible to follow. He would take each and all in turn, let but the light of those bright eyes lead the way.

I spoke to him one night about it. We were friends then, and I knew that he would listen.

"You are old enough now to decide, Leonard. Make up your mind, and stick to it."

"I can't." The boy's voice took a bitter tone. "I have told her I will be anything, everything she wishes, if she will but love me."

"But this is madness—folly! You are—how old? Eighteen? And Lettice is two-and-twenty! You cannot expect her to wait for you. And for what? You have nothing to offer her."

"I am 19, though I don't look it. Such marriages have been; and I will work, see if I don't. There is nothing I would not do to win her."

"Then try to cultivate a little self-control. Be a man, choose your path, and earn her respect. Some day, perhaps—who knows?—she may listen to you."

"If I thought that! Oh, how am I to be patient? How have you learnt it, lying there year after year? Did you never know what it was to want anything badly?"

I smiled. "I loved a woman once, Leonard, but she married some one else, and then I fell ill. It was all for the best, you see."

"She did not care?"

"I believed she did—that was my mistake. She played me false. It was Lettice's mother."

The boy clenched his fists.

"Lettice could not—could not!"

"Naturally," I responded, drily.

Lettice laughed when I remonstrated with her.

"But, meanwhile, cannot you do anything? He is wasting time. His mother is anxious."

"I will try."

The sweet, mobile face, whose counterpart some 30 years ago had well-nigh wrecked my own life, grew serious.

Mrs. Smith called soon after. She said her boy had told her of his friend, and she glanced tentatively at Lettice. That young lady was determined to show to advantage, and Leonard's mother went away obviously enchanted.

It was not long before she pleaded with Lettice.

"It will be the making of my boy. You have such influence over him. He is our only son, but we do not want to keep him idling at home. He may do as he will, if he will only do something."

Then Lettice, I presume, threw a straw or two of hope to her admirer. He rose triumphantly upon the sea of his desires, and one day they came to me—Leonard ardent, and, for the moment, positively handsome, Lettice blushing and a trifle nervous. The lad kissed the little hand he held as he vowed to become worthy of it.

When winter came again they parted, for Leonard had accepted a berth abroad. True to his word, the lad never murmured at his exile, but put on a brave face as he sunned himself in his lady's smiles on those last evenings.

I suffered much that winter. My old friend, Ronald Pleydell—a celebrated person in the medical world—came down to prescribe for me. Lettice had been a child when he saw her last, and they talked of the days when he gave her sugar-plums and she sat upon his knee. When I was better, Lettice went to spend a few weeks with Mrs. Pleydell in town. Her visit lengthened into summer. I missed her much, but knew that I could not chain my bright bird. In those lonely days of spring and summer my thoughts were often with the lad beyond the seas; how bright a companion he would have been—how cheery his laugh and fresh young face, so good to look upon!

In September my niece came home one day. Mrs. Pleydell had died suddenly. As she told me the news, Lettice flushed and paled by turns. I grieved for my old friend's loss, and wrote him a letter of condolence. In reply, he volunteered a visit when winter should have advanced; and my former complaint victimizing me once more, I was thankful for his treatment. He came every week, and Lettice, who had few friends, seemed pleased to see him, too.

But one day, when she had accompanied him back to the station, I heard my neighbor's gate click in a familiar manner. Surely no hand but Leonard's ever opened it thus. I raised myself upon my elbow and looked out, too late to distinguish more than the outline of a head.

A step upon the stair, a young, rapid step, and the door was burst open.

"Leonard!"

"Uncle Harry, I've come home again."

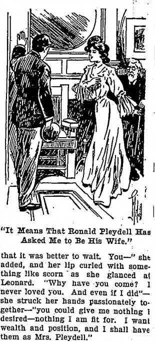
"Welcome, my boy. But how unexpected! What has brought you?"

"This!" He thrust a letter into my hand. Then he drew back. "No, I cannot let even you read it. It is from Lettice, Uncle Harry! She has given me up."

He bent his head upon his hands, and a sob broke from him.

"What does it all mean?" I said.

"It means—" Lettice stood between us. She was pale to the lips, but there was an ominous flash in her eye. "It means that Ronald Pleydell has asked me to be his wife. I should have told you before, Uncle Harry, but we agreed that it was better to wait. You—" she added, and her lip curled with something like scorn as she glanced at Leonard. "Why have you come? I never loved you. And even if I did"—she struck her hands passionately together—"you could give me nothing I desired—nothing I am fit for. I want wealth and position, and I shall have them as Mrs. Pleydell."



"It Means That Ronald Pleydell Has Asked Me to Be His Wife."

"You should have thought of it before," I said. I seemed to see again the form of another Lettice, just as fair and just as cruel, telling me that poverty was not to be endured.

Leonard had risen. But he could not speak. With a low bow to Lettice, and a convulsive pressure of the hand I held out to him, he left the room.

Six months later Ronald and Mrs Pleydell started for an European trip. Lettice had doubtless given Ronald her own version of her acquaintance with Leonard Smith. He seemed satisfied with it, and the radiant young wife apparently had no regrets. When they had gone, Leonard came over to bid me good-by. He was to sail on the morrow.

"So that chapter is closed," he said.

I watched him anxiously. His trouble had made a man of him. He would always be plain, but his earnest, pleasant face was one in which a woman, loving him, would find her pride and peace. Answering my look, he smiled reassuringly as he strolled to the window. A favorite pensioner of mine, a starling with a broken wing, was chirruping on the sill. Faint lines of scarlet showed against the pearl-gray sky. As a curtain, the night was falling.

"To-day is over," said Leonard. "But there is always to-morrow."

MR. GREEN WENT TO WORK

Veteran Colored Laborer Knew His Rights in the Situation and Meant to Have Them.

In connection with any great municipal improvement much interest always attaches to the ceremony of lifting the first spadeful of earth, laying the factory task of putting in place the final trowel of plaster and the last brick. The new Virginia avenue and the last part of the Pennsylvania railroads share in the project for the elimination of a grade crossings within the city, was completed a short time ago, and the formal finishing touch to the contract fell to the lot of Mr. Green, a veteran colored laborer. Mr. Green is a character known by every foreman for the big contracting firm, and he assumed the task of putting in the last brick of the tunnel as though it was his by right.

Mr. Green, so the story runs, came into the work on the Virginia avenue tunnel in a truly characterisitic way. It seems that Johnathan Wainwright, Jr., son of the president of the company, was in active supervision of the work, and he did not know Mr. Green. One day the latter appeared at the office and to Mr. Wainwright said:

"Say, boss, where's my room? I'se come to work."

"What," replied the superintendent, fairly taken aback by the aged laborer's statement.

"Get out," Mr. Wainwright answered, more than half angry at the seeming imprudence, "I have no place for you. We don't need any more men."

"Go on, now, young man, I knowed your father and mother long befo' you was born and if you don't find a place fo' me right away I'll have you discharged. You just run along and find me a bed and I'm goin' to work."

And Mr. Green went to work, and that he stayed to the finish is obvious from the statement that he laid the last brick.—Washington Star.

SECRETARY HAS A PUZZLE.

Officials of the government departments receive many interesting communications which have nothing whatever to do with official business. The senders are often obscure persons who have something smart to say or something queer to show, and who in many cases do not give their addresses.

Secretary Hitchcock of the interior department received what appeared to be a belated valentine from a man who gave no address. It was homemade, painted upon an ordinary sheet of foolscap paper. The design was elaborate and the colors gaudy. In spite of the gaudiness, however, it was not of the comic variety, but rather of that kind which makes you think of little angels and birds and pretty flowers—in fact, it was nearer a Christmas card than a valentine.

What purported to be a verse was on the bottom. It referred to the seriousness of life and stated that all must die, or something equally as profound as that.

The secretary turned it over to his private secretary, Mr. Scott Smith, and the latter handed it to his stenographer with instructions to frame a suitable reply. Miss Macfarland, the stenographer, is still considering what to do about it.

Post Office Statistics.

Sentiment may find special interest in the current report of the postmaster general, for we are celebrating the two hundredth anniversaary of the birth of Franklin, who was deputy postmaster general of the British colonies in America. At the time of Franklin's death, 1790, there were 75 post offices in this country. To-day there are 68,000. Then the receipts were less than $40,000. Last year they were $150,000,000.

The number of people employed by the post office department is nearly 300,000—equal to the working population of a great city—and the number of employes and of all agents and means for distributing mail mounts faster in proportion than the receipts.

The postmaster general touches on many suggested improvements, such as the reduction of certain rates of postage, the parcels post and postal savings depositories, but he recommends that attention be paid not so much to possible additions to the service as to the improvement of the kinds of service already established. The principal change that he recommends is the merging of third-class matter—unsealed printed matter—and of fourth-class—unsealed merchandise—into one class at one cent for two ounces.—Youth's Companion.

Some Interesting Experiments.

Secretary Wilson has known for some time of the demand for such a fowl, and he has directed his experts to get busy and work out the problem. Assistant Secretary Hays, who is responsible for the campaign that is now being made to improve the human species, is taking great interest in the experiments now under way, with a view to producing a featherless hen.

Another experiment is being made at the department that will be followed with great anxiety. Efforts are making to graft the milk weed on the coffee plant for the purpose of evolving a herb that will yield cafe au lait.—Exchange.

Ely says: "I contracted kidney trouble during the Civil War, and the occasional attacks finally developed into a chronic case. At one time I had to use a crutch and cane to get about. My back was lame and weak, and besides the aching, there was a distressing retention of the kidney secretions. I was in a bad way when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills in 1901, but the remedy cured me, and I have been well ever since."

One afternoon while appraising a lot of furniture for a woman her little girl, four or five years of age, was rather noisy, and irritated Mr. Whittier. He finally said to her: "My little girl, what does your mother do to punish you when you are naughty?"

"For a long time I suffered with sores on the hands which were itching, painful and disagreeable. I had three doctors, and derived no benefit from any of them. One doctor said he was afraid to touch my hands, so you must know how bad they were; another said I never could be cured; and the third said the sores were caused by the dipping of my hands in water in the dye-house where I work. I saw in the papers about the wonderful cures of the Cuticura Remedies and procured some of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. In three days after the application of the Cuticura Ointment my hands began to peel and were better. DO YOU KNOW

That all the world seeks the man who knows how.

That a poor excuse is a whole lot worse than none at all.

That a poor excuse is a whole lot worse than none at all.

That we are all vegetarians—if it is true that all flesh is grass.

That one of the best ways to keep a diary is under lock and key.

That there is no place like home after all—particularly after all.

That it is the man with the horse sense who knows when to say "neigh".

That the more children a woman has, the fewer theories she has about raising them.

That the world may owe every man a living but some men are awful poor collectors.

That it is probably the proper thing to mind one's own business but it's beastly monotonous.

That too many people spend their time looking for the silver lining every cloud is said to have.

That if praparations for shooting, already begun, mean anything, there wont be enough chickens left in this vicinity when the season closes to flag a meat wagon with.

That a news item in a southern paper says: "Mrs. Mary Smith is going about after a short illness." It would be interesting to know if she ever meets up with it.

That

Little streams of seltzer
Little lumps of ice,
Colored up with "black and white"
Makes a man see twice—Ex.

That Senator Clapp spoke at the fair at Thief River Falls. Among other things he said: "you should be immensly gratified at the large delegation and splendid band, your sister city, Red Lake Falls, has sent here today and if opportunity ever offers, you should recipocate by going down there in a body." The Senator must have been surprised at the enthusiasm his remark failed to create.

That the small boy is a natural outspoken musical critic and an instance of it occured in Thief River Falls last week; the Red Lake Falls band had gone and the Warren band arrived; the latter lined up for a concert, played a piece, the listeners applauded in a desultory fashion and all became quiet. When it was quietest some urchin piped up: "say youse guys cant play, you ought to hear the Red Lake Falls band.

That a country paper up state tells of a justice of peace who was called upon to perform a marriage ceremony. It was his first attempt and he was at loss how to proceed, but he rose to the occasion. He commanded the happy couple to stand up and be sworn as follows: "Do you solemnly swear that you will obey the constitution of the United States and the great state of Minnesota and perform the duty of your office so help you God?" The pair nodded assent and the judge continued: "Then by the power in me vested by the strong arm of the law, I pronounce you man and wife, now henceforth and forever, and you will stand committed until the fine and the costs are paid, and Lord have mercy on your souls."

That a Kansas girl graduate to whom had been assigned the theme "Beyond the Alps lies Italy," wrote this essay: "I don't care a cent whether Italy lies beyond the Alps or Missouri. I do not expect to set the river on fire with my future career. I am glad that I have a very good education, but I am not going to misuse it by writing poetry or essays on the future woman. It will come in handy when I want to figure out how many pounds of soap a woman could get for three dozen eggs at the grocery, so I do not begrudge the time I spent in acquiring it. I just want to marry a man who can lick anyone of his weight in the township: who can run an eighty-acre farm, and has no female relatives to come around and try to boss the ranch. I will cook dinners for him that will not send him to an early grave, and lavish upon him a wholesome affection and see that his razor has not been used to cut broom wire when he wants to shave. In view of this I do not care if I get a little rusty on the rule of three as the years go by."

THE BEST FAIR OF ALL

The Minnesota State Fair of 1906 now promises to be the most significant occasion in the history of agriculture in the northwest.

The great livestock amphitheater which will be opened and dedicated on Monday Sept. 3, the opening day of the fair, stands for diversified agriculture interests in the northwest and shows the importance of the live stock industry as a factor in the agricultureal life of this region. It is the finest and largest livestock amphitheater of all the buildings in the country devoted to its uses. It means in a way that Minnesota is going to be one of the greatest livestock states in the Union. It means too that the work of the Minnesota State Fair of past years has borne fruit—that the state is already one of the leaders in the breeding of fine cattle.

The latter fact is emphasized too in the sale of shorthorn cattle during the fair. A large proportion of the animals to be offered for sale are from Minnesota farms—and the others from farms in Iowa, Wisconsin and the Dakotas not far away.

James J. Hill a lifelong patron of husbandry and especially of livestock breeding, is to make the address of dedication at 11 o'clock on Monday Opening day. Mr. Hill is always an interesting speaker and on this occasion is likely to outdo himself as the time and occasion are of very great personal interest to him.

Late reports from the fair grounds show that the fair will be larger than ever in all the matters of exhibits, animals, etc.

In the farm machinery division every foot of space is taken—this means the largest farm implement and machinery exhibit ever made at any time or place.

The opening of the new livestock amphitheater naturally attracts a large showing of animals. There will be three great auction sales of purebred stock. Swine will require extra room although the great swine exhibition building is the largest in the world.

On the amusement side the fair will be exceptionally strong. Programs before the grandstand will be given both afternoon and evening high-class racing being a prominent feature with clean and novel vaudeville, specialties, baloon ascensions, etc., as prominent features. A six days' Ladies' Relay Riding race will be one of the popular events. "Moscow" will be burned in pyrotechnics each evening.

On Mondav Dan Patch and Cresceus will go against their own world's records—an event of intense and entirely unusual interest.

LABOR DAY PROCLAIMED

Gov. J. A. Johnson has issued the following proclamation naming Sept. 3 as Labor day:

"Acting upon the authority conferred upon me as executive of the state, I do hereby proclaim as Labor day, Monday, Sept. 3, 1906, and request a general observance of this great holiday, established in just recognition of all who toil.

"That the legislatures of the state have set aside one day in each year when labor shall lay aside its vocations and meet to discuss problems of vital interest to the body politic is cause for congratulation. Only in free and fair discussion, earnest yet dispassionate, can labor and capital find that common ground that is essential to the prosperity and happiness of all.

"Labor in this country has attained a dignity that is second to no service. Its strength and virility are vertabrae in the nation's spinal column. Its problems are identical with those of the country and their settlements can measurably be hastened by the proper observance of Labor day and a fair and earnest effort at mutual recognition and conciliation between organized labor and organized capital. Both apparently are institutions that will endure as long as the republic shall last, and it is to be hoped that a better understanding will come out of successive observances incident to this day.

—JOHN A. JOHNSON,
"Governor."

MENTOR BANK IS ROBBED

At 20 minutes to 3 o'clock Tuesday morning burglars entered the Bank of Mentor, opening both the rear and front doors and blowing the vault and safe doors off with dynamite secured every cent of cash in the bank, $1200 and made good their escape without leaving a trace of any description.

A man sleeping in an adjoining building heard the burglars at work but having no gun or weapon of any kind made no outcry till after the robbers had left the building after which he notified Jos. Tagley; and an investigation was started but availed nothing further than the fact that the robbers had taken all the money in the bank but had disturbed none of the papers.

The bank was not injured in any way the only damage being to the doors of the safe which are badly twisted up and will have to be shipped off for repairs.

The thieves were cunning in having first cut the telephone wires and also severed the rope attached to the fire bell, thus preventing any alarm being turned in hurriedly. Nothing is known as to the number of robbers implicated, but there must have been at last two or three as $800 of the money taken was silver and it would requise a buggy or good saddles to lug off that amount. The other $300 was paper and gold.

A long distance message this after noon from Dugdale states that Camp's store at that place was broken into Monday night. The thieves broke open one of the glass doors of the store and opened the money drawer, getting away with about $55 in change. From the work of the burglars it is evident that they were amateurs and that they were acquainted with the store. This is the second time that this store has been broken into this summer and the third time within a year—Crookston Times.

INDIAN TEAM STRANDED

Have Streak of Hard Luck—Abandoned by Manager.

Of the Sioux Indian baseball team that will be remembered as playing in this city a short time ago, a telegram from Willmar to the city papers tells the following sad tale:

Six members of the Indian ball team that has been playing in northwestern towns during the season passed thru Willmar Thursday enroute for their homes in Indian Territory.

They suffered the loss of their outfit and pharaphernalia in a wreck near Rugby N. D., and the manager Harry Homewood, boarded the next train and left his team without making any provision for their return and without money. Between them they raised the wherewithal to carry six of them as far as Kansas City, but two were obliged to remain to work in the harvest long enough to raise enough money to carry them home.

Although advertised as Sioux, there was not a Dakota in the team. There were representatives of the Senecas, Pottawattamies and Cherokees. The eyes of the red men flashed as they spoke of the treatment given them by their manager.

WOMEN MAY VOTE AT THE PRIMARIES

Attorney General Young Doesn't Know Whether It Is Legal Or Not.

But Says Give Them Separate Ballot Boxes and Let Them Go to It.

Following is the attorney general's opinion as to the right of women to vote for superintendent of schools at the primary election:

The right of women to vote at the primaries for the nomination of school superintendents, has been the subject of much recent controversy. There never was any question but that the right ought to be given by law.

I advised the State Superintendent some time ago, in answer to an inquiry on the subject, that in my opinion under the present law, such right was not given. Many able attorneys think, however, that whatever is deficient in the statute in this regard ought, in construing it, to be supplied by intendment, so that the right to assist in making such nominations would not be denied to women. The question is not free from doubt. The law is so worded that impartial students of statutory construction might reach different conclusions upon it. As the question is important, I feel that no false pride of opinion should be permitted to stand in the way of substantial justice.

A prominent attorney prudently suggests that, if the votes of women should be refused at the coming primary and the courts should ultimately decided that they had a right to vote, very serious wrong would result. On the contrary, if the votes of the women should be received and kept separate, so that the exact number of votes cast by women, for whom cast, could be readily ascertained in case of a contest, no serious harm could result, as such votes could, in such case be rejected if judicially determined to be illegal. and the result of the primaries still be ascertainable.

I have therefore concluded, under the circumstances, for the reasons stated, to recommend, that the votes of women be received at the coming primary, using sebarate ballots and separate boxes, so that if, after the election, any interested party desires to take the question into the courts it can be conveniently done.

E. T. Young,
Attorney General.

Artificial Ice Cream

There is no further need for ice with which to make the delicious palate-tickler so dear to the youthful heart. Some wise person has devised a way to make ice cream without the use of ice or cream. The principle ingredient is cottonseed oil made into an emulsion in a centrifugal machine rotating three thousand times per minute. This looks rather like a case for the pure food law, but as the mixture will probably be called, for advertising purposes, "cottonnitrobenzolina," it will not be affected by the law. Nothing can take place of golden grain belt beer in the home. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Your meals will always taste better if you smoke an "I Lead" afterward.

EMPEROR TAKES REMARKABLE STEP

SITUATION IS VERY SERIOUS

CONTINUED REVOLUTIONARY AGITATION BRINGS REPRESSIVE MEASURES.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 16.—In view of the representations of the foreign mining interests in the Donets Basin with regard to the seriousness of the situation at Uzovka and elsewhere, the government has erected the whole coal and iron district affected into a special general governorship in order to be the better able to control the situation, and has taken the unprecedented step of creating a special advisory commission of mining representatives to act in concert with the new official of the district. His jurisdiction embraces Yekaterinoslav province, the southern part of Kharkov and parts of the Don Kossack territory.

The step is comparable to the creation of the much abused "Satrapien" to deal with agrarian disorders in Central Russia last autumn, of which the assassinated Gen. Sakharoff was one of the governors, and indicates that the government considers the situation to be equally serious. Disorders and collisions with troops continue. At Uzovka a meeting yesterday was dispersed by Cossack whips.

Keep Off the Streets.

On account of attempts to continue revolutionary agitation at Cronstadt, Commandant Adlerberg yesterday published an order forbidding the use of the streets after midnight except to pass on, closing restaurants and saloons at 10 o'clock and forbidding altogether the sale of liquor on Sundays and holidays. Adlerberg, who was promoted to a lieutenant generalship as a reward for the suppression of the mutiny, has issued an order quoting the emperor's personal telegram of commendation and thanking from the depths of his heart all, from general to private, by whose co-operation he was enabled to gain such a signal honor.

Seizures Are Important.

The authorities attach great importance to the capture of revolutionists at Moscow and in that vicinity during the last few days. They believe they have broken up the headquarters of the military fighting organization and arrested the leaders.

In addition to seizing their clandestine printing establishment and a large supply of bombs and explosives, including Shimose powder, the authorities secured elaborate plans to be used in the event of an uprising.

Don't Fire on Peasants.

Gov. Gen. Kaulbars of Odessa yesterday issued an edict decreeing that employers indemnifying strikers for days the latter had been on strike would henceforth incur penalties for so doing, including the closing of their factories.

The same edict enjoins the inhabitants from whom money has been extorted under threat of assassination, to report the facts to the police, failing which they will be considered to be protectors of anarchists.

Reports from the southern and southwestern parts of the interior testify to the spreading of peasant disorders. Reports of only about one-tenth of the number of outrages reach the press. The troops passively obey all other orders, but refuse to fire on the peasants.

Despite the attempt on the life of the Grand Duke Nicholas on Aug. 10 at Krasnoye-Selo, the emperor, accompanied by his entire family and the major portion of the court, has gone to Krasnoye-Selo to spend a week at the guards' camp. Six additional guard regiments have gone to the camp from St. Petersburg and the most rigid precautions have been taken to protect the safety of the emperor during his stay at Krasnoye-Selo.

Collateral Stolen.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—The belief that large amounts of collateral, given as security for notes in the Milwaukee Avenue State bank have been stolen practically became a certainty last night when a note for $9,000, known to be genuine, was found in President Stensland's house at Byron street and Lawndale avenue. Search was made for the collateral security, but it could not be found.

Embezzlement Charged.

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—A warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of William H. Vice, formerly coast passenger agent for the Union Pacific road. Three years ago Vice disappeared and an indictment charging him with the embezzlement of $10,000 was returned by the grand jury. It is said by the police that Vice went to Honduras and that following the conflagration of April last he returned here, believing that the indictment against him had been burned.

BLACK HAND CASE AT BALTIMORE

THREE ITALIANS ARRESTED FOR COMPLICITY IN THE AFFAIR.

Baltimore, Aug. 16.—An alleged "Black Hand" case, which had its inception about two months ago, culminated yesterday in the arrest of three men, charged with complicity in the affair, and the holding of two of them in $10,000 each for the action of the criminal court.

A number of letters, one signed by "The Mafia Association," and the others by "The Head of the Black Hand Company," have recently been received by members of the family of Michael Lanasa, each of them demanding $5,000. Some of these letters have been delivered by Rosarto Romo, it is charged, and some have passed through the mails.

Threatened With Death.

One of the letters received threatened the Lanasa family with death if the money demanded was not forthcoming. By Romo Mrs. Lanasa sent a reply which resulted in a call upon her by Igazio Castellano, aged twenty-three years, who demanded the money. Mr. Lanasa called a policeman, who captured Castellano after a chase. He said that he had just arrived here from New York and that he had been induced to come here and call upon Mrs. Lanasa by four New Yorkers, whose names he gave as Collogario Tony, Stefano and Joseph.

Acted as Messenger.

Romo claims to have been merely employed to deliver some of the threatening letters, without knowledge of their contents, by men unknown to him. Frank Porcelli, aged thirty, suspected of giving information to principals in the affair, was arrested, but later released.

Romo and Castellano were held.

Makes More Arrests.

At an early hour this morning the police made four more arrests, Joseph Roffo, aged thirty-six years, a butcher; Vito Altovovia, aged thirty-four; Jiovavin Altovovia, aged eighteen, and Ametta G. Vattison, aged twenty-two, the last named, Roffo's clerk, being taken into custody on the same charges upon which Castellano and Romo are held. The police believe that in Roffo they have the chief of the gang.

WELCOME ROOT IN THE RAIN.

Heavy Downpour Does Not Dampen Greeting at Buenos Ayres.

Buenos Ayres, Aug. 16.—Despite a heavy downpour of rain, immense crowds assembled at the docks yesterday morning to witness the arrival of Secretary of State Root and his party, who were received by the ministers of marine and foreign affairs, accompanied by Mr. Beaupre, the American minister, and his secretary. The visitors were heartily cheered along the line of route to the palatial residence in the Avenue Alvaar, placed at their disposal by Dr. Llobet, which was crowded with spectators. The streets and almost every house were decorated with American flags.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mr. Root was conducted to Government House, escorted by the Eighth regiment for an official reception by President Alcorta, who formally returned the secretary's visit at 5 o'clock.

In his conversation with President Alcorta, Mr. Root expressed his pleasure at the warmth of the reception tendered him and his admiration for the city, which in many respects, he said, was similar to the upper part of New York city.

Last night at 8:30 o'clock Mr. Root and his party arrived at Government House for an official banquet given by the president and to which the diplomatic corps and high officers of state only were invited. The scene was most brilliant, the staircase and banqueting hall presenting a picture of great splendor. The streets and public squares of the city were a mass of electric illuminations.

CHARGED WITH PEONAGE.

Columbus, Ga., Aug. 16.—A. Q Campbell, superintendent; A. L. Bradshaw, general foreman; J. D. McElroy and J. Eason, foremen, and William Matthews, commissary of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic railroad, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Nathan A. Brown here yesterday on a charge of peonage.

The complainants in the case are a party of laborers who were brought from New York about six months ago. The men claim they were told that they would be put on the chain gang if they did not work long enough to pay their transportation expenses. One witness said he saw a man whipped in camp because he would not work. The contractors say the charges are untrue.

Negro Runs Train.

Decatur, Ala., Aug. 16.—A Louisville & Nashville freight train reached here from Birmingham yesterday practically under the control of a desperate negro. At the point of two revolvers the trainmen were compelled to obey the negro's instruction as to where the train should stop and at what speed the engineer should regulate his engine, from Newcastle to this place, a distance of sixty-five miles. He sent the train through to New Decatur, where by a ruse the train was run into the shop yard.

VALPARAISO IN RUINS; HUNDREDS OF LIVES LOST

BUILDINGS WRECKED BY EARTHQUAKE, AND FLAMES SWEEP THE CITY.

SANTIAGO MAY BE IN RUINS

FEARED THAT FATE OF CAPITAL IS AS BAD OR WORSE THAN VALPARAISO.

WILD PANIC PREVAILS IN CHILE

GREAT DAMAGE REPORTED FROM OTHER TOWNS—EQUALS SAN FRANCISCO DISASTER.

Valparaiso, Chile, Friday, via Galveston, Tex.—Without the slightest tremor of warning, an earthquake visited this city at 8 o'clock last night, bringing instant death to hundreds of persons and leaving many hundreds more imprisoned in the ruins, many of whom were burned to death before aid could reach them.

Fire started immediately after the first shock and every branch of the city's service was paralyzed. Panic and consternation indescribable followed and those who escaped death and injury became frenzied with fear and could render little assistance to the victims.

Horrors Like Frisco's.

The business section of the city is almost entirely destroyed, and fires are still raging. We are suffering here a repetition of the horrors of San Francisco.

As night comes on the city is everywhere aglow with unobstructed fires, and clouds of choking smoke and vapor settle into the streets and houses where throngs of homeless ones are wandering about, crazed by the awful calamity.

Santiago May Be Ruined.

It is impossible to ascertain how wide an area of country the visitation has laid waste. Nothing has been heard from Santiago, the capital city of Chile, and it is feared that the fate of that city is as bad or worse than that of Valparaiso.

Telegraphic communication is cut off in every direction, and every one here is too much depressed by the calamity at home to seek information of other places.

No trains have arrived in the city or left it since the first shock came, as all the tunnels are filled and the rails twisted. It is only known from general accounts that death and destruction are on all sides.

Buildings Topple Down.

There were two distinct and terrific shocks, the second one following almost instantly after the first and completing the work of destruction. The day had been unusually pleasant. At 8 o'clock the whole city seemed suddenly to swing backward and forward and then came a sudden jolt of such mighty force that rows of buildings toppled to the earth as if made of brittle plaster. Whole rows of buildings went down in a few seconds.

Soon after the second shock had subsided it became known that the business part of the town was doomed. From the Bellavista section little was heard, but before midnight fires were seen burning there, and it was learned that that section of the city also was doomed.

Are Pitched Forward.

The city stands upon a formation of granite gneiss, which seemed to accentuate the force of the shock. Before the stunned people were given time to realize the magnitude of the calamity, again the city was shaken with a violence greater than before. The earth in places lifted and pitched the buildings forward. In other places there was a terrible tremor that shook every structure to the ground. This shock continued longer than the first.

When it had subsided fires were blazing up, and thousands of terrified persons were praying, and panic swept the city.

Landslides Cost Lives.

Many landslides have occurred around the city, and scores of lives have been lost. At present it is impossible to state the number of dead in the entire city, but it is believed that there are several hundred, many of whom are still in the ruins.

It has laid waste the best part of the business portion of the city and has doubtless put Chile back many years in the scale of civilization and commercial progress.

City of Valparaiso.

Valparaiso is a fortified seaport of Chile and the most important commercial town of the western coast of South America. It has a population of about 150,000. It is the capital of a province of the same name, and is situated on a large bay in the Pacific ocean, seventy-five miles west-northwest of Santiago, with which it is connected by rail.

FIFTY ARE ENTOMBED ALIVE

CAVE-IN OCCURS IN THE CLINCH MOUNTAIN TUNNEL IN VIRGINIA.

Bristol, Va., Aug. 19.—Fifty men are entombed alive in the Clinch mountain tunnel at Clinchport, Va., as a result of a cave-in which occurred yesterday. It is not known whether the men are dead or alive, but the work of rescue is being rushed as fast as possible. Air is being pumped in the tunnel by several pumps for a distance of 700 feet, and a large force of men are working in an effort to rescue the unfortunates before they perish, if they are not already dead.

The cave-in occurred unexpectedly, and it is not known who is responsible.

The men entombed are chiefly natives of that mountainous section of Southwest Virginia, and the excitement and anxiety is intense. Men, women and children last night were at the mouth of the tunnel, awaiting news of those dear to them, inside, and pitiable scenes were enacted.

The work of rescue will continue as rapidly as possible. No bodies have as yet been recovered.

WILL NOT WITHDRAW NEGROES.

Both Parties at Brownsville, Tex., Believe Attack Imminent.

Brownsville, Tex., Aug. 19.—With both parties prepared for an attack and each believing it to be imminent, there were no special developments yesterday in the situation growing out of the recent trouble between the negro troops and the citizens of this place. The citizens' committee has been advised that the troops will not be withdrawn pending an investigation and that state troops will not be sent here. Judge James B. Wells, whose word is practically law along the border, is on his way home now, and when he arrives it is probable that there will be some move made to relieve the tension. He has secured a promise from Senator Bailey to go at once to Washington to endeavor to secure the removal of the negroes.

COSSACKS PUT TO FLIGHT BY MOB

PEASANTS FIGHT MORE LIKE WILD ANIMALS THAN HUMAN BEINGS.

WHOLESALE MURDER GOES ON

THE MOB, ARMED WITH SCYTHES, CHARGES TROOPS IN RAIN OF BULLETS.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 19.—At the headquarters of the gendarmerie here intelligence was received yesterday of another collision between Cossacks and peasantry in the province of Penza. In this affair the mob showed such determination and fury that the troops were forced to retreat, carrying off several of their number badly wounded. Five of the peasants were killed and several score wounded.

A detachment of thirty Cossacks had been dispatched from the town of Penza to a neighboring village to arrest two agitators. The villagers sounded the tocsin on the church bell, whereupon a crowd of 500 peasants, and other rustic weapons, gathered and advanced to the rescue of the prisoners. Undaunted by the Cossacks' whips and sabers, the peasants charged and forced the Cossacks to take refuge behind a stone wall. A volley from the carbines of the Cossacks failed to check the peasants, and finally the Cossacks were obliged to flee. The peasants are reported to have fought more like wild animals than human beings. In their fury they seized a priest who was hurrying up to assist the wounded and beat him almost to death before the wife of a sick peasant whom he had aided recognized him and intervened.

Armed With Scythes

There is every reason to believe, however, that the estimates do not fall wide of the mark.

WILD SCENES ON EXCHANGE

New York, Aug. 19.—Amid scenes of frantic trading on the Stock exchange, Union Pacific common stock rushed upward 17 1-8 points a share and that of Southern Pacific 6 7-8 points yesterday, after an announcement of dividends far in excess of what the traders had any reason to expect. The result was that a large number of traders who had sold the stock short suffered sharp losses, and, according to an estimate reported by the Evening Post, a pool in Union Pacific stock realized profits amounting to $15,000,000 and a similar pool in Southern Pacific $10,000,000.

Notwithstanding the meeting of the executive committees of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific roads in this city Thursday, the bulk of the brokers were totally unprepared for the announcement of dividends which was made public soon after the opening of yesterday's market. The dividends were: Union Pacific preferred, 2 per cent, semi-annual; common, 5 per cent, semi-annual; Southern Pacific common, 2 1-2 per cent, semi-annual. Union Pacific common heretofore paid 3 per cent, and yesterday's dividend was the first ever declared on the Southern Pacific common.

SARATOGA GETS NEXT G. A. R.

Sends Protest Against Wirz Statue—Canteen Question Dropped.

Minneapolis, Aug. 19.—The Grand Army of the Republic completed its fortieth encampment late yesterday and adjourned to meet in Saratoga, N. Y., in 1907.

The encampment, after an exciting debate, decided that a protest against the erection of a statue to Henry Wirz should be sent to Gen. S. D. Lee, the commander of the Southern Veterans' association. This action was decided upon only after a long debate, which at times became energetic and acrimonious.

Greetings were received during the day from President Roosevelt and from various patriotic societies, among which were the Spanish War veterans and the John H. Morgan association, an association of Confederate soldiers.

The adjournment was taken immediately after the installation of the newly elected officers by Past Commander Louis Wagner of Philadelphia.

DR. APPLEBY LOSES WILL CASE.

District Court Sustains Findings of Probate Judge.

St. Paul, Aug. 19.—Judge Hallam yesterday filed his decision in the district court in the matter of the appeal of Dr. T. E. W. Villiers Appleby from the decree of the probate court, upholding the will of Mrs. Cornelia Day Wilder Appleby, and also from the final decree allowing the accounts of the executors of the estate of Mrs. Appleby and Mrs. Fanny S. Wilder.

The judment of the probate court is affirmed in both cases.

The court finds that the bequest for the benefit of the "worthy poor of St. Paul" does not constitute a trust, but that it is a gift absolute to a corporation to be formed under the laws of Minnesota. A similar provision in the will of Mrs. Wilder was upheld by the supreme court, and Judge Hallam says that there is no substantial difference between the words employed in the two wills in this respect.

The case will be appealed to the supreme court and a stay of twenty days has been granted by Judge Hallam.

MRS. J. J. ASTOR.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who has gone to recuperate on the Isle of Mull, Scotland, had amazing success as a curio collector in the old shops of Holsbern just before she left London. Her best bargain was a twisted knot of gold, which plainly was used last as a pendant on a watch chain, for which she paid $25. Afterward, when she examined the purchase more closely, Mrs. Astor was delighted to find it a duplicate of "the lucky knot," or mascot, which Queen Alexandra owns. Touch a hidden spring and the knot opens, revealing in its cavity a rough emerald. On this stone, in characters so minute that they are legible only through a magnifying glass, is engraved: "A Vour pour la vie." (Yours for life).

Mr. City Boarder was being entertained by his rural sweetheart.

"Do you play and sing 'When the Cows are in the Corn,' Miss Milkyweigh?"

"They are having an engagement dinner at the Browns' to-night."

"Who is engaged?"

"A new cook."—Judge.

More Agreeable.

"I wonder why Miss Sweet is always asked to sing. Her voice isn't nearly so well trained as Miss Stickler's is."

"No, but her manners are. Miss Sweet is always willing to try her luck without being urged for half an hour."

Cholly—Get any deer?

Algy—No, but the guide wore sleigh bells and carried a megaphone, so I didn't hit him.

NEWS OF THE Northwest.

G. A. R. RECEPTION IN ST. PAUL

NEW CAPITOL HANDSOMELY DECORATED IN HONOR OF THE VETERANS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 15.—The rush of visitors to this city for the annual encampment of the G. A. R. continues unabated, and the present prospect is that the meeting will be one of the most successful ever held by the Grand Army. According to the estimates of railroad men fully 150,000 people have so far arrived, about half of whom are staying in St. Paul, and dozens of train running in two and three sections are still on the way.

Minneapolis and St. Paul have risen to the occasion in magnificent fashion, and it is difficult to mention anything that could be done for the entertainment and comfort of the visitors which has not already been provided.

Care of the Veterans.

Numerous committees have been appointed to receive the visitors at the depots, and a man has but to mention who he is and to declare his desires. The remainder of the program is handled by a committee in the most capable fashion. At nearly every corner in the business section of the city is situated an "information booth," which is tenanted by a young man of education who knows his business and is capable of answering all sorts of questions in a satisfactory manner.

Decked in Bunting.

Minneapolis is decorated as though every man had made it his personal business to see that the city looked her bravest and best. Flags and bunting are everywhere from roofs to sidewalks and banners are swung in endless profusion across the streets.

Reception in St. Paul.

The social features of the encampment, which are numbered by the hundred, commenced yesterday with regimental reunions and a reception given by Gov. Johnson at the new capitol in St. Paul to the visiting veterans. The building, which was especially decorated with bunting and electricity for the event, produced a beautiful appearance. In the receiving line, by the side of Gov. Johnson, stood Commander Tanner and other notables of the state and of the Grand Army.

E. V. Tilden, of Antelope county, Nebraska, an old soldier, died yesterday of fatigue induced by the journey from his home.

The programme for to-day consists largely of receptions and business meetings by numerous affiliated societies and reunions of various regiments.

TO TEST MEDICAL LAW.

Aberdeen, S. D., Aug. 15.—Dr. H. E. McNutt, secretary of the state board of medical examiners, has caused the arrest of A. H. Bruing, a practitioner of chiropractic healing, on the charge of violating the state medical law. The specific charge is that he treated persons by use of an agency for compensation, without having first procured a state license, in accordance with the law of 1903. A jury trial has been demanded by the defendant. It is the intention, whether or not a conviction is secured, to carry the case to the supreme court for a final decision.

MAKES SHROUD OF SHEET.

Des Moines Merchant, Despondent, Asphyxiates Himself.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 15.—Wrapping a sheet about him so that its folds made a perfect shroud, J. W. Brown, an East Des Moines commission merchant, lay on the floor of his bath room at an early hour yesterday and asphyxiated himself. Despondency due to the death of his wife a year ago is supposed to be the cause.

STOPS HORSES; DROPS DEAD.

Tragic Death of a Farmer, Who Saves His Little Grandson.

Spring Valley, Minn., Aug. 15.—Robert Duff dropped dead of heart disease in this city while on the ground in an effort to hold his horses, which were trying to run away with his little grandson, who was in the carriage. The boy escaped unharmed, while the buggy was ruined.

Flour Mill Burned.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Aug. 15.—The big mill at Eagle Bend, across the Todd county line was totally destroyed by fire. The mill was owned by A. F. Johnson, L. P. Leech and Henry Bluhm, and their loss is placed at $23,000, with $15,000 insurance. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin.

Cut to Pieces by Train.

Elk River, Minn., Aug. 15.—The body of a young man, almost literally cut to pieces, was found beside the track a few miles east of here. It had been dragged by a train over half a mile.

Poisoned by Accident.

New York, Aug. 15.—John McMackin, former labor commissioner, poisoned himself by accident at his home in Livingston manor, New York, yesterday, and died two hours later in great agony.

MAY COMPROMISE WITH DIETZ

IF LOGGING COMPANY DOES THE RIGHT THING HE MAY SURRENDER.

Hayward, Wis., Aug. 15.—There are prospects that the trouble between Dietz, the Cameron dam homesteader, and the Chippewa Log and Boom company may be settled, in which event, it is reported that Dietz will give himself up for trial on the charge of shooting a deputy sheriff. The people of Sawyer county, who have watched the operations of the big logging companies for years, believe that Dietz could have pursued no other course than the one he has followed. However, it is believed that Sheriff Gylland, who is chagrined at the comments of the press on his action in deserting one of his deputies after the recent raid on Dietz, will make another attempt to get the Cameron dam man.

Darwin Has Hopes.

Black River Falls, Aug. 14.—Oliver Darwin of this city, who volunteered his services to Gov. Davidson, believing he could effect a settlement between John Dietz and the Chippewa Log and Boom company, has returned home. He admits that his mission was unsuccessful, but says there are common grounds in sight if Sawyer county will step out of the case. Dietz asks too much and the company offers too little, says Darwin, but they both wish a settlement. Darwin went to the noted Cameron dam and spent most of the night talking the situation over with Dietz. Darwin says he is satisfied that Dietz will die fighting for what he deems his rights before he will submit to an arrest, but Mr. Darwin, who also talked with an official of the logging company, believes that a compromise may yet be effected.

SENSATION IN TRIAL.

United States Attorney at Helena Makes Startling Allegations.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 15.—A charge that an effort is being made to influence the jury that is trying the case of J. T. Carroll in the United States court was made in open court yesterday by United States Attorney Carl Rasch. He tld the court he believed that William Carroll, brother of the defendant, was leading in the effort to bring about a mistrial.

The affair created a sensation, the counsel for Carroll indignantly denying the charge and demanding that the prosecutor be required to prove his assertions, and that the court instruct the jury before whom the statement was made to ignore what he said. Judge Wolverton ordered an investigation.

Carroll, a prominent Butte lumberman, is being tried the second time for fencing public lands near Butte. He was tried several weeks ago, but the jury disagreed. At the time there were ugly rumors afloat of tampering with witnesses, but the matter was never reported to the court. In view of yesterday's developments the court will not allow the jury to separate until the case is ended.

CONFESSION NOT ENOUGH.

Shooting of Taggart Still Has Suspicious Circumstances.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 15.—Fred Taggart, a half-witted young man, has confessed that he caused the death of V. Post, a prominent citizen of the county, who was found dead seated in a buggy at Menominee. Taggart claims that he was handling his rifle when the gun was accidentally discharged. Notwithstanding the confession, there is still considerable mystery about the affair, as the bullet entered the back part of Post's head, and to have received such a wound from a shot fired from where Taggart stood Post would have had to turn around. The coroner's inquest returned a verdict of accidental shooting.

SUICIDE IS FEARED.

Old Resident of Brown's Valley Mysteriously Disappears.

Brown's Valley, Minn., Aug. 15.—W. H. Carter, an old resident of this place, has been missing from his boarding house since 11 o'clock Saturday night, and it is feared that he has thrown himself into the Little Minnesota river, which is a short distance from where he boarded, and as his hat and cane were found on the river bank the next morning, it is thought he wandered too near and fell in. Foul play is also suspected, but no arrests have been made. Detectives will be sent for and placed on the case at once.

Business Block Burns.

Faulkton, S. D., Aug. 15.—An early morning fire of unknown origin entirely destroyed the Dryden block and an adjacent building, entailing a loss of between $30,000 and $40,000. A third building was only saved after a hard fight.

Drowned in Cedar River.

Charles City, Iowa, Aug. 15.—Hayward Fisher, aged twelve, son of Frank Fisher, a member of the Fisher-Stevens Furniture factory, was drowned in Cedar river, Chautauqua Park.

Democratic County Convention.

A Democratic delegate convention for the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, will be held on Saturday, August 25th, 1906, at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon of said day at the city hall in the city of Thief River Falls, in said county, for the purpose of selecting 10 delegates to the Democratic State Convention to be held in the city of Minneapolis, on Tuesday, September 4th, A. D., 1906, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Governor and other state offices.

Also for the purpose of designating a resident of said county who shall be recommended to the State convention for election as a member of the State Central Committee, and transact such other business as may properly come before said convention.

The primaries for the election of delegates shall be held in the usual voting places in the several precinsts on Wednesday, the 22nd day of August, A. D., 1906, from 7 to 9 o'clock p. m.

By order of Democratic County Committee. —Geo. Tupper, Chairman.
—Fred Borchers, Secretary.

By the way, what were all the things that were to be done with Rockefeller when he returned from Europe?

It might be in order for Mr. Cole to give his opinion on the railroad question. Does he think freight rates are too high?

The Roseau Advertiser, edited by Harry Sanders is the name of a new paper at Roseau that looks better than the town sounds.

There would probably be more millionaires in the country if the supply of handsome chorus girls was larger.—Staples World.

No, fewer millionaires but more idiots.

The business man who uses a government printed envelope or sends out of town to have his printing done, does the identical thing he complains of the farmer doing who patronizes the catalogue houses. And yet he expects the newspapers to buck the catalogue house on the ground of loyalty to the home town.

It is time to abandon the parades of the G. A. R. The old boys are getting too old to make the march of miles under a broiling sun. So imbued with the spirit of '61 are they that they would continue to march until the last one dropped upon the street but the grand old hero is passing all too quickly as if is without making a sacrifice of his life.

The St. Cloud Journal-Press finds it easy to be paradoxical. We are assured by the J. P. that "Mr. Cole was fairly nominated but he was not the man the Republican voters would have selected had they been privileged to express their choice." This is so easy. After a careful study we get it that Mr. Cole was fairly nominated only he wasn't!

Mr. Cole's managers are digging up more snakes than they kill in the brief interval before election. In stirring up the railroad question they have overlooked Governor Johnson's consistent record in behalf of lower rates and better protection for the people against railroad aggrandizement. They have also overlooked the important fact that Candidate Cole has not always voted right on the railroad question. A better guess, though, is that the "State developement" program is dying of inertia, and Cole's managers see the necessity of getting another issue. Governor Johnson, no doubt, is willing to take a hand in the new deal and at the show-down will have the cards to win.

SEVERAL SUCCESSIVE SHOCKS.

Slayton Herald: After the Duluth convention, Candidate Cole retired to the quiet corridors of the Ry hotel to nurse his nervous syste which had been badly shattered the strenuous pre-convention campaign. After this had been attended to to some extent, he called in the faithful quarters and proceeded to the formation of a campaign committee. This proved such wearying labor, that at its completion he retired to his home at Walker for a month's rest. When the campaign opens and the Candidate Cole attempts to follow the pace set by Governor Johnson on the stump, then will come a season of nervous prostration for the Republican standard bearer which is liable to land him in a sanitarium for the ensuing two years.

WILL BE FORGOTTEN.

Shakopee Argus: A. L. Cole, the Republican nominee, for governor, thinks that he ought to keep clear of the factional fights that are being waged in the G. O. P. ranks in a great many of the counties and in several of the districts of the state. And it is said that he will rise away above them all and will maintain his high attitude until after the storm of the primaries has gone by. The fact that he is the Republican nominee will have been entirely forgotten by that time.

THREE REPUBLICAN FACTIONS.

It has been intimated that there are two factions in the Minnesota Republican party—the Democratic faction and the Republican faction. —Browns Valley Tribune.

You are pretty near right Mr. Tribune. There are three factions in the Republican party at the present time—the corporations and politicians who nominated Cole; the party slaves who will vote for him, and the independents, who will vote for Johnson, not because he is a Democrat, but because he has proven himself an able and conscientious governor.—Slayton Herald.

Collar to Save Dog From Leopards.

"A leopard collar," he said, taking up a dog collar studded with sharp spikes three inches long.

Fitting the collar on his dog, he resumed:

"This piece of armor—for that is what it is—illustrates an oddity of the Himalayas—namely, the fondness of the Himalayan leopard for dog flesh.

"In the Himalayas last year I found that all dogs wore these murderous looking spiked collars. The explanation was that the Himalayan leopards conducted an unceasing dog hunt, and that, in attacking a dog, they always fell upon his neck.

"This collar, with its sharp spikes, is a great protection. It has saved many a dog from a hungry leopard. Often in the Himalayas a dog come trotting home safe and sound, though with smears of blood and yellow hairs upon his collar spikes."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

NOW FOR THE STATE FAIR

All the Week of Sept. 3 to 8 Will Be Devoted to the Great Event.

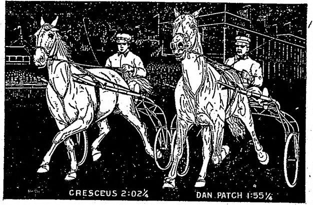
MAMMOTH LIVE STOCK AMPHITHEATER TO BE DEDICATED.

James J. Hill to Make the Address—Dan Patch and Cresceus to Speed on Monday, Sept. 3—Half-Fare Rates Made Over Wide Territory.

The greatest of all the great state fairs of Minnesota will be opened to the public on Monday morning Sept. 3, at 9 o'clock. Last year's fair was the largest yet held in the state, but this year's will easily eclipse it: Exhibits are more numerous in all departments which have closed entries while in the others there are certain indications that the record of '05 will be surpassed.

First and foremost as an attraction at the fair will be the new $110,000 livestock amphitheatre which is just being completed. It is the largest and best arranged of all the amphitheatres at the fair-grounds of the country and its arena is larger than that of the famous Madison Square garden of New York City.

The new building is dedicated to the livestock industry of the northwest and the formal dedication will be by James J. Hill the most famous railroad man of modern times and a lifelong promoter of livestock as the safeguard of farming interests. His speech will be delivered in the amphitheater on Monday morning at 11 o'clock.



DAN PATCH, AND CRESCEUS.

These two great kings of the turf will go against the worlds records, of 1:55¼ and 2:02¼ respectively, on Monday, Sept. 3, the opening day of the fair.

After this formal opening of the fair and dedication of the amphitheater, the visitors will be at liberty to amuse themselves among the exhibits. These they will find in perfect order. It is a steadfast rule of the management of the Minnesota fair to insist on having exhibits in place before the opening hour.

Amusements will be started up right after lunch on Monday. An immense amusement program will be put on before the grand stand commencing at 1 o'clock and lasting all the afternoon. All kinds of races will be on the program, but the leading features of the afternoon will be the attempts of Dan Patch "King of Pacers" and Cresceus, "King of Trotters," to lower their own world's record of 1:55¼ and 2:02¼ respectively. These are the two most famous stallions in the world; both now Minnesota horses. It will be an event of a lifetime to see them on the track together.

Other great events will come off the same afternoon. A 2:30 class trotting race for a purse of $2,500, and a 2:09 pace will be sensational affairs. Then the six days ladies relay riding race will commence. This is a most inspiring event. The ladies ride four miles each day of the fair changing horses at the end of every mile before the grand stand.

The rest of the afternoon program includes:

Band Concert—Minnesota State Band.

The Pekin Zouaves—Lightning Drill Corps of the world.

Clayton, Jenkins & Jasper—Comedians.

Patrick and Francisco—"Rube" acrobats.

Bailey & May—Barrell jumping act.

Balloon Ascension and Parachute Drop.

In the evening many of the specialty performances enumerated above will be repeated under electric light while in addition will be races on the half mile track and a complete performance of the spectacular melodramatic pyrotechnic wonder—Gregory's "Moscow."

For this great special scenery covering acres is required and over 200 people are employed. Superb ballets, beautiful costumes, marches, drills, pantomime and numerous specialty numbers fill out a wonderful spectacular performance. The city of Moscow is faithfully represented in the scenery, and the costuming is correct and thoroughly Russian. The scenes and action is during the horrible riots of recent years and the city burns at the close giving splendid opportunity for the introduction of fireworks showing the highest art of the pyrotechnist.

Following the spectacle there is a half hours exhibition of Gregory's fireworks—the finest on earth.

Much the same program will be given each day of the fair. The races are varied each day and of course, Dan Patch and Cresceus can appear but on Monday; but all the other great features will be seen each day.

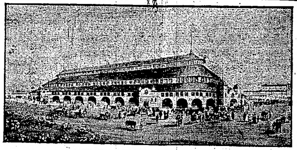
However Monday is easily the greatest day of the fair and an enormous attendance—possibly of 100,000 people—is expected.

In order that people from every part of the northwest may reach the cities in time for the events of opening day the half-fare tickets on the railroads will be on sale everywhere on Saturday, Sept. 1st. This will give ample time for all to get into town and comfortably settled before Monday morning.

Half fare rates are made from all points south and southeast of Minneapolis and St. Paul, to a distance of 200 miles while to the northeast, north, and west the rate extends from 400 to 550 miles. It reaches from Sault Ste Marie on the east to the Missouri river on the west and Winnipeg on the North.

An exceedingly large and important cattle exhibition will be held during the fair and auction sales of Aberdeen-Angus, Hereford and Shorthorns will be held in the great amphitheatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons respectively.

The horse display will be larger than ever. Farm machinery will cover fifty acres; agricultural and horticultural products will overflow from the great agricultural hall.



MAMMOTH LIVESTOCK AMPHITHEATER.

This great building has been erected at a cost of $110,000., for the livestock breeders of the northwest. It will be dedicated on Monday Sept. 3, in a great address by. James J. Hill—one of the most widely known men in the country.

The Minnesota State fair is now almost independent of the weather. Its great buildings enclose many acres of floor space. They are connected by means of miles of cement walk. The street cars land passengers almost in the center of the grounds. And this year the great livestock amphitheatre will make it possible to entertain vast crowds under cover so that even the amusement side of the fair is on a weather proof basis.

C. N. Cosgrove of Le Sueur is president of the fair this year, as for several years past, and E. W. Randall is secretary. B. F. Nelson of Minneapolis and C. M. Griggs, of St. Paul, are the vice-presidents, and the board of managers is made up of J. M. Underwood, Lake City; L. D. Baird, Austin; W. M. Liggett, St. Anthony Park; Wm. E. Lee, Long Prairie; D. S. Hall, Buffalo Lake; G. W. Patterson, Worthington.

OLD SORES OFTEN LEAD TO CANCER

Whenever a sore or ulcer does not heal and shows signs of becoming chronic, it should arouse suspicion, because many of these places lead to Cancer. It may appear as an ordinary sore at first, and is given treatment as such, with some simple salve, wash or plaster, with the hope that the place will heal, but the real seat of the trouble is in the blood and cannot be reached by external remedies, and soon the sore will return. After awhile the deadly poison begins to eat into the surrounding flesh and the ulcer spreads rapidly, becoming more offensive and alarming until at last the sufferer finds he is afflicted with Cancer. Cancerous ulcers often start from a boil, wart, mole or pimple, which has been bruised or roughly handled, showing that the taint is in the blood, perhaps inherited. Another cause for non-healing ulcers and sores is the remains of some constitutional disease or the effects of a long spell of sickness. S. S. S. goes down to the very root of the trouble and cures so thoroughly that there is never any sign of the trouble in after years. As soon as the system gets under the influence of S. S. S. the place begins to improve, the discharge gradually grows less, the inflammation leaves, the flesh resumes its healthy color, and soon the sore is well, because every vestige of the cause has been removed from the blood. Book on sores and ulcers and medical advice without charge.

I was suffering greatly from a cancerous ulcer on my left breast, which had begun to eat, and at times would discharge very offensive matter. I knew the trouble was hereditary as an only sister, my mother and two of her sisters died of Cancer. I am fully satisfied I would have gone the sameway but for S. S. S., which cured me.

Judge Watts has decided the case case of the Hamm Brewing Co. against Sheriff Linnihan. The action, involving $300, arose from an execution levied by the sheriff in an action between Felix Fornier and P. K. Olson, who was then conducting a saloon at Plummer. Levy was made on stock and fixtures upon which the Brewing company claimed to have a mortgage. The municipal court of Thief River Falls gave the company a verdict which Judge Watts set aside. F. A. Grady represented Sheriff Linnihan.

Duluth isn't the only city that has a license to invite President Roosevelt to hunt bear on her streets. Red Lake Falls may do it too, now, as a healthy specimen of a black bear was seen Monday evening near the Northern Pacific depot. However Tuesday morning Fred Delorme, who lives just south of the city, brought in the hide of a black bear he had shot that morning, probably the same one. Anyhow Mr. Delorme just arrived in time to keep the male population of the city from going out on a bear hunt.

Broken Down, Like Many Another Woman, With Exhausting Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. A. Taylor, of Wharton, N. J., says: "I had kidney trouble in its most painful and severe form, and the torture I went through now seems to have been almost unbearable. I had back-ache, pains in the side and loins, dizzy spells and hot, feverish headaches. There were bearing-down pains, and the kidney secretions passed too frequently, and with a burning sensation. They showed sediment. I became discouraged, weak, languid and depressed, so sick and weak that I could not keep up. As doctors did not cure me I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and with such success that my troubles were all gone after using eight boxes, and my strength, ambition and general health is fine."

DIAMONDS IN UNITED STATES.

Discovered in Four Regions—Place of Origin Unknown.

Never before in the history of the United States has there been such a demand for the diamonds as there was in 1905. Large quatities were imported, but the country produced none. In 1903 it produced diamonds to the value of $50, in 1901 it had an output worth $100, and in 1900 its production was valued at $150, and in 1899 the country boasted native diamonds to the value of $300.

Diamonds have been discovered in the United States in four different regions, but their actual place of origin is in every case unknown. All have been found in loose and superficial deposits and all accidentally. It is not at all improbable, however, that some day the original sources of this queen of gems may be discovered.

The high price of diamonds has made the recent search for these precious stones in the United States and Canada keener than ever before. A careful watch for diamonds was kept during the examination by the United States geological survey of many samples of gold and platinum sands at the Lewis and Clark exposition in Portland, Or.

A lookout for diamonds has also been kept by a number of people who have been dredging for gold on an extensive scale in the rivers of California. In neither case have any finds been reported.—Scientific American.

SALLOW FACES

Often Caused by Coffee Drinking.

How many persons realize that coffee so disturbs digestion that it produces a muddy, yellow complexion?

A ten days' trial of Postum Food Coffee has proven a means, in thousands of cases, of clearing up bad complexions.

A Washn. young lady tells her experience:

"All of us—father, mother, sister and brother—had used tea and coffee for many years until finally we all had stomach troubles more or less.

"We were all sallow and troubled with pimples, breath bad, disagreeable taste in the mouth, and all of us simply so many bundles of nerves.

"We didn't realize that coffee was the cause of the trouble until one day we ran out of coffee and went to borrow some from a neighbor. She gave us some Postum and told us to try that.

"Although we started to make it we all felt sure we would be sick if we missed our strong coffee, but we were forced to try Postum and were surprised to find it delicious.

"We read the statements on the pkg., got more and in a month and a half you wouldn't have known us. We were all able to digest our food without any trouble, each one's skin became clear, tongues cleaned off and nerves in fine condition. We never use anything now but Postum. There is nothing like it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a reason."

"By heaven," said Billery to himself, "if I had known that an innocent man would have endured such suffering as this, I would have held my tongue."

"Had you any grudge against Aloysiux?" he asked.

"I had no grudge against monsieur, your cousin," said Grimaud. "I have none now. But I think it just that a criminal should suffer for his crime, and I do not hold it just that the innocent should lie under suspicion."

"That is well said, Grimaud," cried Billery. "That is the very essence of the question."

"I am proud," returned Grimaud, bowing as he sat, "to enjoy monsieur's approval. It is of the very essence of the question, as monsieur has said."

"As for that," said Alexis, "we are all agreed. Let the criminal suffer for his crime. But, my friend, I put it to you. Do you think it is likely or possible that he should escape suffering? Is it nothing to have the ever-present fear of detection hanging over him? Is it nothing that the thought of the hangman's rope should choke his throat a hundred times a day?"

"Monsieur," said Grimaud, "the man who commits a brutal murder for the sake of gain should think of those little matters beforehand."

"All that admitted," answered Alexis, in a dreadful voice. "Now hear me, Grimaud." He was like a man who struggled with a drowning tide, with gaspings and sobbings of the truth and unhelpful motions of the exhausted hands. "You have the criminal at your mercy?"

"That is so," said Grimaud, gravely. Billery looked at him and saw that his face was set like graven bronze.

"He knows that you could lay your hand upon him at any hour?"

Alexis hid his face in his hands and shuddered. There was a long pause before he spoke again.

"And you will not exercise your power?" he asked, at last. Grimaud seemed to pause and ponder. "You will spare Aloysius?"

"Yes, monsieur," said Grimaud, "I shall spare the benefactor of my boyhood. I am the better able to afford a gratification of these generous and friendly instincts since Monsieu Alexis is himself so good as to forestall the government reward."

"Animal!" cried Billery, leaping to his feet and falling back into his armchair, from sheer weakness. "You talk of the benefactor of your boyhood and the dirty gold you take to spare him in the same breath!"

"One of these fine days," said Grimaud, rising from his seat, "monsieur may do me a complete justice. For myself I am a minister of honesty—no less, no more. Monsieur Brangwyn, your friend, is present, will do me the honour to say that in his opinion I have acted well."

"My dear Grimaud," said Alexis, "you have made me bound to you forever. You promise me you won't denounce Aloysius, whatever comes?"

"I promise that," returned Grimaud, striking his heels together and stretching out his shining hat at arm's length as if he was saluting an enemy on the stage. "And beyond that I will promise that whoever does denounce him will have to encounter facts which I can bring which will carry him to derision. The Brangwyn Mystery, if I may be permitted to allude to it in the popular phrase, has nine keys to it. I hold them all, and I have thrown all but one into the ocean. Who looks for them may find; but may I be permitted to say that the probabilities are against him?"

He clicked his heels together and waved the shiny hat in a manner which Billery felt to be no less than insolent, although it was not easy to discover again whom the insolence was directed. In any case Grimaud was gone, and Alexis, with his profoundly sympathetic guest, was left alone.

"I say, Alex," said Billery, after a long silence, "I never thought you'd feel the thing like this. I'm a whisky-sodden idiot, and I saw a journalistic scoop in it. I never liked Aloysius, and perhaps—there's a sort of shame in it—but perhaps I felt that I should like to hunt him down. But if it means misery to you I'm sorry that ever I began it."

"Look here, Hamilton," said Alexis, winding his arm about the other's shoulders. "You won't feel hurt at what I'm going to say?"

"I don't think I shall, anyway," said Billery, who was touched by the anguish he had seen his old friend endure, and was very sorry for the hand he had had in it. "Take the risk, old chap, and say it."

"These things happen so," said Alexis. "When my cousin Aloysius and I were living merrily enough in the Cite d'Antin on a hundred francs a week apiece, you were a young swell, just come into your patrimony and swaggering about on five or six thousand sterling per annum. That's about it, Billery, isn't it? There or thereabouts?"

"There or thereabouts," said Billery.

"You gave us a share of your abundance, and we had a good old time together," pursued Alexis.

"And now," went on Alexis, "the tables are turned. I'm the rich man and you're the poor one. I don't want to bribe you; I wouldn't demean myself in the eyes of an honest man like you, Billery, by trying to bribe him. But if I could free you of any money trouble which may seem to you to be inseparable from this inquiry, and if I could at the same time spare Aloysius from the ignominy of this charge—and myself—I don't forget myself—the loss of social prestige, family honor, household hope—Billery, you'll only have to name your sum up to the limit of my means. I'm wealthy as wealth goes in England. I'm worth fifteen thousand a year. One, two, three, four, five for life! Name your figure. I want silence. Silence for Aloysius. Don't take it for a bribe, old chap. Don't take it for a bribe. Take it as a thank-offering. I've bought that villain Grimaud, as he hinted coarsely enough. I can't buy an honorable man like you, Hamilton, but I can ask you to take pity on a breaking heart, and I can ask you not to make your pity too costly to yourself. Look here, Hamilton. A thousand down. I'll draw an open cheque this minute. Make it two, three—what you like."

"I ain't proud," said Billery, "but it's all no use, Alex. There isn't the least little bit of use in all the money in the world. I'd take it and shut up if I could, and if I could I'm hanged if I'd borrow more than a fiver on it, and that you'd lend me, anyway."

"If you could? What do you mean by 'if you could'?" gasped Alexis.

"Why," said Billery, "most unfortunately for Aloysus and for you and me, they've had all the information at my command at Scotland Yard for a month past."

Alexis turned pale, his lips moved, but no sound came, and then he swooned dead away.

CHAPTER IX.

The inquiry hung fire, and Truscott, moved by Billery's recent disaster, found him something at which he could imagine himself to work at the Daily Record office. He was not of any special service there, but he had enough in hand to keep him out of mischief, and he drew a salary on which it was possible for him to subsist with comfort. He had a little den of his own with his name painted on the door, and pretty generally in the course of the day Truscott came in and smoked a cigar with him, so that Billery came to enjoy a high esteem with the staff, and to be looked on as one who held a sort of advisory power in the councils of the journal. He had a telephone in his room, and he passed some of his time in a harmless conversation with his friends, whom he would occasionally ring up in order to impart to them the latest funny story in circulation in Fleet street. He had been so thoroughly scared by his own narrow escape from death that for a long time he was a model of temperance.

Alexis had been advised by his doctor to try a change of scene, and he had gone abroad. Billery thought of him often with deep compassion, and his first eager interest in his man-hunt had died away. He had said nothing to the Scotland Yard authorities about Grimaud, whose complete knowledge of the case, if, indeed, he had any, remained locked in his own breast. There was a very fair possibility that the whole thing might blow over, and Billery's heart was so wruung by the thought of the anguish which would come upon the innocent if the crime were brought home to the guilty that he almost hoped that his past efforts would go for nothing, and that Aloysius would be left to the torture of his own conscience.

He was sitting in his room at the office one afternoon, making his customary pretence of being engaged on something of importance, when he found himself called up on the telephone. Whenever this happened it made Billery feel important. He liked to think that he was at the center of affairs. He responded to the call at once, and shouted, "Helloa!" and "Are you there?" and "Who is it, if you please?" Was that the Daily Record? Yes. Was Mr. Billery at the office? Yes; here present. Would Mr. Billery kindly hold the wire a moment? Sergeant Holt would like to speak to him from Scotland Yard.

" right," said Billery, and waited, murmuring to himself that here was more trouble for Alexis.

"That Mr. Billery?" came Holt's voice.

"Yes; what is it? That you, Holt?"

"Yes. We have just got news here of the discovery of that man Missall, the Frenchman who owned the house in Agar Row. He's living in Paris. He says the person to whom he sold the house was a fellow countryman of his, but I think you once mentioned to me that the person you suspect had spent a good deal of his time abroad, and that he spoke French like a native."

"Yes," said Billery, "I've no doubt he could pass for a Frenchman if he liked."

"Missall says he could identify him by his portrait. I suppose you could get a photograph of him from some one of his friends or another, couldn't you?"

"I can't quite tell where at present," said Billery. "Mr. Alexis Brangwyn has one, I know, but he's traveling abroad for his health. I haven't got his address, and I don't know when he'll be back again."

"Ah, well," Holt answered, "I shall be coming your way in a couple of hours' time. If you are going to be in then, I should like to have a talk with you."

"All right," said Billery, "I'll be here."

Then he sat down to think the whole question out over a pipe.

"The plain fact is that I'm not cut out for this kind of an enterprise. What the dickens has it got to do with me whether old Brangwyn's murder goes unavenged or not? Let Providence do justice in its own good time. I've set the game going, but I'm out of the hunt from this day forward. Why, by Heaven," cried Billery, jumping from his chair, "I never dreamed of such mental agony as that beastly discovery inflicted on poor Alexis. There it is, there it is. There's no justice in the world. Everywhere and always men and women suffering for other people's wrongdoing."

With these thoughts and thoughts like these his mind was mainly occupied until, a little before the specified time, the commissionaire in the inquiry office below summoned his attention, and announced the arrival of Detective-Sergeant Holt from Scotland Yard, with a colleague from Paris.

"They've been a little bit slower than I anticipated," said the sergeant as he shook hands, "but they've got the old bloke at last all right. Sort of rag and bone and bottle merchant. Buys from the chiffonniers, and sells his rubbish wholesale. Allow me to introduce yau to M. Ribot, a gentleman I've had the pleasure of acting with professionally in a good many cases. He's had a talk with old Missall, and he'll tell you all about him."

M. Ribot was a stout man, in varnished boots and a tightly-buttoned frock coat. He was clean shaven and close cropped, and he looked like a prosperous low comedian. He bowed at the mention of his name, and began his recital without any sort of preface.

"Missall, Edouard, Rue Bouge 4bis, Montmartre, dealer in street refuse, aged seventy-two. Owned the tenement No. 9 in Agar Row, Rotherhithe, London. Sold the same in the autumn of the year 1899 to a person calling himself Wilmonte, whom he believes to have been a Frenchman. Is quite unable to describe the man adequately, but believes he might recognize him. Believes the man to have been something like his own rank in life."

"It doesn't appear to point very strongly to the party you suspect, does it, Mr. Billery?" said Holt. "But in the transfer of house property there's generally some kind of intermediary, and there are certain legal forms to be satisfied to make the contract binding. We'll continuue the inquiry for what it's worth, anyhow. If you could get us that photograph, now, Mr. Billery, it might simplify matters."

"Well, I'll tell you how the matter stands, so far as I am concerned," said Billery. "I can't bring myself to be concerned in it personally any longer."

"No?" said Holt, looking at him in astonishment. "Why, Mr. Billery, if my opinion's worth anything, and I think it is, or ought to be, after all the experience I've had, whatever progress has been made in this case has been made by you. You're on the way, I believe to a very striking success, sir, and when the facts come out you will be entitled to the credit of it."

"I don't want it, thank you," Billery returned. "I've done my duty by the State already."

(To Be Continued.)

Choosing Tender Chickens.

There is a shrewd old fellow in Connecticut, the proprietor of a summer boarding house, who never gets the worst of it.

One morning he took a new servant with him to Greenwich to teach the servitor the tricks of judicious buying.

The question of chickens arose. Said the old chap: "How many have you this morning?"

"About a dozen," replied the storekeeper.

"Well," said the proprietor of the summer boarding house, "my boarders is the biggest eaters you ever seen. Pick out nine of the toughest you've got."

The storekeeper complied, laying aside the three tender fowl. Whereupon the old chap gathered them into his basket, observing: "Guess I'll take these three."

No Wool Over His Eyes.

Uncle Abe, a grizzled old negro visited a zoological garden. He stood fascinated before a cage containing a chimpanzee, and could not be induced to move. After a while the animal came to the front of the cage, and Uncle Abe spoke to him.

"Howdy?" he said; "howdy?"

The chimpanzee not making any response, Uncle Abe chuckled and winked at him thoroughly.

"Dat's right, dat de way ter do! Doan you nebber gin ter talk. Ef you does, white man put er hoe in yer han,' en mek yer wuk!"

Chafing Dish Aprons.

Have you seen the dainty aprons for chafing dish parties in the heart-shaped pattern? Cut a large heart of flowered dimity or dotted swiss, roll the edges and trim with a ruffle of Valenciennes lace, leaving about ten inches at the round part of the heart untrimmed. This is slightly gathered, and the strings are sewed to it, the point of the heart forming the bottom of the apron. Cut a heart of smaller size for the bib, which is also rolled and trimmed with lace, and a tiny heart for the pocket, which is finished in the same way, but with a narrow lace. The bib is sewed over the strings with the point at the bottom, and the little pocket on the left side of the large heart. The effect is so pretty when finished that I am sure it will please.

School Tasks in Switzerland.

A Geneva correspondent of a London paper thinks the sums done in a Swiss school sufficiently extraordinary to telegraph some of them to his journal. The father of a schoolboy, aged eight, living at Chaux de Fonds, sends to the Impartial the following problems as specimens of the home work the youngster had recently been set to work out at the cantonal school. Multiply 5,101,520,253,035 by 3,530,252,015,105. The boy obtained the following answer: 18,009,652,153,375,778,242,093,675. Divide 71,421,283,542,000 by 24,538,714,212. After some hours' work the youngster obtained as answer 2,910,555,525. The mere reading of those terrible figures should make every small boy glad he does not live in Switzerland.

French-Fried Potatoes.

Peel nice potatoes, cut into lengthwise strips, crosswise, or any way one likes, throw into cold water as peeled, and then dry them on a soft towel. Have a vessel containing smoking (not scorching) hot fat or lard, enough to cover ((or "swim") the potatoes, and as soon as they float on the surface they are brown and done; skim into a draining basket, or on coarse paper, and keep hot until served. There should be no grease on them, and they may be eaten with the fingers without soiling, while perfectly mealy and sweet inside. The potatoes must be raw, and are much nicer than "cold boiled" fried potatoes, and not half the trouble to prepare or eat.

Cucumber Cosmetic.

Now that cucumbers can be bought, the cosmetic mixer can compound this very excellent formula: : Slice without peeling four large cucumbers, add a cupful of water boil until soft, cool and strain. To one and one-half ounces of juice add add equal portion of alcohol and one-fourth ounce powdered castile soap; let stand over night, add eight ounces of cucumber juice, one ounce of oil of sweet almonds, 20 drops of tincture of benzoin and a pinch of boric acid. Shake well. Apply twice a day with a sponge.

Difficult Tongue.

Eskimo has the reputation of being a difficult tongue to understand, even more to speak. All manner of parts of speech may become joined to verbal roots, and the whole may be conjugated like a simple verb—which is muddling to a foreigner. One missionary brought back a word which, when written on the blackboard, was quite 2½ yards long.—Boston Transcript.

Turning Hems.

A good way to turn even hems on table linen, ready for hand sewing, is to put the hemmer attachment on the sewing machine and run the linen through, without any thread on the machine. This turns a straight hem very quickly which is merely folded back when over-hand hemming is done; the orthodox hemming for table linen.

The 1906 Girl.

And to other eccentricities, the full, circular skirt, the high chignon, and the tip-tilted hat and the lace veil, and you have a young woman so flagrantly flippant and frivolous that the sensible shirt-waist summer girl of 1904 and 1905 first gasps, then curls her lip, and finally goes—a-shopping.

Harmless Rouge.

A soft sponge dipped in fresh strawberry juice makes a lovely rouge." It will not harm the skin unless used too frequently without removing; then it may cause slight eruption. A bit of lemon will take it all off, and then the cream may be well rubbed in.

Rent the Bell.

The fire commission of New Britain, Conn., have decided to continue to rent a church bell rather than buy one, on account of the excedingly high price of bell metal at present.

Benzoinated Face Tonic.

It is quite easy to make. Take a big bowl of warm water and put a very few drops of benzoin in it. Bathe the face. You can add a little powdered borax if your face is rough.

Embroidered Grass Linen.

Grass linen embroidered in Japanese style, both in white and blue, is among the prettiest drapery for the dining room table. Glass and china doylies to correspond.

Fortunately They Don't.

If all the larvae of the common fly came to maturity and nothing happened to cut down the maximum natural rate of increase, one pair of insects might multiply to 100,000,000, according to eminent scientific authorities, in a single half year of warm weather.

MORE THAN MONEY.

A Minister Talks About Grape-Nuts

"My first stomach trouble began back in 1895," writes a minister in Nebr., "resulting from hasty eating and eating too much. I found no relief from medicine and grew so bad that all food gave me great distress.

"It was that sore, gnawing, hungry feeling in my stomach that was so distressing and I became a sick man. Grape-Nuts was recommended as a food that could be easily digested.

"Leaving the old diet that had given me so much trouble, I began to eat Grape-Nuts with a little cream and sugar. The change effected in 24 hours was truly remarkable, and in a few weeks I was back to health again.

"My work as a minister calls me away from home a great deal, and recently I drifted back to fat meat and indigestible foods, which put me again on the sick list.

"So I went back to Grape-Nuts and cream and in four days I was put right again. The old dull headaches are gone, stomach comfortable, head clear, and it is a delight to pursue my studies and work.

"Grape-Nuts food is worth more than money to me, and I hope this may induce some sufferer to follow the same course I have."

Mistake to Humor a "Sensitive" Child

The Law Must Accompany Love--Yielding too Much to Temperament Will Soon Be Matter for Regret to Both the Parents and the Offspring.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

The fashion of large families has gone out. Here and there of course one meets a good-sized family of rollicking boys and girls, and sees a row of bright heads around the family board. Once upon a time six, eight and ten children formed the ordinary family group and nobody wasted a sentiment of pity on fathers and mothers because of the number of the little ones or the multiplying needs of the young people.

Gradually, at least in the older portions of the country, this condition of things has materially changed and the American household is considered complete with an average sum total of three children. One child satisfies some parents and others thank Providence from full hearts if they have two, a son and a daughter being regarded as satisfactory in the highest degree.

Recently a tendency is evident indicative of a backward swing of the pendulum in favor of the larger family, for which indeed very much is to be said. Although the care of infancy entails no little strain on a mother, yet in later years she looks back on nursery days with a new conception of their intense happiness. As children increase in number and in years they help to bring one another up, and the mother of six, varying in age from twelve to two years, really has less to contend with and less daily fret and care than the mother of a single child.

The problem of the sensitive child much oftener assails the parent whose family is small than her neighbor who has a round half-dozen to supervise. In the latter instance there is very little time to study the moods and caprices of a small person who is easily wounded, or inclined to mope in a corner when he or she cannot rule with a strong hand. Be it noted that the desire to rule with a strong hand is not limited to people who are grown up. Solomon said: "Woe to thy land when the king is a child," and the aphorism might be repeated in the home whenever and wherever a child immature in judgment, selfish in disposition, and perverse in temper, sways a scepter over the entire family.

"Maria is so sensitive," said a fond mother, alluding to a particularly disagreeable and ill-behaved infant whose birthdays touched the borderland of seven; "she is so nervous and so easily wounded that we all guard her from every rough wind. We never contradict her. We try not to shock or vex her by opposition. The little faults she now has we are sure will be overcome by her good sense when she is older. In the meantime we try to be patient. Love is the only atmosphere for a sensitive child."

It is the hour of child-culture and of the mother's club, and of much consideration and much wisdom in our dealings with children. Nevertheless, an old-fashioned woman who grew up when children had a happy place of their own, in the background of the home, when they romped and played and studied without too much vigilance on the part of their elders, when naughtiness was rebuked by the tingle of a switch, and goodness was rewarded by an extra treat or a cookie, has her private wonder about the present clamor over willfulness.

Are children really better off for receiving an early impression that their moods and tenses are to be taken seriously? May it not easily be that undue sensitiveness would be cured by less candy and an earlier bedtime? As things are, the sensitive child too often tyrannizes over the others who have no such trait in their natures, and who therefore are not treated with any special favor.

Teachers unanimously condemn parents who make too much of this particular feature in their children. "Lucy and Eva would do perfectly well in school," observed a teacher, "if only their mother could be persuaded to let them alone. She watches every inflection of their tones, every breath they draw, and every step they take. Three mornings out of five she appears in the schoolroom to ask some concession to Lucy's nerves, or Eva's feelings, and although she is a very charming women I dread her as I do the east wind."

In cases without number a child who has borne the label "sensitive" loses it completely when transplanted to the atmosphere of a boarding school, or sent on a visit to grandparents in an old homestead where he is allowed to do as he pleases when out of doors, and is under proper restrictions within them. Love is the best atmosphere, it is true, for a sensitive child, but law must accompany love in the training of children.

Sensitive means responsive to influence and the word has to do with quick feeling and swift receptiveness on the part of a human being. All things considered, a sensitive child or a sensitive woman or man belongs to a higher order than does a blunt, irresponsive and dull-natured person who is difficult of access and slow of brain. The finer the type the greater will be the sensitiveness. The farther we advance in civilization the more rapid will be the march of sensation and the swifter the rush of emotion, and yet this means only that the profounder must be the need for discipline. Discipline should not be thought of as harsh. It never need be unkind. It implies training in doing the same thing over and over until doing it perfectly has become automatic. It implies drill and self-restraint and a thousand nameless chances and opportunities for thinking of others before thinking of one's self.

When the sensitive child has learned to be altruistic, to deny self that others may be happy, he or she has reached a level on the uplands of life well worth attainment. The coronation of happy living at home is embodied in the word harmony. There cannot be harmony where there is injustice. Every child of Adam, young and old, yearns for justice. We do not ask that people shall treat us with forebearance or pity or even generosity. We ask that they shall be just. The youngest member of the family has as much right to justice as the oldest. Oversensitiveness if unchecked is sure to make its possessor both miserable and despotic, a combination that works like a leaven of evil in the individual and in the home.

An April child all sudden smiles and tears may be a darling, but April's onward progress is to months in which we may anticipate settled weather.

Beware of yielding too much to temperament. In the present direction toward individualism in education there is just the danger that the individual may be studied to the disadvantage of the whole. An eminent doctor who had given much thought and study to the management of youth once said to me: "After all, it is a comfort that children scramble up the hill very much as they always have, notwithstanding our painstaking, and perhaps the best thing that ever befalls them is a little wholesome neglect."

Children are fortunate when they are introduced into a world full of cousins about their own age. When several families of kinsfolk reside in the same locality and there is a good deal of visiting, of running to and fro and of informal fellowship, the children are early made members of a sort of youthful republic. Big brothers and older sisters look out for the juniors, and if there is a child with a tendency to morbidness or to discontent the healthy activity in the environment soon exorcises the haunting demon.

A merry circle of cousins is a cause for congratulation, and next to this, the best thing for any child, whether sensitive or not, is to be thrown into the companionship of a school filled with the children of townspeople somewhere on the same plane, as to age and condition. When everything has been said on the subject that can be said, there still remains this truth that children educate each other far more successfully than grown people educate them.

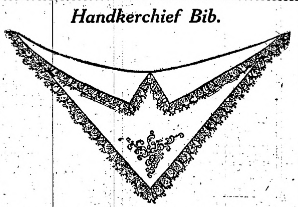
Handkerchief Bib.



Take a narrow hemstitched handkerchief cut diagonally in halves, then cut down the center two inches and hemmed, then trimmed with narrow val lace like the picture. If you use a perfectly plain handkerchief, draw some small flowers in the corner at the bottom and embroider them in white wash silk. One handkerchief makes two bibs.

GOOD COLORS FOR HOUSES.

It is not generally known—not even among painters—why certain tints and colors wear much better than others on houses, and the knowledge of just what tints are best to use is, therefore, rather hazy.

One writer on paint, in a recent book, says that experiments seem to show that those colors which resist or turn back the heat rays of the sun, will protect a house better than those which allow these rays to pass through the film.

Thus red is a good color because it turns back, or reflects, the red rays, and the red rays are the hot rays.

In general, therefore, the warm tones are good and the cold tones are poor, so far as wear is concerned. In choosing the color of paint for your house, select reds, browns, grays and olives which, considering the various tones these tints will produce, will give a wide range from which to choose.

Avoid the harsh tints, such as cold yellows (like lemon), cold greens (like grass green, etc.), and the blues.

It must be understood that no virtue is claimed for tints in themselves, irrespective of the materials used in the paint. Any color will fade, and the paint will scale off, if adulterated white lead or canned paint is used, but if one is careful to use the best white lead—some well-known brand of a reliable manufacturer—and genuine linseed oil, the warm tints mentioned above will outwear the same materials tinted with the cold colors.

Monument to a Pig.

"Did you ever see a monument to a pig?"

"No."

"Well, there is such a monument in existence. The town at Luneburg, in Hanover, owns it. It stands in the town hall—a glass case containing an embalmed ham from the pig, together with a great slab of black marble engraved with letters of gold.

"Luneburg is a town rich and famous through its salt springs. A pig discovered these springs. To this pig the monument wa sput up. The golden inscription says in Latin:

"'Stranger! Contemplate here the mortal remains of the pig which acquired for itself imperishable glory by the discovery of the salt springs of Luneburg.'"

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies; those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the

That a central Kansas editor says: "We attended church some time ago, and listened to a very good sermon, as sermons go. We enjoyed the singing, and stood up with our brethren and sisters while they sang the good old hymn, 'Shall We Know Each Other There?' While the hymn was being sung we glanced about us and counted about a dozen members of the congregation of the church who do not speak to each other when they meet on the street or elsewhere. The thought occured to us, why should ther 'know each other there' when they seemingly don't know each other here."

That a brakeman on the Northern Pacific railroad two years ago lost the index finger of his right hand relates an exchange. Recently a woman passenger much interested in the natural beauties the brakeman pointed out to her, noticed the stub on his finger. When the conductor came thru the car she said to him: "Excuse me, sir, but can you tell me how the brakeman lost his forefinger? He seemed to be such an accommodating fellow." Yes, mum, that's just it. He is so accommodating that he wore that finger off pointing out the scenery along the line," said the conductor.

Hall's Cataarh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Fifth district—Joseph Pigeon, rep;

There was a condition of affairs political yesterday that gave evidence of a very low barometer. It was of ill feeling somewhere among the candidates that meant much or little to the future success of several according to the mind of the man who undertook to read the signs of the times. It is hard to fathom its initiative and much harder to predict its consequence and seemed to be that somebody was butting into somebody else's game. There were candidates filed who looked as tho they, or some one for them, had an ulterior motive or reason beyond the mere desire to get the nomination for a particular office. Beyond a bunch of ill feeling engendered there was a peculiar alignment politically. Men who had been identified with one party practically all their lives filed for office under another party. The reasons for a number of things that happened no one pretends to fully understand and few will know even after the smoke has cleared away.

G. N. WANTS INFORMATION

Would Like to Know Why Business is Declining.

Allen Jackson, travelling agent of the Great Northern, was in the city the first of the week seeking to ascertain the reason for the falling off of passenger traffic on its line thru Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls.

Mr. Allen said the decrease of the past year amounted to about 45 per cent over a year ago and that the management was at loss to account for it. He interviewed a number of business men and a number of opinions were given but he declined to state what conclusion he had arrived at from the opinions advanced.

Mr. Allen also made inquiries as to the probable effect of changing the running of the trains so as to go to Crookston in the morning and back at night, the reverse of the way they now run. Along this line nearly everyone was opposed to the change as it meant lying over at Crookston all day for those who go beyond. No intimation was given of what would be done and Mr. Jackson left Tuesday for St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls to continue his investigation.

MUCH FUN ON THE PIKE

The State Fair Has Many Attractions for Amusement Lovers.

One of the departments of the Minnesota State Fair which may always be depended upon to furnish a large grist of amusement, is the Pike which will be carried on this year much the same as last except that it will be better in every particular. The Pike occupies the large enclosure on the west side of the grounds in the vicinity of the livestock department. After entering its gates one may see a large variety of free amusements including a dare devil bicycle ride and leap, or a dozen different shows covering a wide range and amusements may be entered for a small fee. Among these special shows is Switzerland, an electrical and scenic spectacle brought from the Paris exposition at great expense; Creation, the Sun Flower Belles, Katzenjammer Castle, the wild animal show and moving pictures from San Fransisco. To include all that may be seen on the Pike and to describe the shows with any particularity would require extended space. It is enough to say that the show will be of high character and that fakes have been rigidly excluded. In every pavilion comfortable opera chairs are provided for spectators.

The fair opens on Monday, Sept. 3d, and continues for one week. Half fare tickets on all railroads will be on sale on the Saturday previous so that all may reach the cities for the great events of opening day.

A. L. COLE CAN'T AROUSE ENTHUSIASM

St. Paul, Aug. 29—The campaign this year is most notable because of its lethargy. Though ten weeks have passed since the Duluth convention, there is no evidence of activity. Candidate Cole has been a distinct "frost." In the first place he is utterly lacking is personal magnetism and enthusiasn, and is not the kind of a man to easily make friends or arouse interest in his cause. These serious handicaps are acknowleged by his managers, although they claim that there is some sort of "a quiet dignity" about Mr. Cole that is going to bring recruits to his cause "after he gets acquainted." Nevertheless there has been an apparent studied effort to prevent the voters from becoming familiar with the candidate's virtues and "quiet dignity." Mr. Cole has made but one public utterance in the ten weeks he has posed as the standard-bearer of his party. This was his acceptance at Duluth—an effort hardly worth dignifying as a "speech." It was an admixture of thoughts on various things, poorly worded and most unhappily expressed. And then his reference to the Madison commoner, whom by the grace of Tom Shevlin and the corporations he had defeated, was far from being dignified and graceful tribute the occasion demanded. It might have been intended as an olive branch, but it struck the average listner more like a vain-glorious boast of a corporation automation who knew he had beaten a better man by the power and money of his creators.

Then, too, Republican ardor was dampened when it became generally known that Mr. Cole was a neophyte in the service of the Republican cause. It is doubtful if twelve delegates to the state convention knew that Cole was one of the most ardent Bryan and Towne supporters of the campaigns of 1896 and 1900, and if they had been fully advised of the fact that he was an eleventh-hour Republican there is little question but that some other man would be candidate for governor. If Mr. Cole had a resonable excuse for the desertion of Democracy the situation would not be so critical, but it is hard to understand how a free silver low tariff and anti-imperialistic exhorter of 1900 can consistantly take an opposite opinion on all those questions in 1906. Many good men of both parties changed political alignment in 1896, when the party platform shifted moorings, but these were changes prompted by sincere conviction. But, how, pray, are we to account for the strange mutations of politics that make the Bryan exhorter of 1900 the Republican candidate for governor in 1906?

Candidate Cole's legislative record is not developing any campaign thunder. About the only feature of his work in the lower house that "sticks" is his "state developement" idea–an issue that is no more political than the notion that every child should go to school, or that every citizen should boost his own state as a matter of duty to general welfare. Some ten days ago the Republican press gave it out that Mr Cole was "father" of the new timber trespass law, but the wind was taken out of this claim by Hon. L. O. Teigem, a Republican member of the house from Jackson County. Mr. Teigen says that Hon. R. O. Jefferson of Cottonwood is the author of the bill, and that Mr. Cole was not conspicuous even as a champion of the measure. Whenever the press bureau "points with pride" to Cole's magnificent record, the house journal turns up and disputes the claim. At the time the legislature adjourned, although he had served two sessions, Mr. Cole was not hailed with popular acclaim as a tribune of the common people, nor was his name identified with a prominent measure. Perhaps a hundred members were better known. Yet, since he has become a candidate for governor by the courtesy of the "interests" the party organs have discovered numerous virtues heretofore hidden from public view.

A LARGE NUMBER PASSED

County Superintendent Receives Returns from State Examinations.

The returns from state examinations held at the summer school for Red Lake County, show a much larger percentage of success among applicants than at any ever held in the county. There were 10 first grade certificates and 56 second grade certificates received, a total of 66 out of 115 applicants. The highest number ever issued at any time before was 47 and at no time have there been more than 3 or 4 first grade certificates issued. The following are those receiving first grade certificates: Edith Quist, Thief River Falls, Olga Iverson, Brooks; Florence Columbus, Red Lake Falls; Katie McAnulty, Red Lake Falls; Lydia Anderson, St. Hilaire; Bertha LaFreniere, Red Lake Falls; Constance Nordblad, Gadsky; Gertrude Meehan, Thief River Falls; Helen Rankin, Middle River; Ida Bjorge, Thief River Falls.

Monkey Language.

Some years ago Professor Garner stated that monkeys had a language of their own. To prove it, he went to Africa, studied the monkey in its native haunts and came back with a vocabulary of 62 words. These words or sounds, when articulated before a cage of apes in Central Park, New York, instantly drew their attention and the animals chattered back to the Professor. Today golden grain belt beer is the home beverage. It is the guide post to the cheerful temperament and a good disposition. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

WEEK'S HISTORY IN EPITOME

ALL THE NEWS THAT IS WORTH TELLING CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

At the Capital.

The government printing office is acquitted in a report just made public of the charge of undue delay in sending final prints of bills to congress at the close of the recent session. The conclusion reached was that the time consumed was "not unreasonable, but rather positively expeditious."

After a month of hard work Assistant Secretary Oliver F. Ward concluded that he had finally adjusted the appropriation of $700,000 for pay of the militia at the maneuvers, but it appears that all is not satisfactory. In some cases more state troops than had been given in the schedules were sent into the camps. No attempt to make an adjustment at this time will be made as nothing definite is known.

Personal Mention.

Frederick Fairbanks, son of Vice President Fairbanks, was convicted at Salem, Mass., of running an automobile at illegal speed in Manchester, and was fined $10.

Jay C. Morse, at one time president of the Illinois Steel company, and brother-in-law of the late Senator M. A. Hanna, died at Cleveland of complication of diseases, which has made him an invalid for over a year.

At the British medical congress at Toronto Dr. Barbi, an East Indian, spoke strongly against eating meat. His people for thousands of years had not eaten meat, he said, and today they were as strong physically and mentally as any other race.

Dr. A. F. Morris of New York, one of the best known automobile enthusiasts in the country, died at his country home along the Pequest creek in Warrant county, N. J. He was thirty-eight years old. A year ago Dr. Morris had a serious accident while automobiling, and he never fully recovered from injuries he received at that time.

Albert G. Lane, one of the most widely known educators in the West, died at his home in Chicago following an attack of nervous prostration. Mr. Lane was born and educated in Chicago. He was at one time president of the National Education association and of the Illinois State Teachers' association. He was sixty-five years of age.

Foreign.

A child has died at Berlin apparently of cholera. The authorities, who are making an investigation, say that an outbreak of cholera is improbable.

The Japanese government notified the foreign governments that Tairon (the new Japanese name for Port Dalny) will be a free port from Sept. 1.

The postmen, who struck at Bombay Aug. 15 for increased pay, with the result that the deliveries of mail were almost stopped, have surrendered, and the majority of the men were re-engaged.

The investigations of the Italian police in connection with the arrest at Marseilles of an anarchist named Cirillo disclose the existence of a plot in Rome against President Fallieres or King Victor Emanuel.

The earl of Leven and Melville, lord high commissioner of the general assembly of the Church of Scotland and keeper of the privy seal of Scotland, died in London. He was born in 1835.

The assassins of Milbourn and Thurston, the two Americans employed as collectors in the Dominican custom house service, who were killed recently near Las Matas, have been arrested at Port au Prince, Haiti. Their extradition is demanded by the Dominican government. Thurston was a St. Paul man.

Criminal.

W. A. Davidson, a well known cattleman living on Crow creek in Chouteau county, near Chinook, Mont., was shot and killed by a man named George Ward, presumed to be crazy. The murderer gave himself up and was taken to Fort Benton for a hearing.

Twelve persons lost their lives in the waters about New York in one day last week. Most of the victims were bathers. A number of heroic rescues of imperiled swimmers were made, and these reduced what would otherwise have been a much larger death list.

One day in jail was the sentence imposed by Judge I. Mullins of Denver on Charles Pennington for killing his wife, Anastasia Pennington, with his fist. The testimony in Pennington's case showed the woman was intoxicated and quarrelsome when Pennington struck her in the face with his fist, causing her weak heart to cease beating.

Leaving a note which stated that he had been unhappy for thirty-two years, Alfred Johnson, sixty-two years old, committed suicide at Helena, Mont., by taking laudanum.

E. R. Abernathy, deputy sheriff of Littleton, Ala., was shot in that place by a negro prisoner and died shortly afterward. The negro was handcuffed when he fired the fatal shot.

George Wolfe, proprietor of the Hotel Nickel at South Bend, Ind., is missing. A shortage of $10,000 is alleged by creditors, principally brewers.

Casualty.

The kitchen of the Newport News, Va., soldiers' home was burned at a loss of $60,000. The home was saved with difficulty.

E. W. Pegg of Mondamin, Iowa, while trying to hive a swarm of bees, was stung by a bee and died within thirty minutes.

Accidentally shot in the leg, an unidentified young Irishman, fifty miles from surgical aid, bled to death at Turtle River, Man.

The clothing store of B. Rafael and the dry goods store of M. D. F. Coons at Nanticoke, Pa., were destroyed by fire. Loss, $60,000; partly insured.

Three boys used a powder house at Yreka, Cal., as a rifle target rack and were blown to pieces, together with everything within for acres around.

L. W. Kaiser, Harry Sweeny and Oscar Denure were drowned at Freeport, Ill., by the capsizing of their launch. Three others were rescued.

Seven persons were injured in the explosion of a gasoline stove at the home of J. M. Kaniel, in Chicago. Three of the injured are in critical condition.

Arthur Gore, a young man employed on construction work by the Newton & Northwestern electric road at Boone, Iowa, was instantly killed by slipping from a car.

Floods in Arizona and southern parts of California, as a result of cloudbursts, have completely tied up the transcontinental lines of the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific.

Miss Henrietta Summers, eighteen, and considered one of the prettiest girls in Cedar Rapids, is dead as the result, it is alleged, of wearing a steel corslet which was too small for her.

Mistaking her fourteen-year-old daughter for a burglar, Mrs. W. F. Kiseler of Taylorsville, Ill., sent three revolver bullets entirely through the girl's body. The injuries may prove fatal.

A Western Ohio interurban car jumped the track while going at full speed at Cridersville, Ohio, killing three and injuring over twenty. The car ran off the curve and crashed into a residence.

The Twentieth Century Limited, east-bound, on the Lake Shore, was wrecked near Elyria, Ohio. The train ran into an open switch at the junction with the Baltimore & Ohio. No one was badly injured.

One man was killed and three injured by a premature explosion of dynamite at the Deering Harvester plant in South Chicago. Supt. Joseph Molet of the plant had his legs and arms blown off and his eyes torn from his head by the blast. He died soon afterward.

Two Italian laborers are dead, two are dying and fifteen are lying injured in the Charlotte house at Charlotte, Mich., as a result of an accident on the Michigan railroad. A work train crew was relaying tracks and the engine of the train in some unexplained way was backed into the train while the fifty laborers on the work train were eating their dinner.

Otherwise.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth has accepted an invitation to unveil the monument statue to William McKinley at Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 14.

Chicago may be chosen as the site of a $100,000 temple and sanitarium which the supreme lodge of the negro Knights of Pythias purposes to erect.

A. G. Lee has written John R. Rockefeller that citizens have named the "finest farm in Texas" near Philanthropy, Tex., the "Rockefeller Farm." It contains 29,000 acres. The oil magnate has been asked to visit the place. Lee is the controlling owner.

"With an aeroplane, which Dr. Julian P. Thomas of New York and myself have hit upon, a person will be able to fly from here to Pittsburg and return with ease," said Maj. Charles J. S. Miller of Franklin, Pa. "We expect to attain a speed of forty-five miles an hour or better."

Strictly Feminine.

"I asked the young lady graduate who took the medal for the best debate why the logic of her side appealed to her."

"What did she say?"

"She said 'Because.'"

The Place for Speed.

INSURRECTION IN WESTERN CUBA

PRESIDENT PALMA ORDERS AN INCREASE IN NUMBER OF RURAL GUARDS.

OPEN WAR IN THE CAUCASUS

DAILY FIGHTS RESULT IN HEAVY LOSSES TO TARTARS AND RUSSIANS.

Havana, Aug. 22.—The increasing uneasiness over insurrectionary manifestations in the western part of Cuba were quieted to a slight degree last evening by a decree of President Palma appointing Gen. Rafael Montalvo secretary of public works, to be in direct charge of all military operations against the insurgents. President Palma also decreed the increase of the rural guards to 4,000, the number contemplated in the bill introduced at the last session of congress. Many men who served as officers in the Cuban revolutions against Spain yesterday visited or telegraphed to President Palma, tendering their services for the suppression of the insurrection.

Reinforcements Sent Out.

A special train last night took 100 rural guards from Santa Clara and 50 artillerymen from Havana to Pinar del Rio. Not even the railroad officials have been informed of the precise point of disembarkation of these forces.

More Arrests Made.

Several more arrests were made yesterday in Havana of persons suspected of aiding the insurrection. Some small quantities of arms and ammunition have been seized.

The house and senate yesterday, after a conference with Secretary of State O'Farrell, adopted a resolution declaring that the members would endeavor to secure jointly and personally the re-establishment of order.

What Will Uncle Sam Do?

There is considerable discussion as to whether, in the event of Cuba being unable to suppress the insurrection, she should ask the United States for assistance or whether the United States may not intervene under the terms of the Platt amendment without such request being preferred. In the meantime the government assumes that it is entirely able to cope with the situation, although the condition of unrest may continue for several weeks.

CZAR IS KEPT IN THE DARK.

His Inability to Comprehend Conditions Cause of Turmoil.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 22.—Advices received here from the southwestern section of the Caucasus show that the fighting in the districts bordering on the Persian frontier has now assumed the dignity of a regular war, with daily engagements, resulting in heavy losses both to the Tartars and to the Russian troops. The Armenians chiefly figure as the victims, being unable to wage even a successful defense against the well-armed Tartars, who are organized and trained on military lines and do not fear to meet the Russian forces in open fight when the latter are not accompanied by artillery.

Czar Kept in Dark.

Moscow, Aug. 22.—In an interview yesterday Alexander J. Guchkoff, who is regarded as one of the strongest and most capable conservative liberals in Russia, and who has many times been mentioned as the natural premier in a conservative cabinet outside of the beaurocratic circles, spoke in a despondent tone of the future. He said:

"There can be no doubt of the emperor's good intentions. The great misfortune is that he does not comprehend the situation. The influences which hedge him about are such that it is impossible for him to understand what is going on in the country, and he is constantly forced to take action upon false premises.

"The fact that the emperor is constantly in the dark regarding the true state of affairs is responsible for the hopelessness of the outlook."

Statistics in Crimson.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 22.—Last week's statistics show that fifty-eight officials were murdered and forty-three were wounded in Russia proper; that fifty bomb depots were discovered; that six safes were riddled of money and that sixty-three persons were robbed. These official figures do not take into account the pillage in the country, nor do they give the number of military excursions or arrests of agitators and revolutionists, and there are no figures showing the number of persons sent into exile.

Epidemic of Scarlet Fever.

Marquette, Mich., Aug. 22.—Mass City and Greenland, Ontonagon county, have a bad epidemic of scarlet fever. Thirty-five cases have developed, five of which have terminated fatally, all the victims being children.

Dies at Age of 120.

Ottawa, Kan., Aug. 22.—Mahala Lewis, a negress, said to be 120 years old, died here last night. She could tell many incidents in the life of George Washington, whom she insisted she had seen many times

FIRST REPORTS EXAGGERATED

DEATHS IN ENTIRE COUNTRY MAY REACH THOUSANDS—LOSS $300,000.

The earthquakes in Chile have ceased, the resultant fires have been extinguished and the people of Valparaiso and Santiago are taking organized steps to relieve suffering, care for the wounded and bury the dead.

Dispatches received from Chile yesterday tend to show that the first estimates of casualties and material damage had been greatly exaggerated and that the people of Valparaiso are becoming calmer. The fear of further shocks has been removed by a statement issued by the observatory, and yesterday it became possible for the first time to organize relief work and a systematic search of the ruins for the dead.

Dead May Reach Thousands.

The number of dead in Valparaiso will doubtless run into the hundreds and for the entire country probably into the thousands. The property damage is estimated at from two to three hundred million dollars.

Relief is being organized with system, and the government has taken complete control. The foreign legations are active in their relief measures, as are private persons, and the greatest energy is being devoted to getting in supplies for the destitute. The government has authorized the provincial governors to spend all money necessary for the relief of the needy in their districts.

Commercial Crisis Feared.

The troops are maintaining perfect order. Hospital and medical supplies are being sent to Valparaiso from Santiago. A commercial crisis is feared and very little business is being done.

The English firms located at Valparaiso do not appear to have sustained heavy loss, and it does not appear that any foreigners have been killed.

Everything Is in Ruins.

Buenos Ayres, Aug. 22.—A dispatch has been received here from Valparaiso, sent by the manager of the Havas agency at Santiago, who traveled from Santiago to Valparaiso on horseback. He says that in Valparaiso everything is in ruins and that the losses cannot be calculated.

1,000 Corpses Disposed Of.

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 22.—Refugees arriving here from Valparaiso declare that 1,000 corpses already have been cast into the ocean. The authorities are taking severe measures to maintain order. Twenty-five pillagers have been shot.

Robinson Crusoe's Island Gone.

New York, Aug. 22.—A report reached this city that the South American earthquake destroyed the island of Juan Fernandez, off the Chilean coast. It belonged to Chile and on it were a penal settlement and a fort.

This is the island made famous by Daniel Defoe as the scene of the thrilling adventures of Robinson Crusoe.

VESSEL SINKS ON REEF.

The Manchuria struck, bow on, during a heavy rain storm, about 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning. She was considerably out of her course.

It was total darkness when the Manchuria struck the rocks, but there was no panic on board.

The position of the Manchuria is not believed to be one of immediate danger. It is now believed that she has sustained little damage, but lightening her cargo may be necessary to float her.

The passengers, numbering nearly 200, are being landed at Waimans, and most of them will be brought to Honolulu over the Pali road.

May Be a Total Loss.

Honolulu, Aug. 22.—It is the general impression now that the Pacific Mail liner Manchuria, which ran on a reef off Rabbit island before daylight yesterday morning, is hopelessly aground and may be a total loss.

CHINESE LABOR FOR CANAL.

Commission Issues Specifications for Bids.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Specifications for bids to furnish Chinese labor for the construction of the Panama canal were issued yesterday by the isthmian canal commission. The basis for bidding is invitations for 2,500 coolies, although it is made clear that the commission may call for such additional numbers of Chinese laborers as it may need should the experiment be successful, but the number shall not exceed 2,000 per month. All proposals must be received not later than 10 a. m., Sept. 20, at which time they will be opened. The usual conditions regulating the competitive bidding for government supplies is prescribed by the specifications.

CZAR MAKES BOLD BID FOR SUPPORT

WILL ORDER DISTRIBUTION OF MILLIONS OF ACRES TO PEASANTS.

JEWS FLEE FROM SIEDLCE

EVENTS THERE SHAPING FOR OUTBREAK LIKE THAT AT BIALYSTOK.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 25.—An important series of conferences began last night at Peterhof on the question of the immediate distribution of the crown lands and appanages to the peasants, in an attempt to find a partial solution of the agrarian question by measurably appeasing the land hunger of the peasantry, and the Associated Press is now in a position to announce that the government has definitely decided to proceed with the original plan for settling the agrarian question, regardless of parliament, and go to the country upon the issue at the coming election.

Will Distribute Land.

The agrarian question is no longer open. Within a fortnight an imperial ukase will be issued directing the agrarian commission to begin the distribution of 1,800,000 dessiatines (a dessiatine is about two and one-half acres) belonging to the appanages, 4,000,000 dessiatines belonging to the crown and 2,000,000 dessiatines of land offered to or purchased through the Peasants' bank. Only the forests and lands belonging to the state, the preservation of which is considered necessary for the future agricultural prosperity of the country, will be reserved.

Financial Scheme.

The transaction will be financed by the Peasants' bank. Little cash will be required. The landlords and other sellers will be given marketable land scrip, eventually redeemable by the peasant purchasers in installment notes designed to meet the interest and amortization. The emperor will not give the land of the imperial family as a free gift, but, like other landlords, he will accept scrip. Moreover, it is believed that no parliament will ever dare to repeal this temporary law. Nearly all the present restrictions upon the peasants as a class will also be removed. This is in substance the government's bold bid for the support of the Russian peasant millions against the propaganda of the revolutionists.

Fear Duplicate of Bialystok.

There is great alarm in Jewish circles in Russia over developments at Siedlce, Poland, where events seem to be shaping up for the outbreak of a pogrom similar to that at Bialystok. The developments parallel almost exactly the preliminaries of the Bialystok massacre. A long series of revolutionary and terroristic signs have been attributed by the police to the Jews, culminating, as was the case at Bialystok, in the assassination of Chief of Police Goltseff.

Great Demonstration.

The funeral of M. Goltseff yesterday was the occasion of a great demonstration by the Russian population. The condition of feeling is shown by the refusal of Goltseff's widow to receive a wreath sent by a Jewish society as a mark of its disapproval of the assassination. A similar incident occurred at Bialystok.

It now develops that after the explosion of a bomb in a street of the Hebrew quarter, and which, according to the official explanation, was accompanied by revolver firing from four Jewish houses, the troops opened a general fusillade, in which seven Jews and one Christian were killed and many wounded.

Jews Flee in Panic.

Thirty-three Jews were arrested on the spot on suspicion of complicity in the bomb throwing and firing. The Jews in panic are now fleeing from the city.

Excesses are increasing, and sporadic disorders are reported in the provinces of Moscow, Yaroslav, Volhynia, Simbirsk, Kazan and Yekaterinoslav.

Premier Stolypin has sent a circular to all governors ordering them to employ the most energetic measures to prevent the peasantry from taking possession of private estates, to which they are being incited by the revolutionists.

FAILS TO LAND BURGLARS

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 25.—After an exciting eleven-mile chase a posse of thirty men from this city captured three men supposed to be the Mentor and Halsted burglars. They were entering the village of Fisher about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon and had left the station here yesterday morning and immediately started toward the country.

Upon examination it was found that the suspects were harvest hands going to Dakota, and they were released. The posse is now on its way back to the city.

The posse started from Crookston yesterday morning on receipt of a telephone message from Halsted that the postoffice there was robbed of $30 in silver and $400 in stamps last night at 2 o'clock. The burglars secured entrance through a side door. No clue has been found regarding the robbers, who eveidently were the same gang that robbed the bank at Mentor and the store here.

FIND WOMAN LOST IN WOODS.

Mrs. Qsworth Is in Pitiful Plight When Rescued.

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 25.—Lost for thirty-six hours in the woods, her clothing in shreds and her hands and face scratched by brush and nearly overcome by hunger and exhaustion, Mrs. George Osworth, of Trout Creek was found by a searching party after great difficulty. The woman had gone berrying with a young woman companion. The latter returned home early, expecting that Mrs. Osworth would follow her later on. When night fell and she had not returned a searching party started out to look for her. They scoured the woods all night and the following morning, and at noon discovered the woman in a pitiful plight.

FARMERS NEEED MORE MEN.

Work in Harvest Fields for 40,000 More.

St. Paul, Aug. 25.—Rreports show harvest fields are short all the way from 25,000 to 40,000 men, and that those now helping to move the crops are working overtime to make up for the lack of laborers. The Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Soo, especially for the last few weeks, have been advertising extensively for men in Illinois, Ohio, Indiana and other Eastern points, but the results are not so good as could be wished for.

ONIONS BRING PROSPERITY.

Iowa Crop Is Largest Ever Raised and Market Is Good.

Eldora, Iowa, Aug. 25.—The onion crop in Iowa this fall will be the largest ever raised and will enable some of the farmers to pay some of their mortgages, will help to erect new homes and in many ways furnish revenue to bring comforts, necessities and wealth to a large number of raisers. Over at Pleasant Valley, in Scott county, the crop is going to yield as high as 600 to 900 bushels to the acre. Eighty cents is the current price per bushel.

DIAMONDS DISCOVERED.

SUSPECTS A RUSSIAN TRICK.

What Do the Latter's Activities at Aland Island Mean?—A Strange Filibustering Story.

In spite of the fact that Russia is at present so much occupied with her internal troubles, there are people who think that she is finding time to look after interests beyond her own dominions. Therefore it has created a certain amount of unrest in some quarters that a Russian military force, as yet very small in numbers, has been placed on Aland, the island in the Baltic half way between Sweden and Finland.

According to the treaty of Paris, 1856. Russia undertook not to erect any fortifications on this island or to build any military or naval establishments there. The question which arises now is if the present military activities on Aland can be termed a violation of the treaty. As your readers will remember a negative answer to a question asked in the house of commons has been given by the English government. As far as I have been able to ascertain it will be very difficult to class them as military or naval "establishments," which is the term employed in the treaty and by which must be understood arrangements of a more or less permanet kind. As yet there are only 800 men and their housing is of the simplest and most casual nature. Torpedo craft are constantly scouring the waters in the neighborhood archipelago, but this is explained by the Russians as well as the troups on shore as a necessary precaution against the continued smuggling of arms into Finland.

Whether the wireless telegraph station, recently constructed on Aland, can be considered a "military establishment" in the meaning of the treaty or not, is a question perhaps not so easily solved. Such a thing, of course, could not have been foreseen by the signatories of 1856. A great many sensational reports are circulated about this matter, but I am able to state that in leading circles one does not view these arrangements as far as they have yet proceeded with any apprehension or alarm. It would be another thing if uRssia should show any desire to extend them and make them permanent. It is therefore a matter of course that everything connected with it is followed with the greatest interest here.

It is also a matter of course that England must attach the greatest importance to it and watch over the Aland incident. If Russia really should intend to create a naval base on Aland, from which to strike a blow against Sweden, this blow would in fact only be directed against us as the shortest cut to reach Norway and thus an Atlantic ice-free port. Sweden itself would be of no great advantage to Russia, even if it could be taken, which is very unlikely with its present navy and army, and of Baltic ports Russia has as good and better than Sweden.

OLAF'S SUNBEAM.

His Estate on Godoe Is Very Beautiful.

The story of Sunbeam (Solstraalel) island, which Miss Ada Musgrove has presented to the little Crown Prince Olaf of Norway, is one the the curious interest.

Sunbeam island, or Fortin Bras, as it is now going to be called, is about 20,000 square yards in size, and is situated in the lovely Godoe sound, a famous summer resort three hours' sail from Bergen.

About fifteen years ago John Musgrove, an Englishman, spent the summer at Godoe sound and bought the island, which was then a complete wilderness. He imported new turf mold and worked hard until the island had a wood of about 2,000 trees.

He also built a comfortable, roomy house and a small waterworks. The garden of the house is beautifully arranged with small ponds and greens.

Mr. Musgrove lived with a relative on this fairy island, the views from which are impressive and romantic, until a few years ago, when he presented the property to Miss Ada Musgrove.

Miss Musgrove wrote to Queen Maud and asked fo rpermission to give the island to her son, and on their majesties' visit to Bergen the necessary documents, as well as a series of pictures of the island, photographed by Miss Musgrove herself, were delivered to the queen.

Fighting King Alcohol.

The eleventh international anti-alcohol congress will be held in Stockholm July 28 to Aug. 3, 1907. Bishop von Scheele, Curt Wallis and Edward Wavrinsky, grand chief of the supreme lodge of the Order of Good Templars, form a committee having in charge the arrangements for the meeting. The government has made an appropriation of 15,000 crowns ($4,000) for entertaining the delegates.

NOT A NEW PARTY.

Norwegian Government Would Not Dissolve Old Organizations.

Foreign Minister Loevland gave a detailed explanation of the government's position in relation to the coming elections for the storthing at a recent meeting of the leftist and the democratic workingmen's association at Stavanger. While the ministry asked for the support of all parties, it had no intention of forming a fusion party or of dissolving the old parties. It was proper that the old party organizations should be retained .On the other hand, the present coalition ministry had responsibilities which it could not shirk. Complete unity existed, and until certain important questions have been solved and the ship of state had been fairly brought into safe waters, it was the duty of all loyal Norwegians to support the ministry.

Therefore, when a leftist who was in sympathy with avowed program of the government was nominated, the rightists should not put up a candidate in opposition. When a former rightist was willing to stand by the present government, the leftists should not make a contest.

The three leftist members of the ministry, namely, himself, Arctander and Bothner, had been criticized for not resigning from that body, but there was no reason why they should. The ministry had been formed for a definite purpose and its object had not yet been attained. It was in reality simply a business ministry and political questions were not involved at the present time.

Mr. Loevland then outlined in detail what had been accomplished and what still remained to be done before the government could consider that its work was ended.

THE KING'S DONKEY.

An Amusing Story of a Misunderstood Signal.

Some time ago King Edward sent a donkey as a present to his little grandson, the Crown Prince Olaf of Norway. The donkey was sent by the steamer Montebello, and the captain got instructions to look well after the animal.

On arrival outside the Christiania fjord the captain signaled to the lighthouse, "All right," but received no signal "ass" on one mast and "all right" on the other. But still no reply.

As it is a very important matter that signals from vessels passing the lighthouse should be reported properly, the captain complained to the authorities. The official explanation, says our Christiania correspondent, is this: At the moment the Montebello passed the lighthouse the signal man on duty was called to the telephone, and consequently could not reply immediately, and when, after having finished the conversation at the telephone, he saw the second signal flying: "Ass, all right," he took it as a personal snub, and did not think it necessary to report it.—London Mail.

Terrific Heat in Stockholm.

Stockholm is at present mostly given over to the tourists. The Stockholmers who can afford it—and some of those who can't—are cooling themselves on the coast or drinking some vile-tasting waters at some health resort to prepare themselves for the winter campaign.

The royal family itself is spread all over the country. King Oscar is with his yacht in Marstrand, the Madeira of Sweden, where he goes every summer to bathe, sail, listen to speeches and receive the homage of the same people who have spoken, bowed and curtseyed year after year.

The crown prince is in the south of Sweden somewhere, when he is not playing tennis at Saro, another seaside resort near Gothenburg, where also Prince Charles and Princess Ingeborg have taken up their abode. Princess Margaret has gone to England with her new-born son to visit her parents, the duke and duchess of Connaught, and her husband, Prince Gustave Adolph, will soon join her. Prince Eugene is motoring in the country.

The heat in Stockholm is terrific, the greatest known for years, and, unless we soon get some rain, there will be damage done to the crops, which otherwise promise to be one of the finest ever seen in this country.

ACROSS TWO CONTINENTS.

Possibilities of Railroad Construction in the Future.

One of the dramatic railroad probabilities of this century is the establishing of through railroad service between North and South America. From New York to Buenos Ayres in a Pullman sleeper is regarded by many as one of the sure things, and some of those who have given the matter much thought predict a through service between Alaska and Patagonia. One of the principal difficulties to be encountered in this great Pan-American railroad enterprise will be the varying altitudes, ranging all the way from sea-level to several thousand feet above. This does not appeal to the average individual as feasible, but it is no less so than was the Union Pacific project in its day.

The institution will be a big one, and the intention is to utilize all of the by-products of cattle-killing.

DOG BITES MOTHER AND SON.

Brute Lacerates Boy's Arm and Thigh and Woman's Wrist.

Wallace Foster, the eleven-year-old son of C. Foster, residing on the West side, was badly bitten by a dog at Little Falls. The dog belonged to Mrs. Sophie Paterson, living in front of the Foster home.

The Fosters had been in the habit of obtaining their drinking water from the Johnson pump, and the boy was sent into the Paterson yard to get a bucket of water, when the dog, who was eating near by, suddenly sprang at him without any warning whatever, knocking him off his feet, and then fastened his teeth in the lad's forearm, tearing it considerably.

Mrs. Foster, hearing the lad scream, ran to his assistance and tried to pull the dog off, but was severely bitten in the wrist for her pains. The boy tried to break loose and the dog loosened his hold on the mother and seized the boy by the thigh again. This time, Mrs. Foster calling all the time for help, grasped the dog's ears and began to twist them. Mrs. Paterson then came up with a club and drove the dog off.

From last report both victims are doing well. The dog was soon shot by Patrolman Le Blanc.

WILL TELL THE "DOPE."

Food Department Will Have Exhibit of Patent Medicines at State Fair.

The state dairy and food department will have a patent medicine exhibit at the state fair. It will be in connection with its exhibit of adulterated foods, which will be held in the main building at the fair. The department lately has made analyses of about twenty of the most widely known patent medicines. A sample bottle of each will be shown, labeled with the results of the analyses made by the state chemist. This will give the names of the ingredients used. A bulletin giving the names and ingredients of these medicines is being printed and will be distributed by the department.

Commissioner Slater says that while some of the medicines examined did not show very dangerous drugs among the ingredients, others had ingredients which ought not to be used indiscriminately. Croton oil, strychnine, morphine and cheap alcohol have been found in many of the medicines examined.

The food exhibit which the department will make at the fair will be along the same line as the exhibit made last year, but on a much larger scale.

BIG PIKE CAPSIZES BOAT.

Two well known citzens of Delano, Mr. Bull and Mr. Holstrom, had a narrow escape from drowning in a peculiar accident which happened while they were fishing at French lake.

They were in a boat and Holstrom had successfully hooked a six-pound pike and was in the act of landing it. In the excitement incident to the big catch Holstrom stood up in the boat, and in sitting down after the pike had been safely landed in the net, he missed the seat and went head foremost into the lake. The commotion caused the skiff to turn turtle and Bull also went into the lake. Both were able to swim and managed to cling to the overturned boat until help reached them.

A queer thing about the accident was that when the tangled fishing tackle was pulled up the pike was still fastened securely to the hook. It was brought home and will be mounted as a souvenir of the adventure.

LABOR AT STATE FAIR.

Will Make Opening Day a Record for Attendance.

Opening day at the state fair, Monday, Sept. 3, is likely to be the record day for attendance. Organized labor from St. Paul and Minneapolis will meet on the grounds for the Labor day celebration, the parades, picnics and other diversions of previous years giving way to the joint celebration at the fair grounds. There will be a program of interest to the representatives of organized labor and other attractions specially arranged for them. The committee in charge has been given the use of a large tent, used heretofore for the stock amphitheater, and a band will be furnished.

Committees are working to provide attractions that will bring out everybody identified with organized labor. The fair grounds will be made the great objective point and everybody will be urged to go there. It is estimated that 40,000 persons, members and friends of organized labor in the Twin Cities, will be on the grounds.

Register of Deeds

I wish to announce that I will be a candidate before the primaries for the republican nomination for register of deeds and respectfully solicit the support of the republican voters at the election Sept. 18, —R. H. Green.

President Roosevelt is a standpatter. That's one against the candidate.

Japan has entered into a compact with the Diamond Match company to form an international trust.

Cole is a dead one and it will take more than a state development howl to galvanize him into a semblance of political life.

Now will the newspaper man be called upon to do ten times as much work as any one else for the good of the party--and without pay either.

For election purposes republicans are opposed to trusts; privately the tariff, mother of all trusts, has their first consideration. No inconsistency there, eh?

A doctor in Cleveland, Ohio, advises women of the smart set to smoke cigarettes to preserve their complexion and escape heart desease. We supposed advice of that kind unnecessary.

Bob Dunn says at least three of the candidates on the Republican state ticket will vote for Johnson. Well, you really can't blame them for voting for a live man rather than what heads the Republican ticket.

They (the people of Thief River Falls and a majority of the voters of Red Lake County) are becoming tired of officials who will not do their duty.—Thief River Falls News.

If that prince of news pirates, John Eastman, of the Thief River Falls News, isn't mighty careful he will forget himself some day and credit the Courier with some of the stuff he swipes so bodily about every week. And we really wouldn't want so cheap a guy as he to do anything he would be sorry for.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette is very anxious to cultivate a friendly feeling with this city just now and says that because there is a county seat fight in progress there should be no bitterness. In so far as the people of Thief River Falls are concerned, there is no bitterness. All that the people of this city ask is that the matter be left to the voters of Red Lake County and if 55 per cent of the voters of this county favor the removal, the county seat should be removed to this city. They do object to the chicanery of the officers of Red Lake county who have allowed the will of the people to be tramped upon, but in so far as Red Lake Falls is concerned, the people here both love and pity it.—Thief River Falls News.

See Wonderland Too.

Wonderland, the Twin City amusement Park should not be overlooked by state fair visitors. Last year fully 75 per cent of them visited the park and were delighted with it. This season $50,000 has been expended upon improvements and some of the new features are: The remodeled chutes, the Johnstown flood, Third degree, South Land, Tours of the world, Arcadia and the Mystic World

The Infant Incubator institute, where by the means of an artificial mother the lives of immature babies are saved is another feature of special interest.

Wonderland has fifty amusement attractions, and is beautifully illuminated by electricty and presents a free program of aerial and acrobatic acts, band concerts fireworks, etc. It is easily reached from the state fair grounds or from either city by taking cars by the Selby-Lake interurban.

SCROFULA AN INHERITED MISFORTUNE

Every one has a hereditary right to a pure blood supply, which insures a strong, healthy body; but how many do we see who have inherited that greatest of all misfortunes, Scrofula, and are struggling under a legacy of disease and suffering? Scrofula is a constitutional trouble handed down from parent to child, a curse from generation to generation as long as the scrofulous matter is allowed to remain in the family blood. As the very foundation of the blood is diseased we see this awful affliction manifested in many ways, such as enlarged glands or tumors about the neck, which often burst and become discharging ulcers, weak eyes, chronic Catarrh of the head, skin diseases, etc. This blighting disease being so firmly intrenched in the blood often attacks the bones, resulting in White Swelling, or hip disease, while a pallid, waxey appearance of the skin, loss of strength, and often lung affections show that the disease is entirely destroying the rich, nutritive qualities of the blood. There is but one way to cure Scrofula and that is to purify the blood and rid it of the germs of disease, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. Its purifying and building-up properties make it the ideal remedy for Scrofula. S. S. S. searches out and destroys all poisons and germs, gives strength, richness and vigor to the weak, polluted blood and cures Scrofula permanently. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable medicine, made from roots, herbs and barks and may be taken with absolute safety by young or old. It so thoroughly removes the poison from the blood that no signs of it are ever seen again and posterity is blessed with a pure blood supply. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

"Why, to be sure you have," cried the sergeant. "You've done it noble. There wasn't a man in all the Force—not one—as ever dreamed of accounting for the old party's disappearance and discovery. If you'd throw in your lot with me, you'd rise, sir."

"No," said Billery. "I'll explain. I suppose I can speak before M. Ribot?"

"Mr. Alexis Brangwyn, the cousin of the man you're watching," began Billery, "is a friend of mine, and has done me a good many kindnesses. Now, when old Mr. Brangwyn disappeared, people were so puzzled that they didn't know what to think, and there were some who thought that Aloysius had a hand in it, and some that thought Alexis had a hand in it, and some who thought the two had a hand in it together."

"I remember it all," said the sergeant, "like as if it was yesterday. There was a large sum of money involved—a matter of over half a million. Both cousins profited by the old man's death."

"Now, from the very first," Billery went on, "my suspicions pointed in the direction in which they point to-day. I knew Alexis a great deal too well to suppose that he ever conceived, and much less carried out, a murder. He's a man who wouldn't hurt a fly. And at this present moment he's suffering terribly at the idea that Aloysius is under suspicion. The bare thought of it is just wearing him into the grave."

"Is he really, now, taking it as serious as all that?" asked the sergeant.

"I assure you," said Billery, "that when I told him that the people at the Yard were on his cousin's track he fainted like a girl."

"Did he really?" said the sergeant, with a certain dryness in his voice which impressed Billery in a disagreeable way. "Them sensitive natures feels a lot more than other people."

"And what might you mean by that?" asked Billery.

"Mean?" returned the sergeant. "I don't know as I mean anything in particular. But doesn't it strike you as being rather odd now?" He leaned forward and tapped Billery on the chest. "These two gentlement has been at daggers drawn for years. Why should one of them have that tender sort of solicitude for the other, as a man might say?"

"I don't suppose," said Billery, "that there's any tenderness or friendship in the case. But it's a very old family, to begin with. The first de Brangwyn who set foot in England came over with the Conqueror and fought at Hastings. It's a pretty dreadful thing for one of them to learn that his only relative is coming to the gallows."

"Well, yes," the sergeant assented, "I suppose it is a pretty dreadful thing."

"What I am getting at," resumed Billery," is this. So far as the tracking down of the criminal is concerned I have done everything I am going to do. I am quite resolved on that. I have brought a bitter trouble on one of my best friends—a man who has treated me with the very greatest kindness, and I'm sorry that I ever had anything to do with it. You can count me out, sergeant."

"Well, sir," said the sergeant, "that's as you choose, of course. We can't allow ourselves that sort of luxury."

"Quite so," said Billery. "You've got your duty to society, but that particular duty doesn't lie on me. I'm sorry that I ever meddled with the matter."

"As a matter of fact," said the sergeant, scratching his chin in a contemplative sort of way. "I don't suppose as you could be of much practical use now, Mr. Billery. We've got material in hand to go along with, and of course we shall carry the inquiry to a finish. You might help us with regard to that there photograph." Billery shook his head with an air of decision. "It might ha' saved time, perhaps, but it can make no other sort of difference, I suppose you've quite made up your mind?"

"Yes," said Billery, "I've quite made up my mind. I'm not cut out for that sort of work. I was very keen on it at first, but now I wish I'd let the thing alone."

"Very well, sir," said the sergeant, rising. "In that case it's no use for me to stop here and waste your time any longer. I'll say good afternoon, Mr. Billery."

"Good afternoon," said Billery, and the sergeant and his Parisian colleague walked down stairs and into the street together. They walked in silence for a hundred yards or so, and then the Englishman tapped his companion on the shoulder and brought him to a momentary halt.

"What's your idea about that move, Ribot?"

"I do not know enough about the people concerned," the Frenchman answered. "What of this cousin?"

"Oh, he's all right enough," said the sergeant. "There's nothing against him. He was the old gentleman's favorite, and he seems to have lost something like ten or twelve thousand a year by his death. The old boy's will was being altered in his favor when he was made away with. But about this Billery? Did you take in the yarn he pitched just now?"

"I see nothing to doubt in it," said M. Ribot. "I have brought a few to the guillotine in my time, and I am case-hardened. But I can understand that an amateur might feel like that, especially where a friend is concerned. What shall we do about this question of identification?"

"The quickest way would be to bring old rag and bottle Johnny over here. I'd arrange for him to get a sight of the man we're after."

"Good," said M. Ribot. "I go back to-morrow, and I can lay my hand upon him at any moment."

CHAPTER X.

Aloysius Brangwyn, all unconscious of the net which was being drawn about him, spent his days chiefly in the retirement of the riverside villa he had taken over from Truscott. He was rarely seen abroad, and did not often walk for exercise till after nightfall. He made no acquaintances and paid no calls, and mainly occupied himself in a small room which he had converted into a studio, where he painted, modelled, wrote or read, as the fancy took him. Some half-dozen of the village children knew their way to this small room, and sat to him as models. He was a generous paymaster, and very patient, gentle, and unexacting with his sitters, but he was curiously taciturn, and they were a good deal in awe of him at first. But since it was his plan to have two or three of them together and to set them to play until he could sketch them in some unconscious group or happy individual pose, their fear of him gradually wore away, and passers-by would sometimes hear peals of childish laughter issuing from his workroom.

He was a swift and dextrous workman, but he seemed to have no heart to finish anything to which he set his hand. The shelves which he had had fitted to the wall were littered with dozens of sketches in wax or clay, most of them extremely minute, but scarcely one had been carried to anything like completion. Sometimes he would sit for an hour quite motionless, save when he flicked the ash from the end of his cigar, looking at the romping children who had grown unmindful of his presence. Then some attitude would strike him and he would draw his materials toward him and work in a sort of silent fury until he had roughed out his idea. Then the children always were silent for a time and watched his broad-tipped, supple fingers as he built the figure into life, and they seemed to find in his work an unfailing source of interest and wonder. When the working fit was over he would fall into an oblivion of their presence until a knock at the door heralded the arrival of the maid who attended to his wants, with news that the midday meal awaited him. That was a signal for his sitters to disperse, and for days together, except to smoke or eat or drink, he did not open his lips.

He had lived this strange life for a month or more when an accident took him back to the world again. Two of his young models were brother and sister, and on a certain morning they presented themselves with traces of tears upon their cheeks. He took no note at first, but sat in one of his abstracted fits until the sound of a smothered sob reached his ear. He shrank as if it hurt him, and looking at the children he saw that both of them were crying.

"Come to me," he said, in that soft, musical, rarely-heard voice of his. "What is the matter, dears?"

At this note of sympathy both boy and girl broke into open weeping, and for awhile neither could explain the cause of his grief. He took them both between his knees, and laid a consoling arm about them. At last one of them sobbed out the news that dadda had broken his leg since their last visit, and mother was crying at home because they were all going to the workhouse. The children of the poor have a precocious acquaintance with the ills of poverty, and those mites knew the errand of the surly stranger who was sitting by the hearth at home. The whole story came out. Mother and father had both been ill and the rent had fallen in arrear, and father had been out of work for some weeks before his accident. "And if you please, sir," said the girl, who was the elder of the two, "we haven't had any money for a fortnit but what you've given us for coming to play here."

"Dear me," said Aloysius, in a pitying tone. "Take me home, you poor little things, and let me see if I can help you."

Such of the villagers as were abroad saw "the hermit," as they had begun to call him, with a childish hand in either of his own making his way to the scene of distress. He walked rapidly, and the children trotted at his side.

"This is our house, sir," said the girl, pointing to a comfortable little cottage a score of yards away. He suffered them to lead him through the open door, and found himself in the presence of a bloated and beery-looking person who sat sucking at an empty pipe, and a woman who, with an apron thrown over her head, rocked herself to and fro in an abandonment of grief. "Mother," said the child, "here's the gentleman."

The man in possession rose and knuckled at his forehead, and the woman withdrawing the apron from her head revealed a comely young face all beslobbered with tears. She bobbled a curtsy at the visitor and wiped her streaming eyes.

"Your children tell me you are in trouble," said Aloysius. "You must let me see if I can help you."

"Heaven bless you, sir," said the woman. "We're in dreadful trouble. We're being sold up, sir, and my man's lying upstairs with a broken leg. We've had a hard fight for it for a long time, and we've always tried to be decent and respectable, and it's a bitter hard thing for folks as have been well brought up to come to the workus."

"Yes, yes, yes," said Aloysius. "Bitterly hard it must be, to be sure. But there, now, don't cry any more, my good woman. Don't cry any more."

He glanced about the room and saw that it was scrupulously neat and clean, though very sparsely furnished The woman noted the glance.

"We've had to part with most of our bits of things, sir, and that's what brought the landlord down on us before it's all gone."

"Dear me, dear me," said Aloysius; "your husband is a sober man, I hope."

"Oh, yes, sir," the woman answered. "He's a totaler, sir, and has been all his lifetime."

"And a steady workman?" asked the visitor.

"There isn't a harder worker in the parish, sir," said the beery man. "Anybody'll tell you that about him."

"Dear me, dear me," said Aloysius again. "You're in possession, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir," the man answered. "It's an unpleasant job, sir, but work's scarce, and somebody's got to do it.'

"Well," Aloysius asked, "how much do you want?"

"Two pound ten and costs, sir. Altogether three pound twelve and six."

"You are authorized to give a receipt?"

"Yes, sir."

"Make it out," said Aloysius, drawing out a big, careless handful of gold, silver and copper from his pocket. "There you are. Now you can go about your business, and there's trouble number one disposed of. Now, you'll let me have a look at your good man, will you, ma'am?"

For sole answer the woman plumped into a chair and broke into a storm of sobs. Aloysius walked to the door and stood looking out into the lane until the violence of her emotion was over.

"I beg your pardon, sir," she sobbed, "keeping you standing all this while."

"Nonsense," said the recluse. "Nonsense. Now, come, come; you've nothing to cry for. You must learn to control yourself."

"I'll try, sir," the woman answered humbly. "I hope heaven'll bless you all your days, sir."

"Ah!" said Aloysius, "let us hope so. I must be going, and I want to see your husband."

"Yes, sir. I'll just run up beforehand for a minute, and see if he's all tidy, sir."

Again Aloysius strolled to the door and looked out upon the lane until the woman called him.

"This way, if you please sir."

He mounted, and she ushered him into a spotless little bedroom with white curatins at the window and two pots of geranium on the sill.

"This is the invalid, is it?" he asked, looking at the recumbent figure in the bed. "Is he in much pain, poor fellow?"

"He's been very bad, sir, and he's a good deal run down."

(To Be Continued.)

A Bunch of Holes.

"My firm has patented a name for a new summer shirtwaist," said the female drummer who sells white goods of all descriptions.

"It's the 'Swiss cheese,' and no one need ask what's in a name hereafter. This new shirtwaist can be best described as a bunch of holes surrounded by delicate embroidery.

"We are putting out another new shirtwaist named 'The Maiden's blush.' It is mighty effective, too. If it becomes the fashion I will sell blinkers, blinders and eyeshades for the men as a side issue."

Tragic.

The man lay prone upon the pavement. Blood trickled from a ragged gash in his throat and formed in a little pool near his head.

There were no marks of violence—nothing to show how the man had come by the accident. For a minute the great detective was baffled. Suddenly a strange light shone in his keen gray eyes, while a smile of satisfaction played about his lips.

"Have you discovered how the man's throat was cut?" they asked.

"Yes. He's wearing a collar that's been to the laundry twice."

Unfortunate Expression.

Mrs. Kute—So you were successful in that business deal, after all?

Mr. Kute (gleefully)—Yes; and I tell you, it was quite a feather in my cap, too.

Mrs. Kute—Ah! yes; a feather in your cap. That reminds me; you'll be able to afford lots of feathers on that hat you promised me; won't you, dear?

What Is It?

"When I first came to New York and saw the odd photographs reproduced in the newspapers I was stirred to make an effort to obtain something of the kind for my own photographic record. I have only a small, fixed focus camera, but it nevertheless does excellent work and gives most satisfactory results.

"I took the accompanying picture while going up the Hudson one day in July, when the sky was partly clouded. I was standing a little forward of the middle of the side of the steamer, on the deck, where I could easily see the foam below, ploughed up by the boat in its course. I held my camera downward, over the rail, and took a snapshot of the water rushing by. Somebody a little in front of me had evidently found a comfortable resting place for her feet, for one can see the toes of the shoes between the lower part of the rail and the edge of the deck."

If one looks directly downward at the picture it appears very realistic, and tempts one to make more experiments in taking "freaks."

Hat on a Long Journey.

An old derby hat passed through here yesterday for a trip over the Wells-Fargo express lines. The hat was started from Omaha, and was shipped from there to St. Joseph, and afterward to Topeka. It was sent west from here.

It was marked and supposed to be the property of Judge Rooney of Omaha, and bore a tag, with instructions to all agents to forward it on the long journey over the lines of the express company.

At each station where the hat stops the agent puts the tag of his office on the hat and sends it on. After it has traveled several thousand miles it will be covered with tags until it will be almost impossible to find the color, and tags will be pasted upon tags, on the inside and on the outside and every tag will bear a different office stamp.

This is one of the various ways the messengers have just to pass away the time, and often such articles travel around the world. These packages pass through often, and if one has traveled very far it is oftimes difficult to know what the article originally was.—Topeka Capital.

Bread 4,000 Years Old

People whose digestion is at fault are often very clamorous for stale bread, but even the most chronic dyspeptic would fight shy of tackling the loaf of bread here illustrated. It is supposed to be over 4,000 years old, having been baked in Egypt about 2,500 B. C. It was found among a mass of rubbish in the ruins of the Royal palace at Dei-el-Bahri on the Nile.

Wise Suggestion.

There are still remote districts in Austria where the country apothecary acts as a doctor and uses the old fashioned remedies, says the Wiener Witzblatt. Recently one of these elderly practitioners was summoned in haste to see a postilion who was down with fever. The apothecary had had a long sitting in the village beer house, and left his boon companions reluctantly.

He prescribed leeches for his patient, and as the latter's wife didn't seem to understand what to do with them he undertook to put them on the patient's legs himself. But in spite of all his efforts, the leeches refused to stick, and finally the doctor's patience was exhausted and he was about to give up the job, when his wife, who had been watching him with a gaping mouth, suddenly said: "Wouldn't it be better, Herr Doctor, if my husband's leather breeches were taken off first?"

WONDERS OF THE WIRELESS.

Soundless Whispers Soon to Reach the Ends of the Earth.

All the far-flung islands of the Pacific will shortly be bound together with the invisible chains of wireless telegraphy. From tall towers, already standing on the top of a California mountain, an electric current of unprecedented voltage will flash signals which may be heard not only in Hawaii and far-off Samoa, but even on the eastern shores of Japan and the Philippines; while, at the same time, ships moving like atoms across the face of the waters, may keep in constant touch with land.

Rising 300 feet into the air, the two great towers have just been placed in position on the very crest of Mount Tamalpais, in Marin county, Cal., about twelve miles on an air line north of San Francisco. These two gigantic towers were constructed and hoisted into position by the Pacific Wireless Telegraph company, and are to be used in connection with its great Oriental and Pacific coast system.

The bases of the towers are 2,600 feet above sea level, and are only a few miles from the ocean. From the long line of glittering breakers, the apexes of the towers rise 2,900 feet; and they can be distinctly seen for a radius of fifteen miles in clear weather. Perhaps there are no taller wireless towers in the world, and certainly none occupying so lofty a position above sea level.

The current which will be used will have the enormous potential of 5,000,000 volts and will throw a spark fifteen feet long.

FOR A TWITCHING HAND.

It Is Said That the Grapple Swing Will Cure the Trouble.

Hand trembling, an affliction akin to "writers' cramp," is apt to result from the long continued exercise of certain muscles and the neglest of others.

The worst feature of the trouble, according to Health-Culture, is its trick of coming on at the very time when steadiness of hand would be most desirable. The twitch of a map-finisher's muscles may throw a national frontier 100 miles out of treaty lines; type words may get glued together like the nouns of the Volapuk craze.

Hot baths afford only temporary relief; drugs might as well be prescribed to a stutterer; but there is one never-failing mechanical specific—the grapple swing cure.

Procure a couple of iron rings—say, five inches in diameter—and fasten them high enough to keep an experimenter's feet on the ground when he attempts to dangle by one hand for a second or two. Practice will rise his score to half a minute, and by that time the tremors will have vanished for the next half year.

The Better Plan.

Moodily the bridegroom shakes the rice from his clothing, disengages a couple of old shoes from his wife's hat, rubs the bumps on his head and regards the labels, tags and other decorations of the trunks.

"I suppose they've put up a lot more jobs on us besides these," he growls.

"But, dearest," says the bride, determined to be cheerful, "think how much worse it would be if we were royal people of Europe and the populace were trying to assassinate us."

"I am thinking of that. I'd rather take my chances with a couple of bombs and know that the worst was over."—Judge.

The New Bell Boy.

A landlord engaged a night clerk in a hurry, not waiting for references. A traveling man came on the midnight train and asked for a room. The clerk took him up.

"Do you want anything before I go to bed?"

"Yes," said the guest; "I want to be called in time for the 6 o'clock train."

"All right. See that button over there? Well, when 6 o'clock comes push that button and we'll come up and call you."

DUBIOUS

About What Her Husband Would Say.

A Mich. woman tried Postum Food Coffee because ordinary coffee disagred wtih her and her husband. She writes:

"My husband was sick for three years with catarrh of the bladder, and palpitation of the heart, caused by coffee. Was unable to work at all and in bed part of the time.

"I had stomach trouble, was weak and fretful so I could not attend to my housework—both of us using coffee all the time, and realizing it was harmful.

"One morning the grocer's wife said she believed coffee was the cause of our trouble, and advised Postum. I took it home rather dubious about what my husband would say—he was fond of coffee.

"But I took coffee right off the table, and we haven't used a cup of it since. You should have seen the change in us, and now my husband never complains of heart palpitation any more. My stomach trouble went away in two weeks after I began Postum. My children love it and it does them good, which can't be said of coffee.

"A lady visited us who was always half sick. I told her I'd make her a cup of Postum. She said it was tasteless stuff, but she watched me make it, boiling it thoroughly for 15 minutes, and when done she said it was splendid. Long boiling brings out the flavor and food quality." TUMORS CONQUERED

SERIOUS OPERATIONS AVOIDED.

Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the Case of Mrs. Fannie D. Fox.

The growth of a tumor is so sly that frequently its presence is not suspected until it is far advanced.

Mrs. Fannie D. Fox

So-called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages, or the presence of danger may be made manifest by profuse monthly periods, accompanied by unusual pain, from the abdomen through the groin and thighs.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation or displacement, secure a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound right away and begin its use.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., will give you her advice if you will write her about yourself. She is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I take the liberty to congratulate you on the success I have had with your wonderful medicine. Eighteen months ago my periods stopped. Shortly after I felt so badly that I submitted to a thorough examination by a physician and was told that I had a tumor and would have to undergo an operation.

"Soon after I read one of your advertisements and decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. After taking five bottles as directed the tumor is entirely gone. I have been examined by a physician and he says I have no signs of a tumor now. It has also brought my periods around once more, and I am entirely well."—Fannie D. Fox, 7 Chestnut Street, Bradford, Pa.

A Policeman's Perquisite.

"I like best a beat of little, two-story dwelling houses," said policeman X.

"Why so?"

"Because there's a lot of extra money to be made on such a beat. The men that live in two-story houses are the sort that have to get up and go to work at about 5 o'clock in the morning, and, in order to avoid oversleeping, they hire the cop to wake them.

"The cop on a good two-story house beat will have, as like as not, a list of a hundred men to wake—one man at 4:30, one at 4:45, one at 5:10, and so on. At a charge of 10 cents a head every week the list will bring him in $10 extra money every Saturday."—Exchange.

Don't neglect backache. It warns you of trouble in the kidneys. Avert the danger by curing the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. J. A. Haywood, a well known resident of Lufkin, Tex., says: "I wrenched my back working in a sawmill, was laid up six weeks, and from that time had pain in my back whenever I stooped or lifted. The urine was badly disordered and for a long time I had attacks of gravel. After I began using Doan's Kidney Pills the gravel passed out, and my back got well. I haven't had backache or bladder trouble since."

BABY COVERED WITH SORES.

Would Scratch and Tear the Flesh Unless Hands Were Tied—"Would Have Died But for Cuticura."

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come on his arms, and on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk. My aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent to the drug store and got a cake of the Soap and a box of the Ointment, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since. He is now strong and healthy, and I can sincerely say that only for your most wonderful remedies my precious child would have died from those terrible sores. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, R. F. D. No. 1, Woodville, Conn., April 22, 1905."

ARTIFICIAL WOOD.

Attempts Made to Produce It From Peat Fibers.

Frequent attempts have been made to use peat as raw material for the manufacture of artificial wood. The material must, for this purpose, be fully reduced to a fibrous condition, so as to produce a fibrous and a mealy mass. This mixture is mixed with an emulsion of two parts by measure of plaster of paris and ten to twelve of water; and is subjected for considerable time to heavy hydraulic pressure in molds, then artificially dried, polished and oiled, painted and varnished.

A more simple process is to wash the peat, without destroying its natural fibrous state, and to mix the resulting moist mass with a mixture of hydrated lime and an aluminium compound (as, for instance, aluminium sulphate, and press it in molds for a short time in the moist state, after which the resulting plates are allowed to harden in the air. The resultant product needs only a comparatively low pressure, and this for only a short time; and is then set out to dry in the air. The resulting artificial wood is not hygroscopinc, and in order to use it for open air work needs no painting or further impregnation. In view of the fact that the pressing operation takes only a few minutes, considerable quantities can be manufactured in comparatively small space of time.—Scientific American.

GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP.

No Medicine so Beneficial to Brain and Nerves.

Lying awake nights makes it hard to keep awake and do things in day time. To take "tonics and stimulants" under such circumstances is like setting the house on fire to see if you can put it out.

"For about three years I had been a great sufferer from indigestion. After trying several kinds of medicine, the doctor would ask me to drop off potatoes, then meat and so on, but in a few days that craving, gnawing feeling would start up, and I would vomit everything I ate and drank.

"When I started on Grape-Nuts, vomiting stopped, and the bloating feeling which was so distressing disappeared entirely.

"My mother was very much bothered with diarrhea before commencing the Grape-Nuts, because her stomach was so weak she could not digest her food. Since using Grape-Nuts she is well, and says she don't think she could live without it.

"It is a great brain restorer and nerve builder, for I can sleep as sound and undisturbed after a supper of Grape-Nuts as in the old days when I could not realize what they meant by a "bad stomach." There is no medicine so beneficial to nerves and brain as a good night's sleep, such as you can enjoy after eating Grape-Nuts."

A Novelty in Jewelry

By IVOR WYATT

Messrs. Sparton and Plowing prided themselves upon being the best jewelers in town. They were a very go-ahead firm; and in their window the latest novelties in watches and clocks could always be seen.

One morning Mr. Plowing, the junior partner, began to dance round the shop, excitedly pointing to a parcel which lay open on one of the glass-covered show-cases.

"What have you now?" said Mr. Sparton.

"It's the phonographic watch," said the junior partner, excitedly; "it will sell like blazes."

"I have never sold any blazes," said the senior partner with a reproving frown—"let me see those talking 'tickers.'"

The partners undid the wrappers, in which some 15 watches were encased. They looked very harmless, and had the stupid, over-conscientious look of the ordinary watch.

"They are all going," said Mr. Sparton, after he had put each to his ear.

"It is ten minutes to nine," said Mr. Plowing; "in ten minutes we shall hear them speak. I believe one contains the voice of Mr. Roosevelt and one a line spoken by Ada Rehan."

The partners then arranged the watches in two rows upon the desk, and anxiously awaited the hour. As the big clock over the shop began to wheeze preparatory to striking, a tiny little voice was heard to proceed from one of the mild-looking watches on the desk.

"Nine. Your father has gone down to breakfast," it said, in the quiet, subdued tones of a trained servant.

"A schoolboy's holiday watch, I suppose," said Mr. Sparton.

Mr. Plowing looked for the words "your father" in the descriptive catalogue.

"No. 942—a young lady's watch," he said.

"Nine. Quite time to get up," said one of the watches, brightly. Then the others said, all talking at the same time:

"Nine. Open the letters and take them upstairs."

"In the city by nine."

"Nine o'clock. 'The labor we delight in physics pain,'" said another, "nine o'clock."

"Nine. Talk to the cook about dinner." "A lady's watch that," interrupted Mr. Sparton.

"Oh, Mary, I'm Mad!"

"It is quite nine o'clock."

"Nine, old chap."

"Nine tailors make a man."

Then no more was heard. Mr. Sparton stood amazed at the experience, while Mr. Plowing looked on with the air of a man who was showing off something of which he had a perfect knowledge.

"I heard the whole batch in New York," he said. "They are wonderful little instruments. The Shakespeare quotation is a little gem."

"I suppose there are singing watches, and preaching watches, and musical watches?"

"Yes," said Mr. Plowing. "For our first consignment I thought that the speaking watch would be the best, and as you generally entrust all purchases to me, I ordered this lot. I hope I have your approval?"

"Yes. They seem to be a very good invention."

"Here is the show-card," said Mr. Plowing. "We had better put it in the window, and keep the watches here to 'speak' to the customers."

He placed the show card in the window. On it was written:

"THE PHONOGRAPHIC WATCH.

"This watch will tell you the time, instead of leaving you to work it out for yourself. You can have the voice of your dearest friend, favorite politician or preacher, singer or actor. You can have your own voice reproduced on payment of ten dollars extra. You can have a 'repeater' to quote texts, dates, poetry, or prose."

At midday there was a great crowd assembled to hear the new watches in Messrs. Sparton and Plowing's. Everybody admired the little wonders and talked of getting one for some one or other, but said that perhaps another day would do as well when they heard the price. Some made some slight purchases, but no one bought a phonographic watch.

"Why did you get 15 of them, Plowing," said Mr. Sparton, when they were arranging the new watches to "speak" at one o'clock. "Five would have been quite enough. We shall never be able to get rid of 15 at this price. There are not enough rich people in town."

The junior partner was by no means disheartened, for he well knew Mr. Sparton's methods. Sparton used to leave all purchases to his partner, and then heap all the abuse on his head if an article did not sell.

At five minutes to one Mr. Bunsner came in. He asked to see the new watch. Mr. Bunsner was a very rich manufacturer, and spent his money very freely. Sparton produced the watches and turned them on, while Plowing explained all he knew about their mechanism in order to bridge over the interval until one o'clock should strike. A moment before the big clock struck the watches began to talk, about ten went off exactly at the same time, and what they said could not be distinguished. All Mr. Bunsner heard was a recipe for chicken salad from one watch, and the excellent advice "one o'clock, take your hands out of your pockets," from another.

"What's that one?" said Mr. Bunsner, eagerly. "How much is it?"

"Which, Mr. Bunsner, please?"

"The one that said 'Take your hands out of your pockets.' It will do beautifully for my boy."

"Oh, that's the schoolboy's watch, sir; it has a lot of useful precepts. It has also some football maxims, the chief rules of good behavior, and some hints upon keeping pets. The whole to conclude with some nice homely advice in a lady's voice for every night at ten. After that, if consulted, it says: 'Don't talk,' and 'Go to sleep,'" said Mr. Plowman, reading from the descriptive catalogue.

"What is the price of this one, then?" said Mr. Bunsner.

"Forty-five dollars," said the officious Plowing, pushing his way past Sparton.

"I will take that with me, please," said Mr. Bunsner.

He said nothing of the purchase to his wife, however, as he hoped to surprise Bertie the next morning with the "Conscience watch."

"I have bought you a watch for your birthday, my boy," he said to Bertie, when the boy came in to say good night;" "put it in the watch pocket by your bed; now mind you take good care of it."

"Yes, father, I will," said the boy, his eyes brightening at the present; "thank you very much. Good night, father."

"Good night, Bertie, my son, don't be afraid of your new watch."

Mrs. Bunsner and Bertie laughed, and the boy went off to bed handling his new possession.

A servant came into the boy's room a few minutes before eight the next morning. She pulled up the blind, calling to the sleeper.

Bertie turned over and had a long discussion with himself.

"Shall I get up? It will be awfully nice to get up in a few minutes, I haven't had enough sleep. It's very bad for one not to have enough sleep. Another quarter of an hour will do me a lot of good. Well, perhaps a quarter of an hour is too long. I'll go to sleep for another five minutes. Then I really will get up."

"Eight. Time to get up now," said somebody.

"Hullo, I'm dreaming. That was a ghost, I suppose," said Bertie.

"Half-past eight. Get out."

"Nine. You have been in bed too long; get up," said somebody.

"What on earth is it?"

"Ten. Don't talk in school."

"Eleven. Hurry up to the other class-room."

Something had gone wrong with the watch, and nothing would stop it.

"Twelve. William the Conqueror, 1066."

"One. Don't eat too fast at dinner."

"Two. Don't run after eating."

"Ugh!" he said to himself. "I must be going mad. I keep hearing horrible counting and people saying things. There it is again!"

"Five. Don't speak with your mouth full."

"Six. Change your shoes and brush your hair."

Bertie screamed for help, and the servant came rushing in.

"Oh, Mary, I'm mad! And there are ghosts saying things all round me. Listen!"

Mary listened attentively, as did the boy.

"Eight. To bed in an hour and a half—" was all they heard.

Mary fainted and Bertie hid his face in his hands and groveled on the floor. Suddenly he jumped up, tore down the watch pocket, and held it to his ear.

"That's it," he cried. "It's this watch that papa gave me is mad; not us," and he dropped the watch and all into the water pitcher. "We shan't hear it there," he said to himself as he threw the contents of the water pitcher over the servant and called for help.

Mr. Bunsner rushed in and scolded his son for his ingratitude; then sent Mary away, and administered corporal punishment.

As his father left the room, Bertie muttered to himself:

"Talking watches are humbug!"

ERRORS ABOUT THE WHITE HOUSE.

To the Editor:

I noticed somewhere recently—I would not say positively that it was in your columns—an article on the White House which contained several misstatements.

In the first place it was stated the White House was first occupied in 1809 and that its first occupant was President Madison. The fact is, its first occupant was President Adams, who took up his residence there in 1800.

The original mansion was begun in 1792. In 1814 it was burned by the British and rebuilt in 1818.

Another of the errors in the article referred to was the statement that ready-prepared paint is used on the White House to make it beautifully white.

I noticed this especially because I have used considerable paint myself and wondered that "canned" paint should be used on such an important building when all painters know that pure white lead and linseed oil make the best paint.

It so happened also that I knew white lead and linseed oil—not ready-mixed paint—were used on the White House, because I had just read a booklet published by a firm of ready-mixed paint manufacturers who also manufacture pure white lead. In that book the manufacturers admitted that for the White House nothing but "the best and purest of paint could be used," and said that their pure white lead had been selected.

Above all people, those who attempt to write on historical subjects should give us facts, even if it is only a date or a statement about wood, or brick, or paint, or other building material.

Yours for truth,

Snake in Railway Carriage.

An exciting encounter with a snake in a railway carriage is reported by some passengers who traveled from Birmingham to Leicester on Saturday morning.

Shortly after the train left Birmingham a snake about two feet long appeared from under the seat. There were two men and two women in the carriage. The men attacked the reptile with sticks, while the women stood on the seats.

After about ten minutes they succeeded in stunning it. Then they opened the carriage door and threw it out on the line.

DREADED HIS GOOD TIME.

But He Had to Take the Seven-Mile Ride to Get Drunk.

A certain member of congress one day last winter was deploring the fact that he must that night attend a public dinner when the probability was he would have "too good a time."

"My predicament," said the congressman, "reminds me of the sad case of an old constituent near Kansas City whose weakness was drink. The place where he lived voted no license, so in order to obtain intoxicants it was necessary to take a trolley car to Kansas City, seven miles away.

"One night I chanced to meet my bibulous friend waiting for the Kansas City car. To my inquiry as to where he was going he replied:

"'Up to K. C. to get drunk.' Then solemnly he added: 'But great Scott, Judge, how I dread it!'"

Alum Baking Powder Is Wholesome.

Dr. Herman Reinbold, the expert German chemist, in a recent official report concerning Baking Powders, declares that a pure alum baking powder is better and less injurious than the so-called cream of tartar powders. He says that if the quantity of alum contained in a sufficient quantity of baking powder for a batch of bread or cakes for an ordinary family, be concentrated to one mouthful of food, and taken into the stomach of any one person, no matter how delicate, it could do no harm. On the contrary, alum is wholesome in proper quantities. This is undoubtedly the reason the State of Missouri quickly repealed a law that prohibited the manufacture of the most wholesome of all baking powders. So much for Alum Baking Powders.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J. McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

That the longer he has been married, the less stock a man puts in the old idea the marriages are made in Heaven.

That the small boy is beginning to wonder what sickness he can have about next week that will have the least pain.

That things inevitably even themselves up: bathing suits make women look shorter but they also make men look longer.

That as far as is known Banker Stensland hasn't been seen in Red Lake Falls, the same being something of a distinction.

That the time for filing expired yesterday. Now the campaign may be said to be on in dead earnest. Behold the candidate cometh.

That there are times when it isn't necessary to lie but with some people those are the times when there is no call to say anything at all.

That the school teacher—but she will be here next week and it may be advisable to wait and see her first—and then not say it at all.

That he was a mean, hateful, horrid, nasty old thing who said women ought to make satisfactory angels because they are so fond of harping.

That there was a man named Hogg and he gave a great feast to some of his friends and the intelligent compositor made it appear a "swill dinner."

That when a family puts on extra style for company there is always a tremor going up and down daughter's back for fear that father will act as if he were not used to it.

That if a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door—Emerson.

That in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, then the editor, then the liberal advertiser—which was all good says an exchange. The next day it snowed and he created the man who does not believe in advertising; another who does not take the home paper—and then he rested. And then the devil got into the moulding room and created the man who takes the paper for several years and fails to pay for it. After he had completed that sorry job and having a few lumps left, he created the excuse of a man who settles his subscription by informing the postmatter to mark his paper "refused"

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80

NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

CHICKENS WERE NOT SO VERY PLENTIFUL

Local Nimrods Tramp the Fields in Every Direction With Little Success.

Some of the Numerous Parties and What They Got or Said That They Got.

It is possible to get any kind of a story this week all the way from the man who had to use his gun as a club to keep the chickens from eating him up to the man who would have brought back a million had not the pot-hunters been there ahead of him and chased every blessed one out of the country.

The season opened Saturday and at almost any old hour Friday night there were various noises like the departure of every sport who could get a gun and dog. If a persistent cannonading brings on rain, the heavy storm Saturday afternoon is easily accounted for there wasn't a minute of the day but the report of a gun could be heard.

It must be true, as many of the returned hunters assert, that chickens are not plentiful this year, as many of the best shots had little to boast of. Reports of the work of pot-hunters were also numerous. The Courier has had no means of verifying the reports of the many expeditions but gives some of them, as they were told:

Harry Healy, W. H. Krueger and E. G. Buse said 46 in a tone of voice that was intended to indicate that the number was nothing compared to what they could do if the chickens were to be found. The 46 is not supposed to include the bunch that Billy Krueger got the snap shot at.

Frank Grady, A. P. Toupin, Dan Latandresse and Jim Blake would liked to have brought back 133—it would have been about their capacity—but they modestly claimed only the 33.

Oliver Belair looks dangerous when any one pretends to doubt that he, Ed. Bray, S. A. Swanson and Simon Paul bagged 40. It was such a small number for so many of them.

John Wander and P. O. Floan said 15 and they hadn't got fairly started before their dog played out.

Noel, Alfred and Adelar Delorme knew just where to go so they were 30 chickens and 15 ducks to the good. An overturned boat and its spilled occupants is another story.

George Hennings says "don't ask me how many we got," and it had to be gleaned from another source that he, Harry and Walter Garceau and Lee Healy only saw five—and they brought them all back.

G. A. Kankel, Charlie Kankel and Dick Ohm modestly assert they got enough to eat but if they ate the 25 they claimed they got, they ought to be ashamed to look a chicken in the face.

F. E. Hunt, Milton Converse and F. Guy Meyers slaughtered as many as 26.

P. B Gaass, Dr. Fletcher, Omer Hall and Clem Brunelle corralled 15 in various ways. It was more than half of all they saw. They will get the rest next year.

It is natural to suppose that V. M. Higinbotham, Dr. Wilkinson, Sam Haislet and A. L. Reichert would get a plenty—and perhaps 15 was.

John Drier was out alone yesterday and got all the law allowed. Eh? We saw them.

THINGS POLITICAL AS GOSSIPED ABOUT

Superintendent McAnulty Also Withdraws. Both Will Be Heard from Lates.

There has been an immense amount of speculation and talk unlimited concerning the political situation in Red Lake county at the present time and conditions are little clearer or more understandable than they were a week ago when the time for filing expired.

Right here in the matter of the time of filing there is considerably doubt. It had benn announced that the 29th was the last day for filing but the claim is being variously made that the 28th should have been the last day. It is understood that a test will be made in Hennepin county. If it should be decided that the 28th was properly the last day, it will leave eighteen or twenty candidates in this county high and dry on the hasbeen shelf.

Thief River Falls has been responsible for much of what was intended for sharp practice. Up there they openly boast that party lines have been abandoned and they will vote for their own candidates and they have them for nearly every office. The game they are playing looks like the petulancy of an over-indulged child. They will cry there if O'Brien is defeated for auditor, and he will have to travel at a merry pace even to win out in the primaries.

During the past week candidates have done little but to sit around and speculate as to where they were at. A number who had every reason to beleive they had plain sailing are now wondering what they are going to do with the opposition that has been raised up against them. The county seat fight has had something to do with that oppasition at both ends of the line. The situation is peculiar and will hardly be cleared up at the primaries which will be held on the 18th of this month.

FRANK JEFFERS WITHDRAWS

Matters have been simplified for the present in the rush for the office of register of deeds, by the withdrawal of Frank Jeffers from the primary election. Besides him there were Emil Zeh, and the two republicans E. L. Quist and R. H. Green. The withdrawal of Mr. Jeffers leaves Zeh a clear field for the democratic nomination.

Mr. Jeffers' actions are based upon reasons that will appeal to voters as being eminently proper. The duties of his office are manifold and urgent and will not permit of his spending his time in making two campaigns. He prefers to devote his time to the work of his office at the present.

H. T. MC ANULTY ALSO

Co. Supt. McAnulty has created some little surprise too by his withdrawal from the primaries. He had filed for the republican nomination and had as an opponent Fred Richards. He withdraws presumably because he doesn't care to make two campaigns with a possibility of being put out of the final running by a defeat at the primaries. It is understood that he will wait until after the primaries and file by petition as an independent. It will make a three-cornered fight as Mr. Richard will have the republican nomination and Mrs. J.J. Doe the democratic.

THE COMMISSIONERS TURN DOWN DITCH

The Cost of County Ditch Number 27 Is Too Great for the Benefits.

County ditch number 27 will not be constructed, that conclusion having been reached at a meeting of the board of county commissioners held Tuesday.

The proposed ditch is located in Polk Center and Black River townships and came up on the petition of Lorenz Hansen and others. The report of the viewers showed an estimated number of acres benefitted of 3,875 with benefits estimated at $5,197.64 and damages $357. The cost of construction was estimated at $5,650.95, nearly $2 per acre and that amount was considered entirely too high by the board to warrant ordering the construction.

Ditch Number 28.

The viewers appointed for ditch number 28, in Red Lake Falls township, Fred Zaiser, P. K. Olson and O. W. Brink, made their report to the commissioners on Friday. WAS A CUPIDIAN SURPRISE

Miss Carrie Pirath Married to J. H. Cross at Duluth.

Miss Carrie Pirath of this city was married to Joseph H. Cross of Grand Rapids at Duluth last Friday.

Miss Pirath went to Grand Rapids in May to take a position in the telephone office. It was understood that she had met her fate there and would return about this time and be married at her home. Her parents were proceeding with the wedding arrangements. She did return a few days ago but as Mrs. Cross and only then did any one know she had been married. Mr. Cross did not come with his wife but spent Tuesday in the city with her.

Two weeks ago the Courier contained an item to the effect that Mr. Cross would carry off a Red Lake Falls girl as a bride but advised him to beware of what happened to Harry Ives. Harry married Mrs. Cross' sister. The warning was timely and he evidently heeded it. Anyhow every one will wish Mr. and Mrs. Cross all life's chiefest blessings.

Mrs. Cross is a Red Lake Falls girl and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Pirath. Mr. Cross is the editor of the Grand Rapids Magnet. The Courier is not advised of their future movements but is pleased to join in the congratulations for a brother editor.

Death of Mrs. Altstadt.

Mrs. Louis Altstadt died at her home in this city last Friday. The cause of death was consumption from which she had been a sufferer during the past year and confined to her bed during much of the past seven months.

Mrs. Altstadt was born at Antwerp, Germany, October 31, 1864 and came to the United States in 1881. In 1883 she was married to Mr. Altstadt. Together they removed to Red Lake Falls in 1895. She was the mother of six daughters, all living, Maggie, Martha M., Carrie V., Anna B., Otillia T., and Elizabeth J., the youngest 11 years old. Mr. Altstadt also survives her. The funeral was held Sunday from St. Mary's church, Father Ambrose officiating.

Among those from outside the city attending the funeral were Mrs. Doll, her mother; William and Genevieve Altstadt, brother and sister of Mr. Altstadt, all of Perham.

Patent Scarecrow.

H. Invin, of Hawkes Bay, New Zealand, has patented an alarm which can be attached to a scare crow, or can be used in place of a scarecrow. Its principal object is to provide an efficient apparatus by which a series of explosions may be produced at definite intervals for the purpose of frightening birds or animals away from the crops, fruit and the like. Men who have ideas to patent have good, active brains. To build up the brain drink golden grain belt beer. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Tom Ramsey, a millionaire mine owner of Goldfield, shot and fatally injured a man named Brown at Ramsey, Nev., who, it is alleged, jumped one of his claims.

Two horse thieves, while resisting capture in an Indian camp on Cache creek, twenty-five miles southwest of Anadarko, Okla., shot and killed a white man and an Indian and seriously wounded an Indian woman. The Indians and farmers in the neighborhood surrounded the outlaws and held them in the timber until the arrival of officers from Anadarko, who captured them.

DAVID R. FRANCIS.

Tells King Edward of St. Louis Awards.

King Edward received David R. Francis, president of the St. Louis exposition, and Nelson O'Shaughnessey, third secretary of the American embassy at eBrlin, in private audience. Mr. Francis informed his majesty that the medal and diploma awarded him by the exposition were at the American embassy in London, whereupon the king said he desired that they should be presented to him personally by Ambassador Reid.

PREMIER STOLYPIN,

Whose residence was blown up by revolutionists.

Alexander Stolypin in his career has served no factions, and in consequence made few friends. He refused to aid the nobles in rebuilding the shattered wall of privileges with which they hoped again to surround themselves, and would not permit revolutionists and reformers to rush to mad extremes. Throwing personal feeling aside to steer a middle course, he considered the only means to bring Russia through her present crisis.

ROYAL PRINCESS DEFIES PAPA

VICTORIA OF WALES.

Royal princess who, from her description, does not appear to have been daughter who defied father in love affair.

PATRICIA OF CONNAUGHT.

Royal princess who may have told her papa she would wed in spite of his objections to her fiance.

Great Britain is threatened with a scandal of first magnitude. One of the princesses has fallen in love with a young scion of one of the oldest families in Great Britain. He is also madly in love with her. But the august father of the princess, for what are said to be good reasons, which cannot, however, be made public, refuses to countenance a marriage. The princess does not know of the the objections.

It is now said that there has been a violent rcene between the princess and her father, and that the princess has emphatically stated that she will marry the man of her choice in spite of all opposition, even if she has to elope secretly with him.

There are four royal princesses in England of a marriabeable age, Patricia of Connaught, Victoria and Louise of Schleswig-Holstein and Victoria of Wales, daughter of the king. The latter is an invalid. The gossips are not yet sure which princess is involved, but are pointing to Patricia as the one most likely to fit into just such a scandal.

INDICTS OIL TRUST ON 6,428 COUNTS

MINIMUM FINE IS $6,428,000

ALL RECORDS ARE BROKEN BY THE SIZE OF THE INDICTMENT.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Ten indictments, containing in all 6,428 separate counts, have been returned against the Standard Oil company by the two grand juries that for several weeks have been investigating in Chicago the relations between the oil company and the railroads of the country.

Each count in the indictments, all of which are almost identical, charges a separate offense against the United States government and contrary to the Elkins law, in that the oil company is accused of having unlawfully accepted rebates on shipments of oil from the various railroads mentioned.

The law provides that in case the defendant is found guilty a minimum fine of $1,000 may be assessed or a maximum penalty of $20,000 for each offense. This would make the Standard Oil company liable to a maximum penalty in case of conviction of $128,560,000, while the minimum fine that can be assessed under the law is $6,428,000.

All Records Broken.

All records are broken by the size of the indictment returned by the two grand juries, and the document upon which the oil company must stand is the most voluminous ever returned by a grand jury.

For the past two weeks twenty-five extra stenographers have been employed by the district attorney in filling in dates, car numbers, name of oil and other data contained in the indictments, while a corps of messenger boys have been kept busy carrying proofs, revises and re-revises between the attorney's office and the printer.

Seven Roads Mentioned.

Seven railroads are mentioned in connection with the indictments, but no charges are made against any of these. All of the roads are mentioned in connection with giving the Standard a lower rate on oil than was published and allowed other oil dealers.

With the return of the indictments yesterday it is believed that the investigation of the relations between the Standard Oil company and the railroads entering Chicago is ended. It is thought, however, that District Attorney Morrison, who retires next Friday to become special attorney for the government in anti-trust prosecutions, together with his assistant, Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul will proceed against the company under the Sherman anti-trust act.

LAWSON HAUNTS WIFE'S BIER.

Broker Sits All Day Beside Unburied Body of Beloved Spouse.

Boston, Aug. 30.—Refusing to be comforted for the loss of his wyife, who was his chum for nearly thirty years, Thomas W. Lawson sits all day beside the unburied body at his magnificent estate, Dreamwold, in Scituate, and paces the floor of his bedroom most of the night. Each morning he covers the hermetically sealed coffin with flowers, and then remains with it until dark, alone and silent.

His grief is heartrending and shows no sign of being less acute to-day than the day his wife died suddenly, nearly a month ago. He has abandoned business completely, having left all his vast interests on "the street" to his private secretary, Edward F. McSweeney, and all attempts to induce him to resume his activities are failures.

After Mrs. Lawson's funeral in Boston Mr. Lawson had the body taken to Dreamwold, and there placed in the living room of the little English cottage on the grounds which Mrs. Lawson had named "The Nest." There it remains, Mr. Lawson refusing to permit its burial. All his daughters are with him, and his son Arnold is also at Dreamwold. Scarcely any others are permitted within the grounds.

New York, Aug. 30.—W. F. Elliott, general counsel of the Standard Oil company, when shown a telegram to the effect that Standard Oil had taken steps to acquire all the principal distilleries in the United States, as the result of the passage of the denatured alcohol law by congress, said: "The Standard Oil company has taken no steps in this direction, nor will it."

Twin Bridges, Mont., Aug. 30.—The infant son of William Dean, a ranchman residing two miles north of Iron Rod station, died last evening from the effects of a dose of poison administered to it by mistake.

COMPANY SHORT $7,000,000

HEAVY LOANS ON INSUFFICIENT SECURITY CAUSES THE FAILURE.

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—The Real Estate Trust company, organized in 1885, the depositary of nearly a million of dollars of the funds of the Presbyterian church, and holding $300,000 of the city of Philadelphia and $175,000 of state deposits, yesterday closed its doors. The failure was caused by heavy loans made by the late president, Frank E. Hipple, to Adolf Segal, a promoter, on insufficient security. A desperate effort was made to save the institution by the board of directors through an appeal to the Clearing House association, but that body declined to subscribe a guarantee fund of $7,000,000 because of insufficient security.

Receiver Is Appointed.

The liabilities are placed at $10,000,000, with quick assets of $3,500,000 and doubtful collateral amounting to $8,000,000.

George H. Earle, Jr., president of the Finance Company of Pennsylvania, was appointed receiver, and in a statement to the public he expresses the hope that he may soon be able to recommend a plan to the depositors that will better serve their interests and terminate his services.

How far Hipple benefited in the loans made, or whether he was merely the tool of others, is yet to be determined.

Made False Statements.

President Hipple was always regarded as a conservative financier, but following his sudden death last Friday an investigation by the directors developed the fact that his loans to Segal had been made regardless of proper security, and that he had made false statements to the directors of the bank's condition. Friends of the president express the belief that Segal exercised a hypnotic influence over Mr. Hipple.

Although the cause of Mr. Hipple's death was given by his physician and the coroner as cerebral hemorrhage, it is intimated that he may have committed suicide.

BIG RECEPTION FOR BRYAN.

Program Is Announced by the Committee for Thursday's Function.

New York, Aug. 30.—The program of the reception to be accorded to William Jennings Bryan on his arrival in this city on Thursday was given out by the reception committee last night.

The official reception will begin with the arrival of Col. Bryan at Pier A, North river, at 4 p. m. Thursday. He will be met there by a subcommittee, headed by the chairman of the reception committee, Gov. Folk of Missouri. He will be welcomed by Acting Mayor McGowan in behalf of the city of New York.

Arriving at the hotel, a special committee, consisting of five members of the reception committee from each state, will receive Col. Bryan. Then will follow the general reception, after which Col. Bryan will spend the time in informal discussions until 7 o'clock, when he will retire to his private apartments to make ready to go to the garden at 7:45 o'clock.

It has been arranged, in order to accommodate those unable to gain admission to the garden, to hold an overflow meeting in Madison Square Park.

MILLIONS FOR FRISCO.

Insurance Companies Have Paid $55,000,000 to Policyholders.

San Francisco, Aug. 30.—Thirty-five insurance companies out of the 120 involved in the San Francisco disaster have paid in the aggregate $55,103,863.22, according to their office records, to date.

Some of the larger concerns have made heavy payments. The Royal of Liverpool is credited with $3,804,000.41; the Hartford with $3,013,705, the New York Underwriters with $3,495,787, the Aetna of Hartford is down for $3,126,502, and the Liverpool and London and Globe for $3,721,258. Six companies have paid upwards of $2,000,000 apiece, while an equal number have exceeded $1,000,000.

FIRE IN OIL FIELDS.

Boiler Explosion Sets Fire to Storage Tanks and Derricks.

Beaumont, Tex., Aug. 30.—A boiler exploded in the Keith Ward tract, at Spindle Top, setting fire to oil storage tanks and derricks. Fifteen have already burned and the fire is spreading. The best wells in the field are in this tract.

The fire, which started in the southwestern end of the old tract leased by the Sunset Oil company on Spindle Top, swept over six acres of the field, and, while still burning, is believed to be under control. As near as can be estimated the damage will not exceed $50,000.

DROWNED IN DRY CREEK BED.

Miles City, Mont., Aug. 30.—Caught in the dry bed of a creek by a sudden rush of waters caused by a cloudburst further up the stream, W. F. March, a herder for Loesch Bros., was swept away and drowned. The wagon and horses, together with the dead body of March, were found several miles below the place at which he had been attempting to cross the creek when caught.

CALLS HIPPLE AN EMBEZZLER

RECEIVER FOR DEFUNCT TRUST COMPANY MAKES THE CHARGE.

STOLE FIVE MILLION DOLLARS

LOANS MADE IN NAME OF BANK BUT WITHOUT DIRECTORS' SANCTION.

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.—Examination of the list of securities held by the defunct Real Estate Trust company yesterday developed the fact that Frank K. Hipple, president of the institution, who committed suicide, was an embezzler. The authority for this statement is George H. Earle, Jr., receiver for the trust company. Mr. Earle declined to say what securities are missing, but he declared Hipple had hypothecated $65,000 worth of the paper, securing $50,000 for the securities, which he never returned. Receiver Earle further declared that President Hipple embezzled the $5,000,000 he loaned to Adolf Segal, the promoter. These loans, Mr. Earle asserted, were personal transactions.

Stolen by Hipple.

"Although made in the name of the bank, the directors had no knowledge of them, consequently the money was stolen by Hipple," said Mr. Earle.

Another enterprise in which the dead president was financially interested was discovered yesterday when it became known that he was one of the incorporators of Miss Wright's select school for ladies, at Bryn Mawr, the suburb in which Hipple had his summer residence. The other incorporators were his son, F. Wharton Hipple and Miss Wright.

Dollar for Dollar.

In an interview yesterday Receiver Earle reiterated his opposition to a permanent receivership for the trust company. This proceeding, he declared, would deprive the concern of its trust funds, which are among its most valuable assets. If all of Promoter Segal's enterprises are as valuable as his sugar refinery, he said, their operation by the depositors would be more fruitful of results than any other method, and he believed that through such a plan depositors would receive dollar for dollar.

ROOT'S VISIT BEARS FRUIT.

Brazilian Legislator Starts Move for Trade Reform.

Rio Janeiro, Sept. 1.—Senor Francisco Bernardino, a deputy who possesses great influence, has introduced a bill, which is certain of passage that countries taking 4,000,000 bags of Brazilian coffee free of duty shall get a 20 per cent reduction on the existing export tariff, and that countries taking 3,000,000 bags of Brazilian coffee shall get a reduction of 10 per cent. Countries putting duties on coffee will get an additional 10 per cent. This affects France and Italy and gives the United States 40 per cent advantage. It will start a big commercial struggle. This is a direct result of Root's recent visit.

KILLED BY OFFICERS.

Horse Thief Who Escaped Jail Is Shot Dead by Pursuers.

Manistique, Mich., Sept. 1.—James Valier, the horse thief who, with two other prisoners, escaped from the county jail Tuesday night, was shot and instantly killed by officers last evening on the lake shore, two miles from here. They were traced to the beach and at nightfall were seen on a hill 150 yards off, and, not stopping when ordered to halt, the officers shot, killing Valier instantly. The bullet entered his heart. It is thought the other two men, Van Auken and Casemore, will be captured to-day.

INSANE AND CLOTHESLESS.

Man With a Mission to Convert the World Is Gathered In.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 1.—Stripped of every vestige of clothing, John P. Mattley of Rathdrum, Idaho, started out yesterday to evangelize the world. He represented himself as a Messiah and selected the Kootenai county hospital as a likely field of usefulness. He was entering the city limits when neighbors captured him. Much against his will he was forced to don a horse blanket and the authorities were notified. His sanity will be investigated.

Sparks for Governor.

Reno, Nev., Sept. 1.—John Sparks, governor of Nevada, was yesterday renominated by acclamation by the Democratic state convention. J. G. Sweeny and Samuel Davis withdrew as gubernatorial candidates.

FARM SCHOOL IS BOON TO NORTHWESTERN MINNESOTA

To the average person the name of "farm school" suggests little. There is a hazy idea of some sort of a school where the boys and girls learn something about agriculture and farm life, but that is all. He has no idea of the system, the course of study, the practical adaptability of each ounce of knowledge gained in a school of this kind. And not until he sees it fully equipped and running does he realize that it is of exactly as much importance and benefit as any law or professional department of a great university.

The agricultural school at St. Anthony Park has accomplished much during its existence. It has raised the standard of farming throughout this, the greatest farming state in the Union. It includes a preparatory school, corresponding to a city graded school; a farm school, which takes the place of a high school, and an agricultural college. The farm school fits its pupils to return to the farm.

Few people realize also the importance that the opening of the local farm school will mean to this part of the Northwest. It will place within reach of young boys and girls an important [illegible] seldom comes to them. [illegible] cannot afford to go to the school at St. Anthony Park, but can go to the school at Crookston. The object of this new school is to place this practical education within reach of the people of this district.

Course of Study.

The course of study which has been planned for the school will be similar to that planned at the other school. It may be changed slightly, as possibly some of the pupils will not have gone as far in the district school work as many of those who attend the St. Anthony Park school. But in all except a few minor details it will be the same and will admit the student to the agricultural college, should he desire to continue his course. The school is planned for a three-year course of six months each. It will begin in October and end in March. This will take the boys and girls away from home at a time when their services are not so directly needed as during the other months. Each six months is divided into two terms. His first year studies consist of agricultural botany, and also drawing, which is a practical kind of mechanical drawing, adapted for farm use. It teaches the student how to draw plans for his own farm buildings and to design other structures. Music will be studied and also farm mathematics, the students, taking all these studies. The boys, in addition, will take up practical blacksmithing, not to fit them for a blacksmith, but to show them how to keep a shop of their own on the farm and do their own repairing, saving both time and money. Practical carpentry is another feature of the course, likewise military drill and gymnasium work.

The girls will take up cooking, sewing, field agriculture, social culture and physical training. Every girl before she is graduated must cook an entire meal and invite her friends to eat it. Likewise, every girl will make her own graduating dress during the last year. This is a rule that has been followed for years at the St. Anthony school. Practical English, the kind that will teach students how to write and how to express themselves plainly, also will be taught during the first year. It will be seen from this resume that the studies are all in the line of practicability. The boy or girl is taught nothing that he or she cannot apply to practical uses on the farm. Everything is planned with a view to developing the best part of farming. If a boy learns the study of field crops, when he comes to plant his own he will apply his knowledge and the result will be apparent in an increase and superior yield. If a girl studies the subject of meats she will be able to tell at a glance what kind of a cut she is buying and its value. It is this lack of a practical working knowledge that prevents the farmer from getting the best out of his land.

Work Is Practical.

During the second term of the first year the study of breeds is taken up, and the boys also study carpentry, the planning of farm buildings, and blacksmithing. In the second year the students all take up the subjects of English, dairy chemistry and agricultural physics. Unlike high school physics, which is studied with little practical application, the student here applies every rule he learns. Taking the principle that dark colors absorb heat readily, he is shown by application of the principle that it is unwise to wrap an apple tree with tar paper and that the dark paper will burn the trunk of the tree. A pupil getting such a working knowledge will not be likely to forget it. During this year dairy husbandry, fruit growing, farm accounts, meat judging, breeding and other similar subjects are taken up. Vegetable gardening and field crops are added the second term.

For the third year all the students take up agricultural chemistry, forestry, entomology, sociology, poultry, civics, plant propagation and algebra. The boys take up the handling of grain and machinery, veterinary science, dressing and curing meats, home economy, domestic chemistry and domestic hygiene. Then it is all over and the students go home and help to make the most of what they have learned.

A visit to the farm school, which is about a mile and a half from Crookston, reveals the fact that the building is in good shape for the opening this fall. This opening is due to the efforts made by Hon. A. D. Stephens, who got an appropriation of $15,000 through the state legislature for the new building, and thus made it possible for the farmers of Northern Minnesota to get practical benefit from such a school. Prof. Robertson, who is in charge of the farm, has done wonders for it in the year he has been in charge and he is enthusiastic about the opening this fall.

At the School.

The school building, which can be seen for miles, was completed last February, and is a handsome three-story brick building. The first floor contains a large entrance hall, toilet room, a large, airy dining room, capable of seating fifty persons, kitchen, etc. The second floor has Prof. Robertson's office, a large room with a well selected library and a wealth of bulletins upon agricultural subjects. Across the hall are two large class rooms with desks and recitation chairs. On the same floor is a cloak room and a parlor for the students. On the third floor is the linen room and the dormitories. It is estimated that about forty students can room in the building. The rooms are of good size, well lighted and ventilated and contain two beds with mattresses, a chair, table and dresser. The student is expected to furnish his own sheets, pillow cases, blankets and towels. The boys will room in the school building, while the farm house proper is to be repainted and repapered and used for a girls' dormitory.

The finest part of the whole school is in the fact that the opportunity to attend is placed within reach of every one and there is no occasion to use the time-worn "can't afford it" plea. The only expense connected with the institution is a registration fee of $5. Books are furnished to the student for $1.50 a year, this including all that he will use. He is required to deposit $5 as a guarantee against breakage, but this is refunded to him. Board, room and washing is all one, and the cost is placed at $15 a month, the actual cost to those in charge. This ridiculously small amount shows how easy it will be for the majority of farmers to send their children to the school.

Club to Raise Money to Run It.

The appropriation of $15,000 by the legislature did not include any amount for the maintenance of the school. This amounts to about $3,000 a year, and the Twenty-five Thousand club, an enterprising commercial body of Crookston, has volunteered to raise the money in order that the farmers may send their children to the school this fall. After this year it is expected that the legislature will see the necessity for the proper maintenance of this school in Northern Minnesota and will set aside an adequate annual appropriation.

Sharp but Not Clever.

A London scientist says that life in a metropolis makes young children sharp, but not clever; that it often destroys their chance of ever being clever, for it hastens the development of the brain unnaturally; it makes them superficial, alert, but not observant; excitable, but without one spark of enthusiasm; they are apt to grow blase, fickle, discontented; they see more things than the country-bred child, but not such interesting things; they do not properly see anything, for they have neither the time nor capacity to get at the root of all the bewildering objects that crowd themselves into their little lives.

A SURPRISE WITH THE BUNDLE.

This Duly Delivered, the Errand Boy Discusses Literary Matters.

He was sixteen, perhaps, and much like any other youth of his age, when he came in with bundles. His eye fell on a framed photograph of a man hanging on the wall, and he asked:

"Who is that?"

And when I had told him, he said:

Then the youth talked of "Thanatopsis," which he had read at school when he was a young schoolboy, and again, later, understanding it better at the latter reading and study of it. And he quoted from "Thanatopsis" and compared that with Gray's "Elegy," from which he also quoted. And from conversation on Bryant and Gray the talk, with the young man leading, drifted to other writers, and after some mention of Goethe he asked me if I had read Schiller, and when I had been obliged to confess that I had not, except as I had read him in quoted fragments, he said that he had read, or parts of it, Schiller's "Nathan the Wise" in the original German.

From that the talk, still led by him, turned to the Russian douma, and might not that, he asked, be likened to the States General in France before the French revolution? And then he spoke of Voltaire, and whether he was not the revolution's prompting spirit; and he was reading now—producing the book, in French, from his pocket—Voltaire's "Charles XII. of Sweden," the only history, he remarked, that Voltaire wrote.

HON. A. D. STEPHENS,

And so, with other literary excursions not here noted, the talk progressed, until he gathered up his bundles to depart; his bundle carrying, it developed, being work he was doing during his vacation time, until his going back to college in the fall.

Saved "The Man With the Hoe."

The celebrated painting by Millet, "The Man With the Hoe," was saved from the Crocker mansion on Nob hill in San Francisco before the house was destroyed. The butler, says a dispatch to Mr. Crocker in New York, "saved paintings; tapestries and chairs." In the collection of paintings were works by Tenniel, Troyon, Paul Potter, Corot, Monet, Renoir, Puvis de Chavannes, Pissaro and Constable, as well as Millet.

STATE HAS BIG SCHOOL FUND.

A school fund of nearly $18,000,000, of which nearly $2,000,000 has been accumulated during the last two years, is possessed by Minnesota. A statement just prepared, showing the condition of the fund at the close of the fiscal year, July 31, 1906, discloses this fact. The permanent university fund contains an additional $1,389,000, of which about $22,000 has been accumulated the last two years.

The exact amount of the permanent school fund Aug. 1 was $17,765,394.48, while the last biennial report of the auditor showed the fund Aug. 1, 1904, to be $15,978,477.66.

STATE LOANS MORE MONEY.

Counties, School Districts and Other Public Bodies Secure $130,525.

The state board of investment has approved loans of state funds to counties, school districts and municipalities, totaling $130,525.

An application of Pope county for a $24,000 loan for drainage purposes was turned down because the county already has an outstanding indebtedness to the state for drainage of $171,000.

The approved loans of most importance were as follows:

Faribault school district, $25,500; Hennepin school district No. 88, $4,000; White Bear school district $8,000; St. Peter city school district, $5,000; Aitkin county, drainage loan, $8,000; Pope county drainage loan, $10,000; Anoka county drainage loan, $10,250; Bird Island village loan, $8,000; Fountain village loan, $5,975; Hastings city loan, $24,000.

NEWS OF INTEREST.

FARMERS MAKE WAR ON DOGS.

Reports are received by S. F. Fullerton of the state game and fish commission that numerous hunting dogs are being shot by farmers and others throughout the state. He believes this is a good thing for the game. The law prohibiting running dogs where game abounds during August, he believes, has done more than any other thing to stop poaching in this state.

According to the law, "the use or running of either pointer or setter dogs in fields or upon lands frequented by or in which game birds may be found during the month of August, or at any time except during the open season for killing game birds, and the keeping or maintaining of any dog at or about any hunting camp or lumber camp used by hunters, situated in any locality frequented by deer, moose or caribou, is hereby prohibited and made unlawful."

Before the passage of that law many hunters who did not want to shoot out of season would go out, running their dogs, and by thus scaring the birds injury was done to the game. At the same time many hunters, when found in the field out of season with their dogs, could make the excuse that they were only running their dogs, and thus avoid punishment. Others who went merely with the intention of running the dogs wold be tempted to shoot when they saw a fine covey of birds.

With the running of dogs prohibited it became lawful for the farmer to shoot the dogs if any are found about his fields. This has the effect of keeping the hunters away from the fields and has had a marked effect in reducing the amount of poaching.

Stray dogs continue to be a menace to the deer and other animals at the fish hatchery, and several dogs have been shot there lately. Fifty-one dogs have been shot on the hatchery grounds within a few months.

IRON AT KELLIHER?

Serious Prospecting Promises Early and Rich Results.

There is considerable excitement among the citizens of Kelliher, who are awaiting the outcome of the work of a party which has been quietly prospecting on lands adjoining the townsite of Kelliher, looking for deposits of iron ore.

The preliminary well has been dug, and the sand drill will be installed shortly, and it is believed that within ten days the news will go broadcast that a deposit of iron ore of the paying quality will have been discovered and that the contention that Kelliher is located on an extended western arm of the famous Mesaba iron range will have been proved to be true.

If ore is discovered in paying quantities in the vicinity of Kelliher it will mean very much to the future of that village, as well as to the whole of Beltrami county. It will inaugurate a new industry for this county, and necessitate the employment of hundreds of men and the expenditure of large sums of money.

ALL SHOWS TO BE FREE.

Owatonna Engages Carnival Company for Fair.

Full details have been issued concerning the fair to be held in Owatonna on Sept. 13 to 15, inclusive. The fair is to be the largest ever held in Southern Minnesota, and the greatest feature of all, and one that makes it totally unlike all other fairs, is that all attractions are to be absolutely free.

A carnival company has been hired to bring all of its paid attractions to the city and place them about the streets. The city will pay the company a specified amount, in return for which everything is free. At least twenty free attractions thus are to be secured. In addition, the greatest exhibits of farm products and live stock ever seen in this part of the state will be shown, and liberal prizes have been hung up for these.

POLICE CHIEF QUITS.

Mayor's Criticism Brings Immediate Resignation.

Nick Kent has been sworn in as superintendent of police in the city of Eveleth to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Patrick Dolan. Two new patrolmen were also sworn in.

Chief Dolan's resignation followed close upon a street shooting among a party of Italians near the Hotel McNeil. The Italian, whose name is said to be Baldo, made his escape, and in looking for the police Mayor Jesmore ran across Chief Dolan, whom he censured. Dolan resigned on the spot.

DOG BITES MOTHER AND SON.

Wallace Foster, the eleven-year-old son of C. Foster, residing on the West side, was badly bitten by a dog at Little Falls. The dog belonged to Mrs. Sophie Paterson, living in front of the Foster home.

The Fosters had been in the habit of obtaining their drinking water from the Johnson pump, and the boy was sent into the Paterson yard to get a bucket of water, when the dog, who was eating near by, suddenly sprang at him without any warning whatever, knocking him off his feet, and then fastened his teeth in the lad's forearm, tearing it considerably.

Mrs. Foster, hearing the lad scream, ran to his assistance and tried to pull the dog off, but was severely bitten in the wrist for her pains. The boy tried to break loose and the dog loosened his hold on the mother and seized the boy by the thigh again. This time, Mrs. Foster calling all the time for help, grasped the dog's ears and began to twist them. Mrs. Paterson then came up with a club and drove the dog off.

From last report both victims are doing well. The dog was soon shot by Patrolman Le Blanc.

WILL TELL THE "DOPE."

The state dairy and food department will have a patent medicine exhibit at the state fair. It will be in connection with its exhibit of adulterated foods, which will be held in the main building at the fair. The department lately has made analyses of about twenty of the most widely known patent medicines. A sample bottle of each will be shown, labeled with the results of the analyses made by the state chemist. This will give the names of the ingredients used. A bulletin giving the names and ingredients of these medicines is being printed and will be distributed by the department.

Commissioner Slater says that while some of the medicines examined did not show very dangerous drugs among the ingredients, others had ingredients which ought not to be used indiscriminately. Croton oil, strychnine, morphine and cheap alcohol have been found in many of the medicines examined.

The food exhibit which the department will make at the fair will be along the same line as the exhibit made last year, but on a much larger scale.

BIG PIKE CAPSIZES BOAT.

Two well known citizens of Delano, Mr. Bull and Mr. Holstrom, had a narrow escape from drowning in a peculiar accident which happened while they were fishing at French lake.

They were in a boat and Holstrom had successfully hooked a six-pound pike and was in the act of landing it. In the excitement incident to the big catch Holstrom stood up in the boat, and in sitting down after the pike had been safely landed in the net, he missed the seat and went head foremost into the lake. The commotion caused the skiff to turn turtle and Bull also went into the lake. Both were able to swim and managed to cling to the overturned boat until help reached them.

A queer thing about the accident was that when the tangled fishing tackle was pulled up the pike was still fastened securely to the hook. It was brought home and will be mounted as a souvenir of the adventure.

LABOR AT STATE FAIR.

Will Make Opening Day a Record for Attendance.

Opening day at the state fair, Monday, Sept. 3, is likely to be the record day for attendance. Organized labor from St. Paul and Minneapolis will meet on the grounds for the Labor day celebration, the parades, picnics and other diversions of previous years giving way to the joint celebration at the fair grounds. There will be a program of interest to the representatives of organized labor and other attractions specially arranged for them. The committee in charge has been given the use of a large tent, used heretofore for the stock amphitheater, and a band will be furnished.

Committees are working to provide attractions that will bring out everybody identified with organized labor. The fair grounds will be made the great objective point and everybody will be urged to go there. It is estimated that 40,000 persons, members and friends of organized labor in the Twin Cities, will be on the grounds.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$. 00 Per Year, in Advance.

At last President Roosevelt has been compelled to show his hand. He now says the tariff shall not be disturbed as long as prosperity (for the trusts) continues.

There are a number of people in Thief River Falls who are getting narrower between the eyes every minute and the newspaper men up there occupy a prominent position in the front rank.

Forty years of reiterated and unfulfilled promises culminating in A. L. Cole's "I believes" look contemptibly stale, flat and unprofitable compared with the single performance of a ten per cent reduction in grain rates.

The republican party has seen forty years of executive, legislative and judicial power in Minnesota and it remained for Gov. Johnson, a democrat, surrounded by a hostile legislature and judiciary, to force a reduction of grain rates from the railroads.

Never in the history of the world was such a reception tendered a private citizen as that which waited upon William J. Bryan on his return from Europe. The masses would make William J. Bryan president but the masses have little control over their own votes.

William J. Bryan president? Not in a thousand years. He is arrayed with the common people in the struggle with predatory wealth but the common people dare not brave the penalty that predatory wealth will impose for electing one who is not their puppet and tool.

Every republican should vote for the republican candidate for the legislature so the legislature may elect a republican United States senator who will uphold the tariff and the tariff-fed trusts that every republican voter knows is sapping the life blood of the nation's vitality. How long, oh Lord, how long!

There is every indication that Red Lake county will go strongly republican this year. Some of the old and strong democratic officeholders will run for reelection on a public ownership ticket. Which goes to show that the democracy is pretty badly demoralized.—Plummer Pioneer.

If that is your dream, boy, wake up! Only one idea, and that a "pipe" is too few for even a country editor.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. trust capitalized at $40,000,000 and owned by Rockefeller, are issuing circulars to farmers offering six per cent on deposits with abundant security. The local banks will find it hard to meet that competition as it is intended they should. The local bank has served its purpose in the economic forces as viewed from Wall street and the limit of its time is in sight.

Candidate Cole's dignified silence suffered a compound comminuted fracture by his own act recently. There is no one to say that his promises, so enticeingly amplified, do not salute the ear pleasingly but, judging by his past record, he can have no intention of working them out in the doubtful event of his election, and judging by the performances of the republican party, past any present, he would not be allowed to do so even if he did have any such intention.

The Standard Oil company has issued an appeal to the citizens of the United States to cease their attacks upon the company as it was destroying their foreign trade. That sounds good from an institution that has indictments on over four thousand counts hanging over it for violations of the law. Far from ceasing, the attacks should be continued from every quarter until every man connected with the company who has transgressed the law is behind the bars where he belongs in company with what is ordinarily known as the common malefactor.

Sure it is in order, and he has given his opinion in no uncertain way. He says, "I believe that the railroads of the state are altogether too high, and that the railroads of the state are making too much money, and I believe it my duty to state that, if elected, I shall do all in my power to cause them to be reduced to a point where they are equitable to both carrier and shipper." Isn't that a good enough opinion for the Courier? How does that sound alongside of Gov. Johnson's inaction for nineteen months.—West St. Paul Times.

Say Mr. Schurman did you forget or didn't you know that Gov. Johnson had compelled the railroads to reduce their grain rates ten per cent which means a saving to northwestern farmers of a million and a half to two million dollars? Now how does that sound alongside the windy promises of a would-be-and-never-will, which are the same vacuous promises you republicans have flimflammed the people with for forty years?

and it cures the cold. That's what is necessary. It soothes the throat because it reduces the irritation; cures the cold because it drives out the inflammation; builds up the weakened tissues because it nourishes them back to their natural strength. That's how Scott's Emulsion deals with a sore throat, a cough, a cold, or bronchitis.

HUNT AN-EATING TIGERS.

Men who shot the "big cats of the Indian jungle" all emphasize the difference between an "ordinary tiger" and a man eater." One varies from the other as much as a domestic pussy from a wildcat. The man-eater, when it catches sight of a hunter is at once all aflame with the passion to devour him. It has tasted human flesh and knows its sweetness.

When the Britisher in India goes tiger hunting, therefore, he looks first of all to his own safety. Having learned that a tiger rarely looks upward, he seeks a position at some distance from the ground, as, for instance the howdah of an elephant, or a machan or leaf-covered box in a tree.

The tiger usually keeps its eyes on the ground because it finds its prey there and its enemies also. The natural inhabitants of the trees, the birds and the monkeys, it holds in contempt. But on the ground, besides the sweet-fleshed man, lives the water buffalo, its most formidable foe. In combat the buffalo most times kills the tiger.

The peculiar sagacity of the elephant is of great asistance to the man who hunts tigers from the howdah. At the approach of the big cat the pachyderm trumpets an alarm, and if properly trained it will snatch its master with its trunk, should he be on the ground, and lift him into the howdah on its back. It then seeks the shadow of some tree and stands perfectly still, as if knowing that this way it will steady the hunter's aim.

When one shoots tigers from the machan or tree ambush he usually picks a place where the beast is wont to retreat when alarmed. With a companion he hides himself in his nest. In his hand he holds a magazine rifle loaded and cocked, while in his belt he carries a half dozen pistols for instant use should the gun fail him. Then he sends out a score or more of natives as beaters to drive the beast toward him. Encircling the region, the beaters begin to rap on the trees and to shout, and these noises, because of their strangeness, frighten the animal.

This Girl Is a Baseball "Sharp."

Because many women who attend baseball games are credited with silly remarks about plays it does not follow that all the freshly laundered summer girls who sit in the grandstand are ignorant of the sport, says the New York Press. On the contrary, some of them have a good knowledge of the intricacies. What's more, there are girls who can play ball, despite a popular impression. Miss Marion Reynolds often has been asked to play baseball with youths in Belfast, Me. In the Eastern college she attended she threw a ball 181 feet. When the story was doubted by her friends at home she confounded them by hurling the regulation horsehide sphere 182 1-2 feet. And there is nothing about her to suggest the "emancipated" being.

HEDGETHORN RECORD TIRE CO. CHICAGO U.S.A.
PUNCTURE PROOF SELF HEALING

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Speaking of football for the coming season at the University, the Minneapolis Tribune has the following to say of a Red Lake Falls boy: At tackle Bill Ittner stands out as the one man upon whom Minnesota must rely. Ittner last year was one of the very best tackles in the west on both offense and defense and he will be the same this fall. He is a man who does not go back, but who improves steadily, and this season will undoubtedly see him at the top of the list.

A number of the ladies of the city called in surprise upon Mrs. F. E. Hunt Tuesday evening, making an occasion in Mr. and Mrs. Hunt's 27th wedding anniversary. For the evening's diversion cards were played at which there were three tables.

Mr. Benners, father of Mrs. J. B. Armstrong of this city, died at Little Falls, Tuesday night. Mrs. Armstrong was there at the time. Mr. Armstrong, who had been out west for some time, arrived in Little Falls Tuesday. He will remain for the funeral and return to Red Lake Falls Saturday or Monday.

The heaviest rain storm of the year visited this city Saturday. It was accompanied by considerable hail. Some few reports have been received of broken windows but the damage to crops in the surrounding country is little to what it would have been ten days before as harvesting is about completed.

Joseph Prudhome, a farmer living several miles out of the city had a bad runaway accident in town last Saturday. He was thrown out of his wagon which ran over him cutting his head in several places and breaking two ribs. He was cared for by a physician and taken to his home where he will be confined for some time.

The merry crew gave a very charming dancing party at the K. P. hall last Thursday evening to which a goodly number of young people were invited and attended. The hall and reception rooms were prettily decorated with palms and cut flowers, light refreshments were served and the whole evening was one of enjoyment. The hostesses, as set forth on the card of invitation, were Osie Harren, Our Mrs. Omer Hall, Ikey Tibbets, Thunder Krueger, Lightning Kaus, Hee Haw Findisen and Doll Matthies.

Mrs. Charles N. Preston, of Elkland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was fading fast. My complexion got yellow, and I lost over 50 pounds. My thirst was terrible, and there was sugar in the kidney secretions. My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

Reversible Figures.

There is a Western senator of rather an irascible temper who, on the days when everything goes wrong, enjoys scolding the clerks employed by his committee.

On one occasion during the last session of the senate, the Western solon had desired one of the clerks to prepare a tabulated statement of certain trade statistics of the United States. When the statement was laid before the testy senator, he glanced at it with an air that boded trouble. Suddenly he exclaimed:

"Look here, Robinson, this won't do. Why didn't you prepare this statement on the typewriter? These figures are disgraceful. Any office boy could do better. See that five! It looks for all the world like a three! Nobody would take it for anything else! Just look at it!"

"I beg pardon, senator," replied the humble clerk; "the fact is, it is a three."

"A three!" roared the senator. "You idiot! It looks like a five!"—Harper's Weekly.

GOOD AND HARD.

Results of Excessive Coffee Drinking.

A Mich. woman says: "I had been using coffee since I was old enough to have a cup of my own at the table, and from it I have suffered agony hundreds of times in the years past.

"My trouble first began in the form of bilious colic, coming on every few weeks and almost ending my life. At every attack for 8 years I suffered in this way. I used to pray for death to relieve me from my suffering. I had also attacks of sick headache, and began to suffer from catarrh of the stomach, and of course awful dyspepsia.

"For about a year I lived on crackers and water. Believing that coffee was the cause of all this suffering, I finally quit it and began to use Postum Food Coffee. It agreed with my stomach, my troubles have left me and I am fast gaining my health under its use.

"No wonder I condemn coffee and tea. No one could be in a much more critical condition than I was from the use of coffee. Some doctors pronounced it cancer, others ulceration, but none gave me any relief. But since I stopped coffee and began Postum I am getting well so fast I can heartily recommend it for all who suffer as I did." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a reason."

CHAPTER X. (Continued.)

"Naturally," said Aloysius. "When does the doctor call?"

"He's been to-day, sir."

"And what does he order?"

"Beef tea, sir, and arrowroot, sir."

"Ah! Beef tea and arrowroot. Very good. No wine? You know we must have no nonsense about teetotalism if the doctor orders wine, as he probably will do when the patient's fever has gone down. Now, that will carry you on for a little while, and I'll look in from time to time and see how you are getting on. And you'll tell the doctor to do his best, won't you? Also tell him that the bill is to be sent to me."

The woman had never touched a five-pound note in all her life until that moment, but she knew its value well enough and stood too stupid for thanks.

"Now I'll say good morning. No. Don't you trouble to come down. And you must let me see a brighter face to-morrow."

He had gone before she could answer him a word. He did not see that people ran out of doors to stare after him as he passed, but the fact was the man late in possession had told the story of his benefaction, and half the village knew of it already. Before nightfall everybody had heard of it, and once again the name of Brangwyn filled the general mouth. He was just as unconscious of this as he was of the fact that M. Ribot was en route to Paris, with intent to weave another strand in the rope which was meant to hang him. He sat alone all morning and all afternoon in his own inward-looking way, sometimes occupying himself with a book, sometimes with his pencil, and now and then spending a few minutes over one or the other of his waxen sketches; but oftenest with empty and unoccupied hands, smoking and staring before him with unseeing eyes.

That evening there came a ring at the bell, and he heard the voice of the clergyman of the parish asking if he were at home. Twice he had excused himself from receiving that visitor already.

"I suppose," he said to himself, "I can't go on forever without a word of explanation. I'll see the man, and get it over."

He was sitting after dinner over his coffee and a chess problem he was constructing in the room which had been Truscott's study, and walking through the open doorway into the hall he greeted his visitor on the threshhold.

"Pray come in, sir," he said, and when the caller was seated he addressed him with a courteous excuse for his former aloofness. "The fact is I am a very uncompanionable fellow. I have fallen into lonely habits, and I find they grow upon me. I beg you not to think that I am quite a bear or that I am willingly discourteous. But I am painfully conscious of my own unfitness for society, and I prefer to be alone. You won't take that plain statement as being offensive, will you? And you won't allow it to prevent you from calling upon me in any case of urgency such as gentlemen of your profession are so often brought into contact with."

The clergyman was a genial man with a humorous mouth and eye and a fine expression of intelligence.

"Now, do you know, Mr. Brangwyn," he answered. "I should counsel you to fight that tendency, and to fight it hard."

"No doubt," said Aloysius, "I should offer the same counsel to another, but I can't take my own prescription. I'm an unclubable fellow, and I shall ask you to leave me to my humor."

"I was," returned the other. "I am constructing a three-move probleh here. I find some occupation that way now and then."

"My dear sir," said the parson, "I invite you to have pity on a starving soul. There isn't another chess player in the parish, and it's the only recreation in the world for me, except a grind at the classics now and then."

"Are you at leisure now?" Aloysius asked.

"I am, sir," said the parson. "Will you give me a game?"

"With pleasure," said Aloysius. "It is the one thing I regret in the lonely life I am obliged to lead. You will find me somewhat rusty, I am afraid."

The visitor was already setting out the men. Aloysius pushed the cigar box toward him and drew his chair up to the board. In silence the parson took a black pawn and a white, and, after juggling them behind him, held out both hands. The first move fell to him and the game began. They played in silence for an hour, and each found the other worthy of his steel. At last the host forced his way through a stubborn defense, and the guest turned down his king in token of surrender.

"Gad, Mr. Brangwyn," said the parson, "that was a glorious tussle. I must be off now, but you'll give me my revenge?"

"Willingly," said Aloysius. "At any time you please."

"Before I go," said the parson, "let me tell you why I called. I have heard of your visit to that unfortunate fellow Harvey and of the generous way in which you relieved him. I have done what little I could do, but the living here is a plaguy poor one, and I have a very big quiverful at home. Most of my parishioners are humble folk, and the few who are well-to-do are abominably tight-fisted. I'm a notorious begger for my poor, and I came here on a cadging errand to-night."

"Is there much poverty here?" asked Aloysius.

"There is enough to make the heart ache," said the parson.

"I have forgotten to make myself acquainted with your name," said Brangwyn. "If you will oblige me with it I will write a cheque. One would like to be of some little use in the world."

"That is my name, Mr. Brangwyn," said the parson, handing him a card.

Aloysius drew a cheque for fifty pounds, payable to the Rev. John Henry Lisle. The cleric's eyes widened as he read.

"Sir," he cried, "this is munificent. This is princely."

"I have much more money than I have any use for," said the giver. "Do not let any case of honest distress go unrelieved so long as I am here. But I prefer not to have my name mentioned."

This way Aloysius Brangwyn's first step back toward the world he had deserted, and it led him inevitably toward another.

CHAPTER XI.

The Reverend John Henry Lisle was a man of honor and discretion, and he meant to keep Brangwyn's secret inviolate. But the partner of his bed and board had a wifely little knack of going over her husband's pockets at any time when she happened to be in want of small change, and she made a perquisition of this sort on the following morning whilst the good man stole his customary extra forty winks. So she was necessarily taken into confidence, and having been solemnly pledged to secrecy she told nobody but her two dearest friends, and they being solemnly pledged to secrecy told nobody but their own dearest friends, who spread the news in the very strictest confidence until it was the common property of the whole village. This had a disastrous result in one respect, for it brought every loafer and good-for-naught in the parish to Aloysius's door for a time, and led to his being dogged upon his nightly rambles, until it was discovered that the only way in which not to share in the rich man's bounty was to ask for it. Amongst others to whose ears the story of his generosity came were Billery and Truscott, and these were of one opinion—the miserable man was paying conscience money. But the villagers, who knew nothing of the awful accusations which hung over their benefactor's head, learned to adore him, and on the occasion of their rare encounters with him they capped him with rare good will, and many of them sent blessings after him.

He kept his word with the unlucky workman he had befriended in his need, and looked in on him from time to time. He was forced at first to threaten extreme measures to put an end to the exuberance of Mrs. Harvey's gratitude.

"Now, look here," he said, "if you are going to talk to me like this every time I come within speaking distance I shall stay away altogether and stop supplies. Understand distinctly, I won't have it. I won't be bothered with it."

So the whole family chanted his praises to everybody whom they could get to listen; and the children, who were told every day that he was the best of men, and were nightly taught to remember him in their simple prayers, ran to him with that infinite trust and love which makes childhood so engaging, and would hold him by the hand and prattle to him with no fear of the gloomy eyes and abstracted manner with which he often met them. It happened one night that he had meant to make a call upon the patient, who was then rapidly approaching convalescence, and was, for a teetotaler, submitting to the doctor's orders on the port wine question with exemplary resignation. He happened to be walking on the strip of turf which lined the road, and his approaching footsteps were unheard. But the window was open to the mild autumn night, and he could hear the children at their devotions. Unwilling to interrupt them he stood still and played the innocent eavesdropper, not witting what was coming. "God bless dear, good, kind Mr. Brangwyn, and grandfather, and father, and mother, and make father's leg get better soon, and make me a good girl (boy), for Christ's sake, amen."

He did not enter the house that night, for there was an unwonted moisture in his eyes which he was not willing to have seen. He went back to his lonely study and sat there with the unfailing cigar between his lips, and more than once the tears started as he heard again the pretty treble unison in fancy: God bless dear, good, kind Mr. Brangwyn." The memory fell on his heart as the words themselves had fallen, like dew upon parched ground. Lisle came over to ask for a game of chess, which was now played twice a week, and found a certain indefinable change in him. He made no approach to an understanding of it until Brangwyn commenced by telling him what had befallen.

"It touched me, Lisle," he said, in a voice which had a slight tremor in it. "It touched me deeply. I have not found the world rich in gratitude so far as I have traveled through it."

"You find it sometimes," said the parson," and when you do it is a pleasing thing. But it's a thing to be too sanguine in hoping for. Do you mind our talking together? Stop me if I bore you."

"Let us play our game," said Aloysius. Lisle assented with a cheerful alacrity.

"Your turn for white to-night. Do you mind trying that gambit again? I think I have an answer to it."

Aloysius advanced his man without answering. His wits were not on the game, and the parson scored a somewhat easy victory.

"There was something you wanted to say to me, I think," said the host, leaning back in his chair as if he was fatigued, and shading his eyes with his hand.

"Yes," answered Lisle. "I was going to ask you if you have any definite reasons for staying away from church. Brangwyn dropped his hand and looked at him. "Are you a churchman?"

"They put me down for one in the census, I suppose," said Aloysius, with a clouded and fleeting smile. "But the fact is, I'm a nothingarian."

"That's a pity," said Lisle, gravely.

"It's dreadful pity," said Aloysius, taking shelter behind his hand again; "but what is a man to do? You can't make yourself believe a thing against your own judgment."

"Have you tried?" asked Lisle.

"Yes," Aloysius answered. "I gave away that last game. Have you time for another?"

Lisle nodded assent. He was beginning to know something of his man, and he had more than begun to conceive a warm regard for him.

"I'll tell you what it is, my friend," he said, voicelessly as he opened the game. "I mean to get inside that fence of yours. I think there's a good man behind it. I'm sure there's a great grief behind it. I'm going to know you well before I've done with you, but I shall travel into your good graces very, very slowly."

He had traveled faster than he knew. The lonely man's heart had already warmed to him. There was not another man alive to whom he would or could have told that story of the children's prayer. Aloysius, not dreaming how his companion's thoughts were occupied, concentrated his thoughts upon the game, and Lisle set him so stiff a task that when at last the final move was played they were both astonished to hear the mantel clock sound midnight.

"I must run or I shall catch it," said Lisle. "Good night, Brangwyn."

"Good night," said Aloysius. He held out his hand for the first time in the history of their acquaintance.

The parson gripped it heartily and looked as if he were about to speak. He thought better of it, and with a repetition of his "good night" hastened away, drawing the hall door to its place behind him.

"That's a good fellow," said Aloysius, as the sound of Lisle's rapid footsteps died away. "A good fellow. He carries his certificate in his face. And a little human companionship is worth something after all."

When he went out next night he timed himself to arrive an hour later at Harvey's cottage. The patient was downstairs, and a crutch was leaning against the wall beside him.

"Come," said Aloysius, "this is better."

How Anarchists Were Foiled.

The anarchist plot to assassinate King Victor of Italy by placing bombs on the railway line at Ancona was frustrated in a remarkable manner. One day last week, says Reynolds' Newspaper, a well known English mining engineer who has had several engagements in Spain, was riding on a motor omnibus down Tottenham court road.

Two foreigners ascended and indulged in a heated conversation in the Catalan dialect of Spanish, a dialect the English engineer spoke perfectly, owing to his long residence in Catalonia. He overheard the whole details of a plot to blow up the king of Italy's train near Ancona. Realizing the gravity of the situation, he alighted and took a cab to Scotland Yard, where he told his story.

At first the officials were inclined to cough, but his gravity and credentials at length convinced them that there might be something in his statement. Eventually the Italian police were telegraphed to, the bombs were discovered, and the preparations of the terrible outrage prevented.

That Draco Doctrine.

Whether or not the Draco doctrine be made a rule of international law hereafter, its present discussion is timely warning that the collection of public debts by fleets and armies is likely to prove a rather precarious undertaking for both debtor and creditor. While the creditor nation thus enforcing its claims will be dreaded and shunned, the credit of the repudiator will be utterly lost.

HOLD STATE PAPERS

PRICELESS MANUSCRIPTS IN LIBRARY AT WASHINGTON.

On the second floor of the congressional library, reached through a great hall filled with exhibits, the visitor finds a lofty pavilion, 50 feet square, with desks, catalogues and other special equipment for the consultation of manuscripts. This is the administrative headquarters of the manuscripts division. In a room of equal area above it, six repairers are continuously at work cleansing, mending and piecing out documents that require this and reenforcing with a mask of transparent silk gauze the most valuable of them.

To the rear of the main pavilion stretches the storage room—a hall more than 200 feet long by nearly 40 in width. It is shelved with three tiers of metal cases, the lower of which is inclosed in glass, tightly set, with locked doors, in the alcoves opposite the wide windows are large steel safes, burglar proof, with combination locks. There are 20 of these, and others may be added as needed.

In these cases and safes are now housed the manuscript collections. Among them are the volumes which, until recently transferred to the library, have formed a distinction of the department of state; the papers of the continental congress—in more than 300 folio volumes—the papers of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, among the presidents; of Hamilton, Franklin and other statesmen. Continuing the presidential series are the papers of Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren acquired by the library by gift, and of Franklin Pierce, James K. Polk and Andrew Johnson, acquired by purchase. The papers of Salmon Chase and a large collection of papers of Daniel Webster fit in usefully in their appropriate epochs.

Back of these in date and touching another side of our history are the papers—including the letter and log books—of Commodore Preble and many of Commodores Barry and Porter. Brilliant earlier passages in the achievements of our navy and the career of the most picuresque of its heroes are in the 12 volumes of papers of John Paul Jones.

The letter books and diary of Robert Morris as superintendent of finance (1781-84), acquired three years ago, after generations of vicissitude, including the perils of the junk shop, contain copies of every letter written by him and a minute of every transaction and interview in his office during the four years of his incumbency. They have never until now been accessible to the historian. Without them the final history of the revolution cannot be written.—Youth's Companion.

Presiding Officer's Duties.

Maj. McDowell, clerk of the house of representatives in Washington, was approached by a young member who was perplexed as to what he should do if called upon to preside temporarily. "Well," said McDowell, "when I was a member of that body of scamps an old member came to me to post me as to what I should do when I was called upon to preside. 'Before you do anything,' he told me, 'go out into the woodshed and practice making a noise with a mallet. When you've learned how to make more noise with that mallet than all the members of the house talking at the same time you've got the secret of presiding over the house down fine.' 'Now, suppose somebody asks a parliamentary question you can't answer, what must you do?' 'Pound your desk so hard nobody can hear and yell for help. By the time the house is in order Asher Hinds will be at your elbow to tell you what to do. Then ask the member to repeat the question and answer it as if that was the first time you had heard it.'"

Senator Bate's Rules.

The late Senator William B. Bate, of Tennessee, was a major general in the confederate army and never quite reconciled himself to the defeat of the south.

Soon after he came to the senate he formulated a set of rules which he called "Rules for My Proper Legislative Guidance." Whenever a proposition came up about which he was undecided he would take the printed slip containing these rules from his pocket and study it carefully.

"Bate," said a colleague one day, "what is that slip of paper to which you refer so frequently?"

"That," said Senator Bate, "is a little reminder of my beliefs on constitutional questions."

"Where did you get it? Think it out yourself?"

"No, suh," replied Bate with much dignity. "I found most of those immortal truths in the constitution of the confederate states of America."

Looking Far Ahead.

A sarcastic friend of Senator Bailey called upon him in Washington, having with him his bright little son. "You should try to get your boy appointed to West Point or Annapolis," said the senator. "Oh, no," said the friend, "we have got something better than that for him. His ambition is to build the Panama canal. He will have two years more in the preparatory school, then four years on civil engineering and possibly two years in the field under some good engineer, and then I want him to get to work on the canal. He may be the man who is to be at the head of that great enterprise and really construct it."

GAINED 34 POUNDS

Persistent Anæmia Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills After Other Remedies Had Failed.

"When I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," says Mrs. Nathaniel Field, of St. Albans, Somerset county, Maine, "I was the palest, most bloodless person you could imagine. My tongue and gums were colorless and my fingers and ears were like wax. I had two doctors and they pronounced my trouble anæmia. I had spells of vomiting, could not eat, in fact, did not dare to, I had such distress after eating. My stomach was filled with gas which caused me awful agony. The backache I suffered was at times almost unbearable and the least exertion made my heart beat so fast that I could hardly breathe. But the worst of all was the splitting neuralgia headache which never left me for seven weeks. About this time I had had several numb spells. My limbs would be cold and without any feeling and the most deathly sensations would come over me.

"Nothing had helped me until I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, in fact, I had grown worse every day. After I had taken the pills a short time I could see that they were benefiting me and one morning I awoke entirely free from pain. The distress after eating disappeared and in three weeks I could eat anything I wanted and suffer no inconvenience. I also slept soundly. I have taken several boxes of the pills and have gained in weight from 120 to 154 pounds and am perfectly well now."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure anæmia because they actually make new blood. For rheumatism, indigestion, nervous headaches and many forms of weakness they are recommended even if ordinary medicines have failed. They are sold by all druggists, or will be sent postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Base Deceiver.

Mr. Gunner—I should say so. You can find him any evening on a roof garden picking cherries out of fancy drinks.

All Chemically Pure.

The mistaken idea of a few years ago, about Alum in Baking Powders being injurious, no longer prevails, or scarcely exists. It is a well established fact by chemical analysis that Cream of Tartar being less volatile than Alum, when exposed to heat, is not entirely vaporized as is the case with Alum, but leaves a residue in the bread, which is injurious. Alum, on the contrary, is entirely evaporated while performing its function during process of baking, leaving no atom of injurious residuous substance. The words "Chemically Pure" erroneously used to designate Cream of Tartar from Alum baking powder is a misnomer. Baking Powder made of pure Alum is as chemically pure as made from pure cream of tartar. These words mean nothing more nor less than pure chemicals, and in no way can they imply that one baking powder is Alum and another Cream of Tartar. Alum has been declared to be wholesome; an established fact. Every large water system in the cities along the Missouri river use Alum in large quantities to purify the water before pumping it into their water mains for consumption. Cream of Tartar baking powder is perhaps good enough for any one; Alum baking powder is better, and very much cheaper.

Help for Women Passing Through Change of Life

Providence has allotted us each at least seventy years in which to fulfill our mission in life, and it is generally our own fault if we die prematurely.

Mrs. Mary Koehne

Nervous exhaustion invites disease. This statement is the positive truth.

When everything becomes a burden and you cannot walk a few blocks without excessive fatigue, and you break out into perspiration easily, and your face flushes, and you grow excited and shaky at the least provocation, and you cannot bear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves have given out; you need building up at once! To build up woman's nervous system and during the period of change of life we know of no better medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 Garfield Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years in my family and it never disappoints; so when I felt that I was nearing the change of life I commenced treatment with it. I took in all about six bottles and it did me a great deal of good. It stopped my dizzy spells, pains in my back and the headaches with which I had suffered for months before taking the Compound. I feel that if it had not been for this great medicine for women that I should not have been alive to-day. It is splendid for women, old or young, and will surely cure all female disorders."

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick and ailing women to write her for advice. Her great experience is at their service, free of cost.

WILD WITH ITCHING HUMOR.

Eruption Broke Out in Spots All Over Body—Cured at Expense of Only $1.25—Thanks Cuticura.

The Cuticura Remedies cured me of my skin disease, and I am very thankful to you. My trouble was eruption of the skin, which broke out in spots all over my body, and caused a continual itching which nearly drove me wild at times. I got medicine of a doctor, but it did not cure me, and when I saw in a paper your ad, I sent to you for the Cuticura book, and I studied my case in it. I then went to the drug store and bought one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura Ointment and one vial of Cuticura Pills. From the first application I received relief. I used the first set and two extra cakes of Cuticura Soap, and was completely cured. I had suffered for two years, and I again thank Cuticura for my cure. Claude N. Johnson, Maple Grove Farm, R. F. Sam's Winnebago Girl.

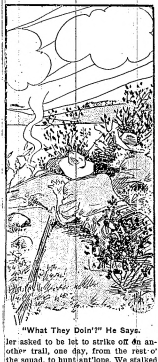
By WILLIAM R. LIGHTON.

Uncle Mac is not a ready or willing talker, when the talk relates to his own achievements; but this is a tale he told me one day, when we sat together within the grateful shelter of his orchard trees:

It ain't the things that happens to a feller that makes hardship; it's the way he looks at 'em. I found that out, 'most the first thing, when I come to Nebrasky. An' there was Sam Weeks, that I knowed when I was a scout. Did I ever tell you about him?

Sam, he come to our post with a batch o' rookies that was sent out from Omaha, when we was policin' the Platte country, time they was runnin' the surveys. He was a funny chap for a soldier. We was most of us pretty toler'ble stout an' hearty; but Sam, he was a long, slim, wobbly kind of a critter, that hadn't no more shape to him than a new-dropped lamb. He looked like the meat on him had been jerked.

Well, 'twas only a couple weeks after he'd come out when him an' me was detailed with a squad that was goin' out to pertect one o' the surveyors' grub trains. We had to go with 'em about a hunderd mile up the Platte valley. The Sioux was all through that country, more-less; but they hadn't been botherin' the surveyors a great sight right there, an' we didn't expect no trouble. There wa'n't a thing happened, goin' out; nor nothin' wouldn't have happened comin' back, only Sam an' me an' another feller asked to be let to strike off on another trail, one day, from the rest o' the squad, to hunt ant'lope. We stalked 'em back in the hills a good ways, but didn't get a shot at 'em.



"What They Doin'?" He Says.

We kep' lookin' out for our ant'lope, but we didn't see nothin' more of 'em. 'Long about dusk, we seen there 'd been fires built a ways ahead, an' we judged 'twas a bunch of Sioux that had gone into camp. I wanted to see what they looked like. So we went in pretty clost, mebbe half a mile, till we come to a dry creek that crossed the trail, an' then we struck up the creek so's to get back on the hill a ways, an' kind o' nose 'round.

After we'd gone as far as I liked to go on our horses, I told 'em we'd leave the other feller down there in the creek to hold the horses, an' me an' Sam went on afoot. You'd 've thought Sam was afeared I was goin' to take him out in the brush an' murder him, he was so scared.

There was about a dozen bucks in the party, an' I reckoned they must 've had a good trip, the way they was actin', racketin' 'round like they didn't care for nobody. Me an' Sam, we lay in the brush watchin' 'em mebbe quarter of an hour. 'Twas mighty interestin' for Sam, soon as his scare had wore off some, an' he begun pesterin' me with all kinds o' questions, till after while I seen there was some kind of a fuss amongst 'em, an' there was one o' the bucks come in t'wards the fire, draggin' a woman by the arm.

Sam, he'd got upon his knees whiles we was lookin' at 'em, an' I couldn't make him lay down.

"What they doin'?" he says.

"Nothin'," I says, "only she's a Winnebago, or Omaha, that they took when they was stealin' the ponies. Lay down you fool," I says, "or they'll see you."

"What be they goin' to do with her?" he says; an' I says, "Oh, nuthin' only same as they do with all the women they ketch. They'll take her with 'em, an' one of 'em 'll have her for his'n. Lay down," I says, "or I'll be dummed if I don't make you."

So we laid an' watched 'em a spell longer, an' pretty soon Sam, he says, "Say, Mac, ain't there some way we could get her?"

"What in thunder you want to get her for?" I says.

"Oh, I don't know," he says, "only I just want to get her out o' that. I can't think o' no way to do it," he says, "but I'm goin' to make a try for it, anyway."

Ever hear such foolishness! "No, there ain't no way," I says.

"Why," Sam says, "if you're scared to go, I'll do it," he says. Hear him talk!

But the more I listened to Sam, the more I knowed I'd either have to j'ine in with him, or else go off an' leave him; an' of course there wa'n't but one thing to do, an' I says, "All right, Sam; we'll give her a try."

I left Sam there, to watch out, an' I went back an' told the other feller what we was goin' to do. He was willin' enough, because he hadn't had no fun that trip yet.

Well, when the Sioux had got fixed for night, 'twa'n't but a little while till their fire died down. There was brush growin' within 20 yards o' the fire; only 'twas scattered, so's I had to get down on my belly an' wiggle acrost the bare places. Pretty soon I raised up an' looked over the top, so's to locate the squaw. She wa'n't but about ten yards from me, but her arm was tied to that o' one o' the bucks. I just laid flat on the ground, where I could keep my eye on her, an' I begun makin' a lot o' noises, like crickets, an' dif'rent kinds o' bugs. I misdoubted if she'd be sleepin' very hearty, after what 'd happened; an' pretty soon I seen her turn over an' lift up on her elbow, like she was listenin'.

She was onto her job, all right; she never made a move nor a sound. I signed to her what I was tryin' to do, an' then I took my knife out o' the sheath an' crep' in a ways further till I got where I reckoned I could pitch her the knife an' let her cut herself loose. The knife lit right between her an' the buck, an' the blade hit a little rock. I'd oughter knowed better! It sounded like a clap o' thunder, an' the buck he begun to move an' throw his robe off him. The squaw, she snatched the knife an' slashed her arm loose, an' then she made a break for it; but the buck set up an' ketched hold of her. He wa'n't rightly wide-awake, so's he didn't have his full strength, an' she jerked away from him an' begun to run; an' then Sam let go with his rifle, an' I seen the buck drop.

The whole camp was waked up then, o' course. They didn't know what. 'Twas mighty lucky for us the fire was low. That give us a minute or two start. They throwed a lot o' dry stuff on their fire pretty soon, an' it blazed up; but by then we was up to the top o' the hill, where we'd left the other feller, an' then we all broke down to where the ponies was tied. Sam, he made a jump for his saddle. "That's no way, Sam. We'll have to let the ponies go," I says. I knowed them Sioux would be skally-hootin' 'round everywhere, right off, an' we must do somethin' to put 'em off our trail; so I untied the ponies, an' turned 'em with their heads back t'wards the trail, an' then I took an' lashed 'em with my quirt; an' they started down the creek bed, lickity-split. Soon as we'd got the ponies started, we went the other way, afoot, makin' all the trail we knowed how.

Sam, he didn't seem to mind what we said to him; he was too much took up with the girl. He sure did set a heap by her; he was as proud of her as if he'd made her hisself. She wa'n't much to look at, either, that I could see—only just a Winnebago girl, 16 or 17 years old, an' not no better lookin' than the general run of 'em.

Land, land! If the Almighty had sent an angel to us out there, I b'lieve I'd 've picked a fight with him. There ain't no tellin' how I felt. Hungry! I could 've eat anythin'. We'd took the last of our water, too.

Come night, I act'ly didn't care. Me an' Sam, our tongues was swelled so by then that our teeth wouldn't shut, an' the others wa'n't much better off. We was clean tuckered out, an' couldn't hardly stagger another step. After the sun set, the wind begun to die down, an' after awhile we could see the stars—just a big one here an' there. They looked mighty sickly, but they helped us a heap, because we could tell which way we was goin'. 'Twas a little mite cooler then, an' we laid down for a spell, an' we was so beat out we went to sleep, all of us.

When I waked up, I act'ly felt chilly, an' I seen there was dew fallin'. 'Twas on my face, an' my whiskers was wet with it. I knowed we was all right then. I waked the rest of 'em up an' showed 'em what to do. The brush an' stuff that was growin' 'round was all speckled over with little shiny drops, an' us fellers took off the big han'k'chiefs we had 'round our necks, an' went to work real easy, wipin' the dew off the leaves. It's a trick a soldier learnt me once, an' it's worth knowin'. We kep' wipin' an' wipin' till our han'kachiefs was soaked, an' then we tipped our heads back an' squeezed the dew out of 'em in our months. It saved my life, an' I know it.

We just kep' on, all night long, wipin' and squeezin'. Next mornin' we felt mighty dif'rent, now I tell you! 'Twas a cooler day, too, an' we judged we wa'n't far from the trail where our squad was. We ate moss till come middle o' the mornin', an' then we shot a couple of rabbits an' cooked 'em; an' t'wards evenin' we got to the trail and met up with some o' the boys lookin' for us. We was all right then.

But what do you reckon Sam done? He had a spell o' fever pretty soon, an' got his discharge; an' then he didn't do a thing but go back to the Winnebago rese'vation an' stay there, an' take up with that girl! But that's one o' the things I always say: You can't never tell. If you ever happen to meet up with any halfbreed Winnebagoes out there, you'll know they prob'ly b'long to Sam.

LINCOLN'S MIRTCLE.

Spectator Thought He Hewed Logs for Birthplace.

A great deal of curiosity and comment was aroused by the Lincoln log cabin as it passed through the different cities of the East, on its way from New York to its final resting place in Kentucky. Many curious anecdotes are told of the trip, one of which was recounted with keen relish at the Belvedere the other day by Capt. N. S. Bullitt of Company A, First Kentucky infantry, who was in charge of the detail of five privates that guarded the relic on its way south.

The car on which the cabin rested stood on a railroad siding in Philadelphia, when a Quaker City man, who had exhibited great apparent interest in the cabin, approached Capt. Bullitt with a timid question.

"So that is really the Lincoln cabin?" he asked.

"The real thing," responded the captain.

"And Lincoln was born in there?"

"Right within those very walls."

"Well, well," said the questioner, as he ruminatively stroked a meager tuft of reddish beard, "and I suppose he cut those logs with his own hands.

Just the Thing.

North Dakota Solves the Adulteration Problem.

North Dakota seems to have found the key to the question, "How shall we protect the people from frauds in manufactured products?" A new law has recently gone into effect designed to make it impossible to deceive people into buying inferior and adulterated paint under the impression that they are getting real paint, viz.: pure white lead and linseed oil.

The North Dakota lawmakers did not attempt to absolutely prohibit the inferior pigments, or mixtures of pigments. They adopted the slogan, "Let the label tell," and then left to the people to buy whichever they wished.

Under this plan, if any one wishes to buy a mixture of rock-dust, ground quartz and other cheap elements which are found in many paints and so-called "white leads," no one can object; for they do it with their eyes open. But if they prefer genuine white lead and linseed oil, they can be sure of getting it, for none but the genuine article can bear a label which says "pure white lead."

It would seem that were this same principle applied to food, beverages and all other prepared articles, where deception is practiced upon the buyer, the question would be solved. It would leave us free to buy what we pleased, but would protect us from unwittingly buying what we did not want.

THE WINNING STROKE

If more than ordinary skill in playing brings the honors of the game to the winning player, so exceptional merit in a remedy ensures the commendation of the well informed, and as a reasonable amount of outdoor life and recreation is conducive to the health and strength, so does a perfect laxative tend to one's improvement in cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc. It is all important, however, in selecting a laxative, to choose one of known quality and excellence, like the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., a laxative which sweetens and cleanses the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects, as it acts naturally and gently on the internal organs, simply assisting nature when nature needs assistance, without griping, irritating or debilitating the internal organs in any way, as it contains nothing of an objectionable or injurious nature. As the plants which are combined with the figs in the manufacture of Syrup of Figs are known to physicians to act most beneficially upon the system, the remedy has met with their general approval as a family laxative, a fact well worth considering in making purchases.

It is because of the fact that SYRUP OF FIGS is a remedy of known quality and excellence, and approved by physicians that has led to its use by so many millions of well informed people, who would not use any remedy of uncertain quality or inferior reputation. Every family should have a bottle of the genuine on hand at all times, to use when a laxative remedy is required. Please to remember that the genuine Syrup of Figs is for sale in bottles of one size only, by all reputable druggists, and that full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co., is plainly printed on the front of every package. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905.

Care of Brown Leather Luggage.

The salesman brought out a superb kitbag of cowhide, a rich brown bag, hand-sewn, as big as a trunk.

"This," he said, "is $40."

"I'd take it," said the patron, "only brown leather luggage gets so dirty and shabby after a few month's use. I have a leather steamer trunk I paid $75 for, and it is scratched and stained and discolored so I am ashamed of it."

The salesman frowned.

"Haven't you sense enough," he said, "to clean your brown leather luggage with a tan dressing, the same as you clean your brown leather shoes? As brown shoes uncleaned become unsightly, so brown luggage does; but this luggage cleaned whenever it is used is the most imposing and the most beautiful you can have.

"Get a bottle of brown leather dressing, apply it to your brown trunk and rub it with a woollen cloth for five minutes. I'll guarantee that the trunk will then look better than new. It will have a richer, deeper color.

"Suit cases, valises, all sorts of brown leather things, should be rubbed each time they are used. Then, instead of shabby luggage, we should see everywhere spick and span luggage of the richest brown."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

S.S.S. THE STANDARD TONIC

The ingredients of which S. S. S. is composed, and the method of combining and preparing them so that they gently and pleasantly build up and strengthen every part of the body, make it the ideal tonic for a disordered condition of the system. Every one feels the need of a tonic sometimes. The system seems to get "out of gear," the appetite becomes fickle, the energies are depressed, sleep is not restful or refreshing, and the entire body has a nervous, worn-out feeling. When the system is in this depleted, run-down condition it must be aided by a tonic, and S. S. S. is recognized everywhere as the standard. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks selected for their gentle action as well as their invigorating effect on the system, it will not disagreeably affect any of the delicate members or tissues as do most of the so-called tonics on the market which contain potash or some other harmful mineral ingredient. These derange the stomach and digestion, unfavorably affect the bowels or otherwise damage the health. S. S. S. tones up the stomach and digestion, improves the appetite, produces refreshing sleep, rids the body of that tired, run-down feeling, and supplies tone and vigor to the entire system. It re-establishes the healthy circulation of the blood, acts more promptly and gives better and more lasting results than any other tonic, and because of its vegetable purity is an absolutely safe medicine for young or old. S. S. S. acts admirably in cases of dyspepsia, indigestion and other stomach troubles, and after using it that uncomfortable feeling of fullness, dizziness or drowsiness, after eating, are no longer felt. Not only is S. S. S. the greatest of all tonics but possesses purifying and alterative properties, and if there is a taint in the blood it will promptly remove every trace and restore perfect health. In selecting your tonic for this year do not experiment but get S. S. S., the recognized standard.

MILL WILL RESUME ITS WORK TODAY

Nearly $12,000 Expended Reparing Dam and Installing New Machinery.

The Red Lake Falls Milling Company's plant which has been undergoing repairs during the past two months is expected to resume operations today.

During the summer a large amount of work has been done on the dam and in installing new machinery. A large force of men has been employed in enlarging the abuttments and replacing much of the old timbered work with stone and cement. Last spring the high water and ice did considerable damage necessitating the replacing of heavy timbers in the dam. At the mill new machinery has been installed thruout. It is of the most modern kind that will increase the capacity of the mill to some extent and produce the highest possible grade of flour. Several men will be employed in helping and packing. The cost of the various improvements both at the dam and at the mill will be between $10,000 and $12,000.

BARN AND HORSES BURNED

E. A. Moran Suffers Loss by Fire Tuesday Afternoon.

A barn belonging to E. A. Moran was destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon and all the contents burned. Mrs. Moran was also badly burned while trying to save the horses.

The origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. Moran was up town and Mrs. Moran was at home lying down with one of the children when the alarm was given. When discovered the fire was well under way. Mrs. Moran rushed into the burning building in an effort to save the horses but was obliged to abandon the task to save her own life. As it was she was quite badly burned about the face and hands.

The building was totally destroyed in a very few minutes, together with its contents which included three horses, three sets of harness and a number of miscellaneous articles stored there. The horses were valued by Mr. Moran at $350. A small policy of insurance was carried on the barn amounting to $125.

SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 29

Is The Date of Red Lake Falls' Next Market Day.

The committee, haying in charge the market days has decided upon Saturday, September 29, as the next big day for farmers.

The last market day held was a conpicuous success and for this next one there can be promised a much more successful one from the standpoint of the merchants. More prizes will be offered than before and the plan will be changed materially to better suit the season of the year. A number of prizes will be offered along the line of produce raised by the farmer. For instance a very substantial prize will be given for the farmer bringing the largest load of wheat to town and the one coming the greatest distance. The list has not been make up yet but the local papers should be studied for complete announcements of prizes, entertainments and advertisements of special sales at the different stores.

Market days are especially profitable to farmers; to make them a success and for their own benefit they should come tho town in large numbers.

NEW FEDERAL LAW REGULAR "GEEWHIZ"

Will Make It Far More Difficult for Imigrants to Become Naturalized.

Must Remain Here Five Years Before Papers Issue—Must Speak English.

The new naturalization law goes into effect Sept. 27 and the making of American citizens will be much more difficult in the future.

THE REQUIREMENTS.

What are the requirements of the new law? The answer is long and complicated. But here is a typical case.

Let us suppose that Joseph Spagetti comes to America from Rome, arriving Sept. 28. The new law will then be in effect.

Suppose Spagetti decides to go to Hazleton, Pa., to work in the coal mines. He has friends there.

Now there is no hurry about Joseph's "first papers." He will gain nothing by applying at once; for, under the new law, he must haye lived in the country five years before he can become a naturalized citizen, and he must wait two years between his first and second papers.

Suppose, at the end of a year or two, Joseph Spagetti decides that he will stay. He will have to go to the clerk of the court (either federal or state) having jurisdiction where he resides, and make his declaration. This will cost $1. He can do it through an interpreter, if he is unable to speak English. The clerk of the court will fill a form, stating that the applicant is white, negro, etc.

There are nine states in which this simple declaration will entitle him to vote. It will also entitle him to take up public lands.

Joseph Spagetti must now wait two years. That much time, at least, must elapse. So Joseph waits until the five-year period has expired—five years from the date of his landing.

It will be 1911, in September, Joseph looks up two neighbors for witnesses—for this time he must go to the court with witnesses. These witnesses must be American citizens. They must be persons of good character and they must be able to swear of their own knowledge that Joseph Spagetti has lived in the United States five years.

MUST WRITE WASHINGTON.

This time Joseph must take $2 as a fee for the clerk of the court.

But before he goes to the clerk, he must do another very important thing. He must write to Washington, to the bureau of naturalization, asking the bureau to send him a certificate showing that he has been in the United States five years. The bureau will examine the immigration records at New York, and finding everything as he represented, will send him this certificate free of cost. So Spagetti goes to the court for final citizenship with his certificate, a copy of his original declaration and his two American citizen witnesses.

This time, the law specifies, he must tell his desires to the clerk in English and the clerk must find it out if he can talk English.

Then the two witnesses will be questioned. The answers to these questions will be made under oath and will be put into the shape of two affidavits. The witnesses will be asked whether Spagetti is a good law-abiding person; whether he has ever been arrested or sent to jail; whether he knows about the American constitution and form of government, and likes it. The witnesses will also be asked a few questions about themselves.

LOTS OF RED TAPE.

If everything appears satisfactory Spaggetti will sign the formal application and the witnesses will sign the affidavits. Then the clerk will tell Spagetti to come back on a certain date—about three months later—when the court is in session. So he gives up his $2 and all his papers and goes away.

Thereupon the clerk of the court starts the ball rolling. The application is made out in duplicate, and one copy, with the affidavits and certificate attached, is, within the next 30 days, sent to Washington to the bureau of naturalization. Here it is thoroughly investigated. The law allows the bureau 60 days for this sole purpose, and no final certificate of citizenship can be given until this time has expired.

And this is where Uncle Sam gets busy. It is not enough that Spagetti's papers are all in proper form and look straight. The bureau will send out inspectors to find if in fact things are what they seem. If a special agent found the witnesses to be professional witnesses, or Spagetti to be a felon, or a bad character, he would so report, and the bureau would send word to the district attorney to appear in court on the day set for Spagetti to come in, and to oppose the granting of citizenship to him. If the court persisted, the district attorney could note an appeal to the higher court.

If, however, Spagetti is found to be a good peacable man, and his witnesses good American citizens, the agent so reports to the bureau, and the bureau returns the papers to the clerk of the court, without objection to the granting of a certificate of citizenship.—News.

Original Lead Pencils.

Original pencils were really made of lead. These, when used on the rough paper of the time, made a clearly discernable mark. Germany led in their manufacture and the early importations to this country were much sought after. No pencils could be bought with other than gold coin, and a man who got a consignment of them had to be well recommended. It takes time to develop any industry, and it has taken years to bring golden grain belt beer to its present-day standard. Its purity and excellence of quality recommend it to all. LIGHT, FUEL, FOOD IN HUGE POTATOE

The department of agriculture at Washington is seeking a plan by which the farmer may cheaply make his own denaturized alcohol for light and fuel. Dr. Galloway, chief of the bureau of plant industry, under direction of Secretay Wilson, has sent agents to study the big potato that is grown in many sections of the continent and arrange for securing seed and transplanting it in this country.

This potato has small value for edible purposes, but is several times as large as the one commonly seen in this country. From an acre of ground it is claimed that enough of them can be produced to make 600 gallons of alcohol, which means light, heat and power for a farm household for a year.

This potato is to be developed and acclimated for the different sections of the United States as soon as possible. After the alcohol is taken from it, the residue is still useful for feeding livestock. Secretary Wilson and Dr. Galloway anticipate that in a few years it will constitute one of the most useful and valuable crops.

The department has completed arrangements with a big establishment in the west for the use of 10,000 tons of its refuse—cornstalks, husks' tops and ends of beets, cobs, etc.—to be devoted to systematic experiments in the reduction of alcohol. It is well known that there is plenty of alcohol in all these things. The proposition is to find whether it can be taken out at a reasonable cost.

HARVEST HANDS FOOLED

A number of the newspapers throughout this section and in fact all over the state have been publishing articles telling of the scarcity of farm labor and high wages for same in threshing season. The result of this has been that farm laborers, thinking to get more for their services have rushed to North Dakota in large numbers, passing the harvest fields of northern Minnesota where the wages paid are as large if not larger than in the neighboring state. Not only this but farm hands employed in the harvest fields in Northern Minnesota at $2.50 to $2.75 a day have been induced by these alluring reports to jump their jobs and seek the North Dakota Eldorado only to find that work was not nearly so plentiful over there and the prevailing wages ranging from 50c to 75c a day less.

Today a Times representative met one of these men, and he told the story of his experience.

"I had read of the big wages for harvest hands" he said "and as I am always looking for the best of it like everyone else, I decided to go over and get a piece of the big pie. I had a job on a farm near Crookston at $2.50 a day and threw it up and started for North Dakota. I found most of the small farmers supplied with men and finally after a week's lost time I took a job on the Grandin farm at $2.

I at once wrote back to friends here to look me up something and they found me a job at $2.75 and here I am about $25 worse off than if I had staid here in the first place.—Crookston Times.

WAS SHOT OUT HUNTING

Robert Bourdon had an unpleasant experience while out hunting Friday. There was nothing serious came of it but he would scarcely care to take his chances with it agatn. He was out chicken hunting with P. O. Floan. They got in among some high brush where they could not see each other and Mr. Floan fired at a chicken; It was not at close range, the shot was scattered and had spent its greatest force. However two shot of the size known as number 6 struck Mr. Bourdon. One hit him just above the right eye, very close to the eye. ball and flattened itself out against the bone. The other shot took effect in his right shoulder. Neither wound was of a serious nature altho the escape from seriousness was close.

Timely Assistance Saves Eus. Normandeau from Death.

A peculiar accident to Eus. Normandeau Friday almost caused his death and only prompt medical assistence prevented an untimely end.

Mr. Normandeau is a blacksmith and with his son was engaged in cutting a piece of iron with hammer and chisel. A blow of the hammer caused the chisel to fly out of Mr. Normandeau's hand. The sharp edge struck him in the groin on the right side, cutting thru his clothes into the flesh and severing an artery. Luckily Dr. Lemieux was quickly found and the rapid flow of blood stopped. The injured man was taken home on a stretcher but has since recovered sufficiently to be out. His was a lucky escape.

ALL THE NEWS THAT IS WORTH TELLING CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

At the Capital.

The enlisted strength of the army is slightly increased by about 2,000 in a general order issued at the war department last week.

The following postmasters have been appointed: Clinton D. Gimois, St. Cloud, Minn.; Ira R. Elliot, Ray, N. D.; William H. Stevens, Wimbledon, N. D.

President Roosevelt has received 702 orchids as an addition to his collection, now being cared for by Col. Brown, superintendent of the government propagation gardens. The orchids arrived from the Philippines.

The second son of the late Rear Admiral Sampson, U. S. N., to enter the naval academy was sworn in last week. He is Harold Sampson, and he was appointed by Senator Depew. His brother, Ralph Sampson, entered the same class several weeks ago.

On Oct. 18 at Washington the military monument in memory of Gen. George B. McClellan, former commander of the Army of the Potomac, will be unveiled. The general's widow is now seventy-one.

Man-Afraid-of-His-Highball seems to have been wrongly named, as he broke into jail in Phoenixville, Pa., for having too much firewater in his system. He is an alleged Indian chief and a showman out of a job.

Criminal.

T. F. Quirk, a Northern Pacific railman, was held up at Billings, Mont., by two masked men and robbed of 6 cents, which was all the money he had on his person.

The safe at the Olcott Lumber company's office was drilled and the walls were nearly filled with smokeless powder, which fell down and could not explode. The job was evidently the work of novices who were trying to emulate the Paskin and Comstock safe blowers.

Blineese Govin pleaded guilty in the district court of Chouteau county, Mont., to assault upon Mrs. Bridget Thibedeau of Chinook, and was sentenced by Judge Tattan to fifteen years in the penitentiary. The court considered the fact that he pleaded guilty in imposing the sentence, and gave him a milder sentence than was expected.

While Cashier P. W. Van Ancher lay bound hand and foot, gagged and tied to a table in a back room, two bandits leisurely looted the State Bank of Ranier, Or., in broad daylight. It was two hours before their unfortunate victim was able to free himself sufficiently to give the alarm, and in the meantime the robbers made good their escape, taking with them between $2,000 and $2,500 in gold coin. Silver and bank notes lying on the counter were untouched.

Foreign.

Ewald Conrad, alias Baron Santos von Dobrowski-Donnersmarck, who, it is alleged, deserted his American wife in Paris, taking with him $8,000 worth of jewels and some money belonging to her, and who was arrested Aug 23 on a charge of robbery and later discharged because he was not culpable under German law, has again been arrested at Hamburg and accused of burglary.

Floods have devastated a large section of the Behar district in India. Whole villages have been obliterated, great areas of food crops have been destroyed and the indigo crop ruined. There are nine feet of water on the low lying lands, giving the country for miles the appearance of an open sea. The inhabitants have sought refuge in the hills and are depending for subsistence on raids made on the half-ripe wheat fields situated on high ground.

Paul Boldavetch, a peasant who is 115 years old, it is alleged, tried to commit suicide at his home in Illutsk, Austria. He cut his throat, but the knife was not quite sharp enough and he was found before he had lost much blood and taken to the hospital. There he was soon put to rights. The old man was asked why he wanted to die, and he said the only reason was because he was tired of life.

As the result of a collision between troops and striking coal miners at Petrosensky, Hungary, 175 miners were injured.

By the end of September the famine will have spread to the provinces of Kazan, Simbirsk, Samara and Saratov, Russia. The zemstvo treasuries are exhausted and the whole cost of feeding the people devolves upon the central government. The grain required in the provinces named for food and sowing will cost approximately $21,500,000.

A dispatch to the Paris Temps from Tangier, Morocco, says that the sultan has released his elder brother, who had been imprisoned since the death of their father. The correspondent adds that reports to the effect that it is the sultan's intention to transfer the court from Fez to the City of Morocco continues to circulate, but that no confirmation is obtainable.

Harry Krouse, a brick mason for some time working at the sugar factory at Billings, Mont., fell from a thirty-five-foot scaffold and received injuries which it is feared will prove fatal.

Helen Keer, aged six years, fell from a second-story window at South Bend and was impaled on a picket fence. Unassisted she helped herself to the ground and back into the house. She is still alive.

A train on the Chicago & Alton was wrecked near Bloomington, Ill. None of the passengers was injured in the wreck proper, but a two-year-old child wandered onto the clear track and was killed by another train.

A spring wagon in which were seated William Sauers, wife and two children of Brecksville, Ohio, was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train at the crossing at Boston Mills, Ohio. Sauers and his wife were instantly killed and the seven-year-old son was slightly hurt. The two-year-old baby was hurled forty feet into a corn field, but was uninjured.

Peter Hartman, foreman of the Central Gypsum mill at Fort Dodge, Iowa, was caught in a rapidly revolving shaft and whirled to his death. The shaft made over 200 revolutions before he could be extricated. Both legs were broken, his head was crushed and his body reduced almost to a shapeless mass. He is survived by a widow and six children.

The storm which swept over the Pacific coast of the republic of Mexico for nearly three weeks has ended after having occasioned immense damage throughout an extensive region. Telegraph lines were prostrated and for a lond distance not a single post was left in its place. Great injury was done to farmers, and great loss to crops and cattle is reported.

As a result of a terrific explosion the shock of which was felt for ten miles, one man was killed and another dangerously injured and $300,000 worth of property was destroyed at the Calwa winery of the California Wine association at Fresno, Cal. The explosion was followed by fire which completed the havoc. Two hundred and fifty thousand gallons of wine were lost.

Otherwise.

Lieut. Edward H. Dunn, U. S. N., has been dismissed for scandalous conduct. He was attached to the Independance, Mare Island, Cal.

The Iowa state fair broke all records for attendance, more than 250,000 persons having seen the exposition. The live stock exhibition was exceptionally fine.

Joseph Day dropped dead while at work on the county farm at Leon, Iowa. His death was caused by the intense heat and heart failure. He was fifty-six years old.

John Sparks, governor of Nevada, was renominated by acclamation by the Democratic state convention. J. G. Sweeny and Samuel Davis withdrew as gubernatorial candidates.

Stripped of every vestige of clothing, John P. Mattley of Rathdrum, Idaho, started out recently to evangelize the world. He represented himself as a Messiah and selected the Kootenai county hospital as a likely field of usefulness. He was entering the city limits of Spokane when neighbors captured him. Much against his will he was forced to don a horse blanket and the authorities were notified. His sanity will be investigated.

A delegation of prominent citizens of Kentucky called on the members of the Democratic national committee and presented an invitation to the Democrats to hold its next convention in 1908 at Louisville.

A committee was appointed to call on the board of education to demand the reasons for the reduction and to inquire into the disposition of $10,000 in relief funds sent from the East for the benefit of teachers who were fire sufferers.

DEATH DOOM FOR HIGH OFFICIALS

SOCIAL REVOLUTIONISTS WILL CONTINUE TERRORISM—SEEK MINISTER'S LIFE.

WANT THE PREMIER REMOVED

REACTIONISTS DEMAND THAT STOLYPIN RETIRE FROM OFFICE.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 9.—The Social Revolutionists, at a meeting held after the publication of the government's program, adopted a resolution to continue terrorism and to aim at the lives of the highest officials.

It became known to-day that an attempt on the life of M. Kryshanovsky, vice minister of the interior, was made a few days ago. A revolutionist, attired as an army officer, appeared at the chancellory of the interior and asked for an audience with the vice minister, but while the revolutionist was waiting for an answer a porter noticed that his uniform was incorrect. Before the man could be arrested he became aware that he was the object of suspicion and succeeded in escaping from the building.

The open conflict between Premier Stolypin and the reactionists at court, due to the refusal of the premier to acquiesce in the abandonment of the proposed reforms, is reflected by the comment of the reactionary newspapers on the premier's note of Sept. 5, which are now openly demanding the retirment of M. Stolypin.

Want Stolypin Removed.

The Svet, whose court connections are known, while approving the institution of drumhead court-martial for the trial of political offenders as a step in the right direction, does not conceal its dissatisfaction at the promise of reforms.

The Russian Banner, organ of the League of the Russian People and other reactionist organizations, demands the premier's resignation, presuming that he is bidding for the support of the Moderate Liberals "instead of leaning only on true patriots." The paper adds: "M. Stolypin's declaration that no terrors can drive the government in the way of reaction is nonsese of the rankest sort. Under such pilotage our ship can never weather the storm."

Aside from the Rossia, M. Stolypin's personal organ, only Prof. Kosalevsky's Strana has a few words of commendation for the program of reforms which, the paper says, "was drafted by M. Stolypin in accordance with the best traditions of Russian liberalism," but, with the more radical papers, the Strana finds fault with the establishment of court-martial for the trial of political offenders and other measures for restoring order, which, according to the Strana, embody the worst features of the policy of the old regime.

Efforts Are Foredoomed.

The Rech recognizes the fight which the premier is making against being compelled to make a full surrender to the reactionary influences at court, but says his efforts are foredoomed to failure, and adds that he must yield to the demand for the abolition of the parliament.

Even the Novoe Vremya is noncommittal.

The attitude of the Moscow press toward the premier's announcement of his policy is not sympathetic. The leaders of the peaceful, regeneration party, who are gathering at Moscow after touring the country in the interests of their party, have slight hope of the government winning the elections, even with the aid of the reforms.

SUGAR FROM PHILIPPINES.

Western Refinery Pays $97,876 Duty on Raw Products.

The amount paid here, 25 per cent less than the amount on sugar from a foreign country, does enot go into the foreign country, does not go into the Philippine fund.

STENSLAND IS COMING BACK

Washington, Sept. 9.—A dispatch was received at the state department yesterday from Mr. Grummere, American minister to Morocco, conveying the information that Paul O. Stensland, the president of the Milwaukee Avenue State Bank of Chicago, was turned over yesterday to Managing Editor Keeley of the Chicago Tribune and Assistant State's Attorney Olson of Chicago, who apprehended the fugitive banker at Tangier. While the dispatch does not say so, the presumption is that Stensland will remain in confinement at the American legation at Tangier until arrangements have been perfected for his removal to the United States.

Messrs. Keeley and Olson will be held responsible henceforth for the safeguarding of the prisoner. They will be permitted to make their own arrangements for the return of Stensland, and it is said they have under consideration a merchant vessel, the name of which has not been divulged. The naval refrigerating ship Glacier, now en route home from Manila, is the only government vessel that will be available for many weeks, and she will not reach Tangier for at least three weeks.

"RUSTLING" GANG IN RAID.

Outlaws, Believed to Be Headed by Ryan, Run Off 49 Head.

Lewiston, Mont., Sept. 9.—An organized gang of horse thieves is operating in Fergus county, according to Walter J. Winnett, the well known stock grower in the Flat Willow country, who reports the loss of a bunch of forty-nine horses within the last few days. He says that other stockmen also have suffered heavy losses.

Winnett has been here for the purpose of organizing the stock growers and offering a reward of $3,000 for the arrest and conviction of the thieves.

It is the belief of some that the gang is headed by the notorious Ryan who is wanted in Valley county for horse stealing. Ryan once resided in the Flat Willow country and is thoroughly familiar with that section. Most of the horses stolen from Winnett were blooded stock and his financial loss is a heavy one.

SUICIDE BANKER WAS A FORGER

FORGERIES FOR MORE THAN A QUARTER OF A MILLION ARE FOUND.

COPIED PROMINENT NAMES

RECEIVER SAYS HE HAS NO IDEA WHERE HIPPLE'S VILLAINY WILL END.

Philadelphia, Sept. 9.—Forgeries for more than a quarter of a million of dollars by Frank K. Hipple, the suicide president of the defunct Real Estate Trust company, have been discovered by Receiver Earle. The latter made this statement late last night, adding that he had no idea where Hipple's villainy would end. Hipple, in order to meet his immense overdrafts, used the names of some of the most prominent business men of this city on notes which in some cases amounted to $150,000.

Copied Signatures.

The president had taken copies of the signatures of a number of business men while some of their checks or negotiable securities passed through his hands, but in every case he avoided the use of the name of a Real Estate Trust company depositor.

When pinched for money to meet his overdrafts or some big Segal loan, Mr. Earle said, as a last resort Hipple would draw up a note with the forged signature attached. This he would take to the cashier or paying teller, saying he had personally made the loan and it was discounted. With the amount to his credit he would satisfy the pressing claim.

Some One Got $2,000,000.

That some one secured $2,000,000 for negotiating the loans made to Adolf Segal by President Hipple is believed by those now engaged in investigating the company's affairs. Segal's repeated assertions that he did not borrow more than $2,000,000 from the trust company has caused the investigators to exert every effort to discover all of the details connected with these loans, and if it is found that others benefited they will be made to return the money.

It developed yesterday that the last state examination of the trust company was made in 1902.

Was Not Examined.

Robert McAfee, who was state banking commissioner from April, 1903, to July, 1905, made no examination, and Commissioner Berkey, who succeeded Mr. McAfee, also failed to examine the institution. The two expert accountants appointed yesterday by Commissioner Berkey to investigate the conditions of the concern, at the end of their first day's work announced that they found the trust estates, for which the Real Estate Trust company acted as trustee, to be intact.

Receiver Earle said last night that in order to accomplish the reorganization of the Real Estate Trust company he would accept the presidency if the depositors insisted.

Bellville, Ill., Sept. 9.—With his foot held fast in the frog of a railway switch while a string of freight cars were backed toward him Emil Siegfried, aged nine years, retained his presence of mind and leaned far over to one side to save his body from being cut in two. His screams were drowned by the noise of the train and he was forced to watch the wheels crush his foot to a pulp. As it was torn and ground to pieces Emil says the foot became numb and remained so for some time. He was hurried to a hospital when his plight was discovered and the foot was amputated.

MINING LEASES HELD VALID

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF MINERAL LEASE LAWS UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT.

St. Paul, Sept. 9.—The constitutionality of the mineral lease laws and the validity of the Mabel Evans lease are upheld by the state supreme court in a decision handed down yesterday.

The case was important not only because of the value of the Mabel Evans lease, but because it involved the validity of the leases of all the iron ore lands owned by the state. The Mabel Evans lease was attacked by Attorney General Young on the ground that it was fraudulent. Public Examiner Sam Johnson two years ago reported that the lease was a family affair, and that Mabel Evans, to whom the lease was granted, was a sister of I. C. Patterson, one of the chief clerks in the land department when the lease was granted, and that in the transfers which followed Patterson became the owner of the lease.

The case was tried in the Duluth district court, and the court held that the charges of fraud has no foundation, and also that the law was constitutional. The law was attacked on the ground that it contravened the constitutional provision prohibiting the sale of school lands except by public sale. The question before the court then was whether the right to the minerals constituted a sale of "part of the land" or a lease to the land.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 9.—A. R. He put in a crop which yielded him 1,725 bushels of wheat and 900 bushels of oats, and in addition planted sixty acres of corn, which will yield him not less than fifty bushels to the acre. Of course he had to secure help when harvest commenced, but all the work of putting in his crop and cultivating it was done by him without assistance.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 9.—Flies, according to Health Officer D. C. Rood, are responsible for an epidemic of typhoid fever which is raging in mild form in this place. Hastings claims Ladd was a renter on his farm and that he merely advised him that the crops needed attention. Hastings refuses to pay the $10 and will appeal to the supreme court.

A ten-foot bank caved on him, covering him up to the neck and throwing his face downward. Frank Tory, who was helping him, escaped uninjured. Berzovich is survived by a widow and eight children.

HEAD ROLLED FLAT.

Horrifying Death Is Fate of Unidentified Man at Wausau.

One of the most horrifying deaths in the annals of Wausau befell an unidentified young man recently. The young man's head was pressed flat under a street roller which became unmanageable while being operated on a new pavement near the south bridge.

The man, who had just come from the West side, jumped onto the rear of the roller, to which two boys previously had been attracted.

The roller had finished its course up the hill from the bridge and, as usual, the engineer moved it backwards to turn the machine around. At this moment the engine became unmanageable and the engineer called to his three associated passengers at the rear to get off. This the two boys hastened to do, but the young man refused and replied, "I'll stay on as long as you do."

However, when he saw that the rear end of the massive machine was likely to strike a telephone post the young man jumped. His head struck the cement walk, and when the roller passed over his head the telephone pole was broken off below and above and the cement walk was badly damaged for a few yards.

An undertaker and physician and the coroner were summoned immediately.

When the undertaker picked up the corpse, the brain dropped entirely from the crushed skull onto the walk. The left eye was opened and seemed very lifelike, while the right eye, together with that side of the face and head, were entirely demolished.

The man's clothes were those of a working man, but further than this his identity has not been determined. There is a theory that the man was somewhat intoxicated and that his recklessness probably could be explained by his condition.—W.

WHAT KNABENSHUE WILL DO.

Must Circle City Hall Tower and Sail Back to Fair to Earn $500.

Roy Knabenshue, who has made wheels of industry and finance stop while all New York watched him sail over the city in his airship, come down Broadway, circle the Flatiron building and return to the northern extremity of the metropolis, has agreed to duplicate the feat during the coming state fair in Milwaukee. Knabenshue has defied nature so long that he does not hesitate to stipulate that he is to receive no compensation unless he does the almost impossible. He has agreed to sail from the state fair grounds every day that the weather will permit to the city hall in Milwaukee and return, and forfeits his fee of $5,000 unless he accomplished the difficult feat of aerial navigation. His recent flight by night from New York to a Massachusetts coast town and his safe landing next morning, 200 miles from the starting point has been the talk of aero clubs all over the world. At one time he was out over the sea and was seen passing vessels, having lowered his big silken bag to talk with the captain of a passing ship. This trip has demonstrated that Knabenshue can direct his aerial craft at will and that all who come to the fair will see the most extraordinary exhibition of aerial navigation ever given in the West.

NEW CHURCH CORNER IS LAID.

Work on Fine Edifice at Ripon Is Well Under Way.

The corner stone of the new Polish Catholic church, to replace the one destroyed by fire at Ripon recently, was laid with imposing ceremonies. The service was conducted by the Rev. B. Celichowski of Milwaukee, assisted by the Rev. T. Cosgrove, pastor of St. Peter's Catholic church, and the Rev. Wencelaus Kruszka, the pastor. Father Kruszka now has over $10,000 in hand for the new edifice, which will be of brick and cost $13,000 when completed. It is expected the new structure will be ready for occupancy about Dec. 1.

"BEAR" AN INSANE MAN.

Woods Scoured for Beast, Which Proves to Be Asylum Inmate.

An exciting bear hunt occurred in the woods around Maple Bluff, the aristocratic summer resort on Lake Mendota. It was thought that a bear had escaped from a passing train. The men all turned out and after thrashing the woods found the supposed bear was an inmate who had escaped from the Mendota hospital.

PROMISE A NEW LINE SOON.

Chicagoans Who Are Working on Road From Janesville Visit Madison.

H. H. Clough and David McAllister, both of Chicago, representing the syndicate which is projecting an interurban electric railroad from Chicago to Madison, were in Madison recently looking over the field. They assured business men there that the line would be built from Janesville to Madison by way of Stoughton just as soon as the materials and labor could be secured.

CRIMINAL TENDENCIES MAY BE CURED BY SURGERY

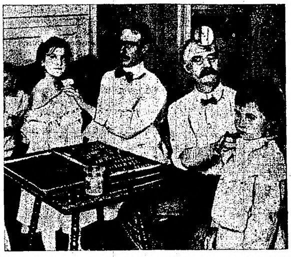
Ten Thousand Children Being Examined in Philadelphia by Experts.

To check or utterly abolish criminal impulses in children the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, working in connection with Philadelphia officials and prominent medical and surgical experts, has inaugurated a work of monster proportions and most advanced methods.

Ten thousand children picked at random from the slums of the Quaker City are undergoing investigation to discover physical defects that doctors say are the direct cause of the criminal instincts that lead them into sin.

Sometimes the trouble is in the eyes, at other times it is a pressure on the brain that it the root of the difficulty. After obtaining the consent of the parents, an operation is performed,, and the future conduct of the little patient is observed.

Director Coplin of the department of health and charities and his chief of staff, Dr. Abbott, are lending active cooperation in the work, and at the operations, either participating or helping with advice, are such noted experts as Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, Dr. George W. Dougherty, Dr. F. H. Dercum, Dr. W. W. Hawke, Dr. Alfred Gordon, Dr. Charles K. Mills, Dr. Louis Starr and Dr. Fred Frely.



DOCTORS L. C. WESSELS AND A. C. BUTCHER LOOKING FOR PHYSICAL DEFECTS IN CHILDREN.

The first examination of the children is made by Doctors L. C. Wessels and A. C. Butcher, detailed to the task by Director Coplin. They make the first inspection, and in cases where they find the need of medical treatment they turn the patients over to their fellow physicians.

Philadelphia has an intricate system for dealing with juvenile criminals, and the present radical step is the outgrowth of long experiments by philanthropic men and women to do something for the betterment of children whom birth and environment send away to a bad start in life.

As its name implies, the juvenile court of Philadelphia is devoted to dealing justice to offenders who are under sixteen years of age. Magistrate Gorman, who sits as committing magistrate, is assisting in the work of experimenting physically on youthful offenders, and in the course of his trials has made it a point to study out cases where help might be applied. He is convinced that much can be done, and summarizes the result of his studies in this interesting conclusion.

"It is not a matter of controversy between criminologists, but an established fact that many children heretofore treated as criminals are the helpless victims of some physical defects or irritations. I have in my experience as a magistrate met with several such cases, and I have kept careful records of them. One boy was a most incorrigible and vicious lad, according to the police, but Mrs. Ramsay, then the probation officer of the juvenile court, secured medical aid and the boy's skull was operated upon to relieve pressure upon a certain detailed. Not only is the youngster gone over carefully, but questions are asked as to its parentage, their habits and health. All this entered on the records.

One of the earlier discoveries made by the physicians is the frequency of poor sight among children. About 50 per cent are found to be thus affected. All of those whose parents lack the means to provide them with proper glasses are being fitted out at the cost of the society.

The partial blindness resulting from the badly equipped eyesight is said by many of the experts to be the direct cause of a considerable portion of smaller crime among children.

Dr. Alfred Gordon reports that he has discovered a surprisingly large number of cases of feeble mindedness among children supposed to be the vicpart. Since then the boy has been studious, industrious and has not once displayed a tendency to go back to his former life or associates.

"Every one, especially teachers, will tell you that a child with weak eyes that are not attended to will become slovenly and irritable and hate the idea of study. Not because he is bad, but because his eyes will not permit him to compete on equal terms with the other children. The same thing is true with any physical defect sufficient to dull any of the senses. I have had several of such cases. We have one boy now in the house of detention that the police say will be a menace to the lives of people if he grows up. I have recommended a surgical operation on the boy's cranium, providing, of course, that physicians agree that it is the proper course. We have all the children who are taken to the house of detention examined and keep a record of each case. The experience of the people who have been in charge there has been that many children have by operation or medical treatment been sent back to their homes to become obedient, useful children."

The examinations of Doctors Butcher and Wessels are most complete and tims of cruelty, who are really in a condition bordering closely upon imbecility and calling for constant and patient care of a character their busy parents are unable to give them.

The theory of operating on the skull to lessen criminal tendencies is not a new one. Criminologists have found in many cases that a matting together of the membranes of the brain close to or adhering to the skull drove men to deeds of violence, but when the pressure on the brain was relieved they returned to normal tendencies.

An operation of the brain in cases where a depression of the skull indicates pressure on the seat of thought is now generally voted good surgery, but the idea of trying the plan on as many of the 10,000 children as are found to need it is an experiment of such dimensions that it will take an important place in medical records.

WANTS A PAPER SUPPRESSED

Washington, Sept. 9.—Declaring to be false the reports of a bitter anti-American feeling in Mexico and an organized revolution against President Diaz, David E. Thompson, the American ambassador, has made an exhaustive report to the state department, setting forth in detail information which could not be conveyed in his previous confidential dispatches. He has renewed his request that, in complance with the wishes of Mexico's president, this government should take measures to suppress the Mexican revolutionary junta at St. Louis, which publishes in Spanish a paper called Regenercion.

He contends that articles which have appeared in certain newspapers of the United States, discussing alleged dissatisfaction with the administration of President Diaz and asserting that an insurrection of possibly far-reaching consequences is incubating, are wholly without foundation and of inestimable harm to Mexico.

Will Hold Fort.

St. Louis, Sept. 9.—Manuel Sarabin, spokesman for the Mexican junta, which United States Ambassador Thompson, in Mexico, has asked the federal authorities to suppress, stated that the members of the junta will stay where they are, continue the publication of Regeneracion and throw themselves on the justice of the United States, through a personal appeal to President Roosevelt.

PREPARE TO OPEN LANDS.

Navigation Inspection by Engineer Davenport Also Going On.

Big Falls, Minn., Sept. 9.—Settlers of the Big Fork valley are jubilant over the prospective opening of eleven townships of government land located from five to twenty miles from this place.

United Sstates Inspector of Surveys Van Winkle is here with a corps of engineers and cruisers inspecting the government surveys of the unopened townships, which were surveyed two years ago.

Another matter of importance to Northern Itasca county is the federal inspection of the Big Fork river to ascertain the possibilities of developing navigation. Engineer F. Davenport of St. Paul is conducting a personal inspection of the Big and Little Fork rivers and soon will report his findings to Washington.

BIGAMY CASE ALL SETTLED.

Prof. Frye Divorced From First Wife and Remarries Second.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—The wife of Prof. Charles H. Frye, at one time head of the Cook county normal school and who recently returned to his home, after an absence of thirty-one years, was yesterday granted a divorce from her husband. Mrs. Goddard of Hurley, S. D., declared that twenty years ago, she had been married to Frye under the name of Goddard, without knowing that he had a wife in this city.

Frye, who was in jail, facing a trial for bigamy, was given his release after the granting of the divorce, and in company with Mrs. Goddard started for Hammond, Ind., to be married. The laws of Illinois forbid the marriage of divorced people within one year from the time of granting the divorce.

GAS HEATER FUMES KILL.

Telephone Ring Saves All but Man First Aroused by It.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 9.—A defective gas water heater which had been left burning in the kitchen over night caused the death by asphyxiation of Dr. William R. Cheever, one of the best known physicians and surgeons of the city. His wife and Dr. Horace Cheever, his brother, were overcome by the deadly fumes, but will recover.

Dr. Cheever was aroused from sleep early in the morning by the ringing of the telephone bell. He started to walk to the instrument, but fell dead before he reached it. The continued ringing of the bell aroused his brother, who also got up. He discovered the house full of gas and, after opening the doors and windows found the dead body of his brother lying near the telephone.

The Age of Lead.

We are wont to speak of this era as the "age of iron," and there is no gainsaying that, industrially speaking, iron is a "precious metal."

Nevertheless, few people realize how useful, if not absolutely necessary, to modern civilization, is that other metal, lead. Soft, yielding, pliable, it is not much like its sister metal, but those distinguishing qualities are what give it such a prominent place in the arts and industries.

Modern plumbing, requiring many turnings and twistings, but withal tight joints, would be almost impossible without lead pipe. The greatest civilizing agent in the world—the printing art—is absolutely dependent on lead. Hand-set type, linotype "slugs," monotype type—all are made of compositions of which lead is the chief component—to say nothing of the bearings in the presses as well as all other kinds of machinery in which "babbitt" metal is used.

Solder is another lead product—what a field of usefulness that one form opens up.

Then there is the most important use of all to which lead is put—paint, that necessary material which keeps our houses looking pretty—inside and out—and preserves them from decay.

How many of us thank metallic lead for the comforts of paint? Yet the best house paint is nothing but metallic lead corroded by acid to a white powder known as "white lead." Of course, there are many imitations of "white lead," some of which are sold as white lead and some which are offered by the name of ready-prepared paint under the familiar pretense that they are "just as good" as white lead. But all good paint is made of the metal, lead, corroded and ground to a fine white powder and mixed with linseed oil.

White lead is also used in the coating of fine oil cloths and for many purposes besides paint.

"Red lead" is another product of metallic lead and is what is known as an oxide of lead, being produced by burning the metal. Red lead is the best paint known to preserve iron, steel or tin, and is used largely in painting metal structures, such as skyscraper skeletons, mills and bridges.

There are many other products of the metal lead, such as litharge, orange mineral, etc., which are essential to many of the arts in which we never imagine that lead would be of the least use.

Verily, we live in an age of lead as well as of iron.

BIG FISH IN HOLLOW LOGS.

Great Catches of Catfish Made Right in a Sawmill.

At this time of year the men who are working in the sawmills along the Mississippi River are somewhat puzzled to decide precisely what their occupation is. Sometimes they think they are mill men and sometimes they think they are fishermen.

Catfish seem to be the 'coons and 'possums of the river world. They take to the hollow logs, which they find among the rafts tied up near the sawmills.

In June the men who work the logs up to the carriages which take them to the saws begin to watch for hollow specimens. When they find one of that sort they are pretty sure of a big catfish hiding inside.

At Burlington a large number of fish weighing from three to ten pounds each have been taken in this way during the last few weeks. One black catfish weighing thirty-eight pounds was caught about two weeks ago.

The prize was an immense blue catfish, four feet in length and weighing fifty-eight pounds. The sawmill fishermen were not prepared for such big fellow and he jumped clear through their net. He would have escaped to the water but for a man with a canthook, who despatched the prize. The fish netted his captor $4 when he had been dressed and cut into steaks.

HOW MANY OF US?

Fail to Select Food Nature Demands to Ward Off Ailments.

A Ky. lady, speaking about food, says: "I was accustomed to eating all kinds of ordinary food until, for some reason, indigestion and nervous prostration set in.

"After I had run down seriously my attention was called to the necessity of some change in my diet, and I discontinued my ordinary breakfast and began using Grape-Nuts with a good quantity of rich cream.

"In a few days my condition changed in a remarkable way, and I began to have a strength that I had never been possessed of before, a vigor of body and a poise of mind that amazed me. It was entirely new in my experience.

"My former attacks of indigestion had been accompanied by heat flashes, and many times my condition was distressing, with blind spells of dizziness, rush of blood to the head and neuralgic pains in the chest.

"Since using Grape-Nuts alone for breakfast I have been free from these troubles, except at times when I have indulged in rich, greasy foods in quantity, then I would be warned by a pain under the left shoulder blade, and unless I heeded the warning the old trouble would come back, but when I finally got to know where these troubles originated I returned to my Grape-Nuts and cream and the pain and disturbance left very quickly.

"I am now in prime health as a result of my use of Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

COLE AND THE DEMURRAGE BILL.

Since Candidate Cole made his "keynote" speech at the little town of Kenyon the other day there has been a quiet investigation of his rail road record in the legislature, and again it is found that Mr. Cole and his managers are claiming a great deal of glory which does not bear the searchlight of fact. For instance Mr. Cole's press bureau has been busy for some weeks telling the farmers of the yeoman service he performed in behalf of the Nolan recipocal demurrage bill. It will be remembered that this was a bill to regulate the movement of freight cars, and particularly to compel the railroad companies to pay demurrage to the shippers when cars were not supplied within a reasonable time. According to the terms of this measure the demurrage charge should be "recipocal," and the local shippers were to be afforded a measure of relief. Farmers and country merchants—in fact the entire rural population—were heartily in sympathy with the provisions of this bill and the demand for its passage was so insistent that only seven members of the lower house voted against it. The senate railroad committee—made up of Ray Jones in the interest of the railroads—emasculating the bill of every feature affording relief to the farmer and country shipper, and when the amended bill came back to the lower house in the last hour of the expiring legislature, the author of the measure, Hon. W. A. Nolan of Mower, moved its indefinite postponement, since the amendments tacked on by the senate nullified the the object of the bill and stripped it of every feature designed to afford prompt shipping facilities to the country towns.

So much for the history of one of the famous fights against the railroad lobby—a fight which, as inevitable as long as we have a debauched senate, the farmer lost. But right here is where the duplicity of Mr. Colo, the Republican candidate for governor, is shown. Mr. COLE VOTES FOR THE BILL, as shown by the journal of the house but we have the evidence of a Republican senator that immediately after the bill was passed by the house, Mr. Cole rushed to the senate chamber and importuned his senatorial friends to KILL THE BILL BECAUSE IT WAS VICIOUS LEGISLATION.

This important bit of history was developed at a Republican meeting in the Seventh ward at Minneapolis on Monday evening, Aug. 27. The two candidates for the state senate, Henry J. Gjertson and M. L. Fosseen, were representing their claims to the voters. Fosseen in the heat of argument attacked Gjertson for voting against the recipocal demurrage bill, whereupon Gjertson retorted: "I did vote against the bill. When the bill passed the house some fifteen or sixteen house members rushed to the senate chamber to lobby against it. MR. COLE, OUR STANDARD-BEARER IN THIS CAMPAIGN, IMPORTUNED ME: 'FOR GOD'S SAKE KILL THE BILL; IT IS PERNICIOUS LEGISLATION!'"

Probably the bill would have been killed without Mr. Cole's timely assistance, but the incident shows the duplicity one scarcely expects to find in a candidate for the highest place in the gift of the people of Minnesota. If Mr. Cole honestly believed the bill to be vicious legislation why did he not have the moral courage to vote against it in the house? A legislator with sincere convictions will play fair with his constituents. He will be honest. These primary virtues are not shown in Mr. Cole's attitude on the demurrage bill. He kept his record straight by voting for the bill, and then deliberately stabbed it in the back by asking his senatorial friends to kill it.

Do the farmers of the state want a governor who will pose in public as their friend and use his influence on the sly to favor the railroads and his other corporate friends? This is a question of importance to the voters who insist upon restraining corporate greed and rapacity. Judging from Mr. Cole's record on the demurrage bill, can he be trusted to care for the people's interests in the improbable event of his election as governor?

FIFTY CENTS

IN some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for tired and weak digestions.

In the arraignment of our failings, he is the sublime egotist who overlooks his own.

Duluth is forever boasting of its summer climate yet there were five deaths there last week from the heat.

An optimist is a man who believes the republican party will ever do anything substantial in the way of curbing the trusts.

"We wonder," says Charlie Latta in his Plumming Pioneer. Of course you do, Charlie, for wonder was ever the predominant attribute of the untutored mind.

Those Chicago and St. Louis society women owning hotels used for immoral purposes were only following out the law, get money, any old way but get money.

The republican party's great rate-control law has been effective two weeks. The principal result so far has been cutting off of public officials' passes and that is greatly in the interest of the railroads.

A railroad official not long since, explained to the editor of the Courier, tho not for publication, how if the railroads cut off the grafts that existed among their own officials, they could make as much by charging one cent a mile for transportation as they do now.

The delay in the "divide" last week must have gotten on the Pioneer's nerves for it said some perfectly horrid things about the Courier. Oh! Charlie how could you be so unnice! And, by the way Charlie, would you mind repeating what you said: both of your subscribers may not have seen it.

"For good, sound common sense it has gotten all of Johnson's speeches skinned a mile," is the pertinent and breezy comment of the ably edited North Branch Review on Cole's speech. That expresses the thought of the people very nicely.—Brainerd Tribune.

Yes, possibly, but it doesn't answer the question, who wrote it for him.

"Uncle Josh Spruceby."

When a number of persons who try to do right—let their manners be ever so ludicrous, their dialect ever so uncouth—if they will impress the people of a community in which they live with the sincerity of their motives. In the end they will win out. Just the simple, plain and unvarnished story of the struggle for success of such people is often a pathetic as well as humorous recital.

The above is probably an honest criticism of "Uncle Josh Spruceby" for the reason that the drama is a true blending of the funny and serious, just as represented by the lives of some persons. The story is dramatic for the reason that it is filled with stage surprises, at the same time it is a simple story because it deals with only they simple. While not claiming to be a homespun story it is at the same time true to life. At the opera house [illegible] night.

To The Voters of the 61st Legislative District.

A few reasons why I ask for your votes at the primaries Sept. 18.

My business policy has always been plenty room at the top, boost and push, never knock, what is good for the country is good for the people.

Have several years experience as a cruiser and surveyor, land man, and homesteader in northern Minnesota, and know more about the actual conditions, needs, and soil in northern part of the state, than any other candidate for the next legislature.

Supporter and admirer of Senator Nelson and will vote for his re-election.

Do not ride on railroad passes, and will not if elected.

Have been a large shipper and well versed on railroad rates, and have secured several rate reductions on wood, hay, and grain, and will continue to work for more. My policy is persuasion based on good facts with the people behind it will do more good than a big club.

In 1868 I was elected on drainage board in Felton, Minn. We completed over 40 miles of ditches, and 20 miles of roads, and when the contractors failed on part of the work, I peronally completed where our people and contractors said they could not be built and maintained, and now the roads are good and they speak for themselves.

If elected I want every voter in my district to be a committee of one by frequent letters, advice and push, to aid me in getting drainage, pushing other good measures and general developements and demand work for clean politics at home and at the capitol.

MERCURY A DECEPTIVE TREATMENT

Mercury and potash are very deceptive treatments and the blood poison sufferer who depends on them for a cure is sure to be disappointed. These minerals will remove the external symptoms and shut the disease up in the system for a while, but the trouble will surely return and the loathsome symptoms of sore mouth and throat, copper-colored spots, falling hair, sores and ulcers etc., will be accompanied by the disastrous effects of the treatment. The continued use of these strong minerals will completely ruin the health and weaken the system to such an extent that the original disease often becomes incurable and sometimes fatal. Mercury and potash eat out the delicate lining of the stomach and bowels, destroy the gastric juices, producing chronic dyspepsia, cause mercurial Rheumatism, salivation, and where they are taken in large quantities cause necrosis or decay of the bones. S. S. S. is the only remedy that can cure Contagious Blood Poison surely and safely. This remedy of nature, made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, antidotes and destroys the powerful virus of the disease and by purifying the blood of every particle of the poison and enriching and strengthening this vital fluid it removes every symptom and leaves the body in a strong, healthy condition. When the blood has been purified with S. S. S. the cure is complete, and not one vestige of the poison is left for future outbreaks. Do not waste valuable time, and damage your health with the mineral treatment, but cure your case with S. S. S., an absolutely safe remedy. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that S. S. HAY FEVER

"Having used Peruna for catarrh and hay fever, I can recommend it to all who are suffering with the above diseases. I am happy to be able to say it has helped me wonderfully."

—Mayme E. Smith.

MISS MAYME SMITH,
444 E. Mound Street, Columbus, Ohio.

HAY FEVER is endemic catarrh. It is caused by some irritating substance in the atmosphere during the late summer months. It is generally thought that the pollen of certain weeds and flowers is the cause of it.

Change of locality seems to be the only rational cure. The use of Peruna, however, stimulates the nervous system to resist the effect of the poisonous emanations and sometimes carries the victim through the hay fever season without an attack of the disease.

A large number of people rely upon Peruna for this purpose. Those who do not find it convenient to change their location to avoid Hay Fever, would do well to give Peruna a trial. It has proven of priceless value to many people.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest, and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out—Cured by Cuticura.

"I had an eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out; also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon scales or crusts formed where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I purchased a complete treatment of the Cuticura remedies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the eruption appeared again, only a little lower; but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and I have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. Wilson, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1905."

"Yes, sir," said Harvey, looking the gratitude he was forbidden to speak. "It's better. I shall be getting about again a bit in a week's time, the doctor tells me. I daren't test any weigh on the leg just yet though, sir, and I shall have to be tender with it for a goodish time yet."

"You must take great care," said Aloysius. "You'll have to learn to make haste slowly. The doctor's satisfied that he has made a good job of it, is he?"

"He says he's going on splendid, sir," the wife answered, beaming at him. It was good to warm his cold heart at those kind eyes. They radiated thankfulness and affection and worship.

"And where did the crutch come from?" Aloysius asked. "I might have thought of that, but I didn't expect that you would be able to use it for some time to come."

"It's a present from a friend of your's, sir," said the smiling dame.

"A friend of mine?" he asked. "And who may that be?"

"It's a young lady, sir, who's on a visit to Miss Molloy, sir; Miss Lillian Lee, sir. I told her, sir, who it was who'd been so kind to us, if you will forgive my naming it again, sir, and she said she knew you very well indeed, sir."

"Miss Lee," said Aloysius. "Oh, yes. Miss Lee and I are old friends." His heart raged with a sudden pain, and he turned upon it in his own soul as if he felt a savage pleasure in rending open the wound that bled them. "Miss Lee is engaged to be married to my cousin." He spoke in a voice of perfect commonplace. There was nothing in his accent or his look to indicate the agony he inflicted upon himself. "You don't know that, I suppose?"

"Oh, no, sir," she answered. "But I'm sure he's a fortunate gentleman, for she is the sweetest lady, and that good and kind. She used to take a good deal of notice of the children when she was down here before, and she called the day before yesterday to ask after them. She and Miss Molloy had both been away at her own home, and they hadn't heard of John's disaster, sir. And she seemed delighted to know, sir, as it was you as came to our rescue, sir. She really and truly did, sir. And she took John's measure for the crutches then and there, sir, with a piece of tape, from his harmpit to his 'eel, and she brought it in last night, sir, and stayed to hear the children say their prayers."

She, then, had heard that innocent petition which had so strongly moved him. He had been so near to her, and he had not known it. That seemed as if it could barely be true. He could have sworn that his heart would have assured him of her presence, and he had not had an inkling of it. For three days she had been in close neighborhood to him, and he had felt no intuition of it. It looked strange to him—most strange. He was thinking thus when a knock sounded at the door and, the woman of the house hastening to it, a voice said:

"Good evening, Mrs. Harvey. May we come in?"

"Oh, please, miss, do. And Miss Molloy, too. Mr. Brangwyn has been so kind as to give us a call, and we was just a-speaking of you both."

"How do you do, Aloysius?" said the beloved voice. He rose to greet her with a face which had suddenly grown gray as ashes.

"I am as I always am," he answered, taking her proffered hand. "And you, dear?" he asked. "But there is no need for the question. You are looking radiant."

"Well," said Miss Molloy, "If ye're as y'always are, I'm sorry for ye, Mr. Brangwyn, for ye're looking positively ghostly."

"Oh, are you there, my Lady Disdain?" he said. "My looks have no right to beg for pity, I assure you. There's a lingering touch of the old trouble here," he added, tapping himself above the heart, "and it awakes when I'm startled. I was startled just now. You young ladies were the last people in the world whom I was expecting to meet to-night."

"If your heart plays tricks like that with ye, Mr. Brangwyn," said Miss Molloy, "on such slight provocation, ye'll be wise to have yourself overhauled by a specialist."

"Oh, no," Aloysius answered; "I know as much as any specialist can tell me. And the shock of Miss Molloy's unexpected appearance is really not so slight as in her humility she appears to fancy."

"Is it not, then?" Miss Molloy retorted. "I could never tell the difference between your sneer and your compliment, Mr. Brangwyn. But whichever it was meant for ye can take it elsewhere, for I've no market for it."

"Oh, Belle," said Lilian, "do try to be civil to so old a friend for once."

"Ah!" responded Miss Belle, with a wilful exaggeration of her native brogue. "Mr. Brangwyn knows moy moind."

"Full well," said Brangwyn, bowing. "And may I have the honor of paying my respects to-morrow?"

"Name your hour," said the lady, "and I'll make room for ye."

"Oh, Aloysius, you know she doesn't mean a word of it. Come by all means. Come at twelve o'clock," said Lilian. "Will that suit you?"

"Perfectly, thank you," he answered. "Until to-morrow, then. Good night, dear."

"Good night, Aloysius."

He made his adieux all round, and went his way.

"Oh, Miss Molloy," cried the woman of the house, "how could you say such things to him? I wish you only knew what he has been to us. He's got a heart of gold."

CHAPTER XII.

"I'm off," said Miss Molloy, as the hour of noon drew near next day. "I'm going to call on Mrs. Lisle."

"Belle, dear, I wish you wouldn't treat him so."

"I can't help it," Belle answered. "I can't bear the man."

"You needn't show it quite so plainly, dear."

"And why wouldn't I? He knows jolly well what my feelings are, and it's little enough he cares, either. And there's one thing just drives me mad, and makes me feel as if I could scratch him. Why do ye let the man call ye 'dear'?"

"He has always called me 'dear.' He did it when I was a little child. And—I'm not a vain girl, as you know, Belle—but I know that he is very, very fond of me, and I am sorry for him."

"Faith, then," said Belle, "I'm not. The man has the impertinence to turn the color of a ghost when ye turn up unexpectedly. And then he has the face to pretend that he's suffering from a physical ailment. The man's as sound as a roach."

"But surely it isn't a crime to have fallen in love with me?"

"Faith, then," repeated Belle, "it's not. It would be criminal not to do so. Sure all the world's in love with ye—men, women and boys. There's me own brother breaking his heart for ye. If ye'd any pity for him maybe I'd have some for your Aloysius. Now there he is at the door, and here ye've kept me chattering until I've got to insult him to his face again. Good-bye darlin'. I'll open the door for him." She whisked out of the room, and Lilian heard the cheery impertinence of her greeting. "The top of the morning to ye, Misther Aloysius. I'm keeping me promise, ye notice."

"I did not doubt your word, Miss Molloy," he answered, gravely.

Lilian stepped into the hall to meet him, and he shook hands with her composedly. He followed her into the sitting room and sat down, balancing his hat between his hands.

"You are well?" he said, turning his mournful gaze upon her. "But, as I said last night, there is no need to ask. And happy? But there again there is no need to ask."

"Yes," she answered, flushing slightly, "I am well, and I am happy. But you; you, I am afraid, are neither. You look haggard, Aloysius, and as if you had not slept all night."

"I did not sleep," he answered, simply. "I did not even take the trouble to go to bed."

"But that is wrong," she said. "Why should you throw your health away?"

"What does it matter?" he responded. "There is not a soul in the world whom it concerns."

"Mistaken," she answered. "I have been back here three days now. You have lived here eight weeks, they tell me, and in that time you have won all hearts. Why, since my return I have heard nothing but the praises of your goodness—your generosity. All the simple folks adore you. You would have blushed if you could have heard what Mr. Lisle was saying of you in this room yesterday. I am glad to know him, and that you have not held him at arm's length as you hold so many who would be pleased and proud to own you as a friend. The world is full of friendship, Aloysius."

"I like Lisle," he said. "I am an unsocial being, you know—a stranger to the gregarious instinct—and in one way or another things have gone gloomily with me, and I am afraid I am slipping from bad to worse. But I like Lisle, and I think I shall make a friend of him."

"You have done that already," she answered, warmly, "so far as he is concerned. He said things about you which were delightful to hear. I wish you would go more into the world, Aloysius. I know it would need an effort just at first, but if you would make it, you would be happier than you are."

"No," he said. "I am too old a dog to learn new tricks. My ways are lined with cypress. I suppose it was a vice of the blood to begin with, but now I feel it rooted. I am out of tune with the world. I am cankered and my fellow men hurt me. But all this is very morbid, and I must not allow myself to be morbid with you, dear."

"Tell me of your work," she said; "your painting, your sculpture, your music."

"I work a little," he answered. "I have some society—I have a number of children who come to me and romp about my workshop. I get some delightfully natural and unconventional poses. I love children. I have only one fault to find with them. They will insist on growing up, and then I cease to care for them. You must come up some morning and have a look at the happy little beggers. Tell me when you'll come, and I'll have the whole brood there, and you shall tell them a fairy tale—one of your own—and I'll make a sketch for you. I can see an adorable group in my mind's eye already. I've rather fallen out of the habit of finishing things lately, but I'll finish that, and you shall have it for a keepsake."

"Oh, how delightful!" she cried. "Of course I'll come. Who wouldn't, for a promise like that? How glad I am that you are not going to bury that wonderful talent in a napkin for good and all. You can't disguise from yourself that you're a man of genius, Aloysius."

"Not I, indeed!" he replied, with a sudden flash of gaiety. "Nobody ever charged me with thinking less of myself than I ought to think."

His smile lit up his face like a beam of sunlight falling on a gloomy landscape. It was a positive transfiguration, and the girl clasped her hands together with a cry.

"Aloysius," she exclaimed, "I haven't seen you look like that for years."

"No?" he said, suddenly glooming again. "Your flattery took me unawares, I suppose. I never was and never should have been a man of genius, dear, but I was getting to be a very competent workman when money came to spoil me, as it has spoiled so many."

"I shall hold you to your promise," she said, gaily, "and I shall expect you to surpass yourself."

"You shall have my best," he answered, rather doggedly. "I'll do one bit of decent work at least before I go, and you shall have it."

"How many sittings shall you want?" she asked him.

"Only one," he answered. "I have a memory like a rat trap still. I want the group to form itself. That's all. I shall catch you when you've all forgotten me, and not before." He was alight again, alert and eager. He looked years younger.

"Make it to-morrow," he pleaded, "and I'll go home and catch up arrears of sleep."

"To-morrow. At what time?"

"Say ten o'clock."

"I will be there. Must you go already?"

"I must round up my mob of infantry. Good-bye, heaven bless you, dear—bless you and keep you happy. I'd die to make you happy, dear. You know that, don't you?"

"Indeed, indeed," she said, "I know you love me dearly."

"Yes," he said, stooping to kiss her hand, "I love you dearly."

He left her there in tears, which were half of pity and half of pride.

"There is no help for it," he said, half aloud, as he swung into the road. "None."

There were two strangers in the road, and he noticed them casually as they came toward him. One of them suddenly clutched the other by the arm, and spoke swiftly to him in a whisper.

It chanced that the whisper was more audible than words spoken at such a distance in an ordinary undertone would have been. He heard it distinctly though he was twenty yards away.

"Le voici!"

Old Time Benefits.

From very earliest times stage performancies for the benefit of charities have been common, says the London Tribune. The first benefit for an actress was awarded by James I., who in this manner paid tribute to the art of Elizabeth Barry.

Many and quaint are the announcements of these old time benefits. All too frequent were such notices as these: "For some distressed actors lately of this theater," and "For the benefit of a gentleman who has written much for the stage." In the early part of the eighteenth century these notices were more or less confessions of personal insolvency.

One actor, for instance, announced a performance for "the benefit of myself and creditors," and another took the public into his confidence and arranged a special night for the "benefit of my poor relations." Still more confiding was the young actor who, stating that his friends disliked his being on the stage," organized a benefit to enable "me to return to my former employment."

Early Manufacture of Cotton.

The manufacture of cotton in India dates back to its earliest history. There are allusions to it connected with India in the Bible. In old Sanscrit records mention is made of its being used in India nearly 3,000 years ago. At the time of Alexander's invasion of India the dress of the Hindoos was described as consisting largely of calicoes, pure white or having figures. Among the imports into Europe during the first century enumerated by the elder Pliny, muslins and calicoes from India are described as of superior quality.

NEED OF SLEEP VARIES.

Much Depends on Temperament and Whether Mental or Physical Fatigue.

How long a woman should sleep each night depends upon the kind of work she does and upon temperament. If she is nervous more rest and sleep are required than for one of a phlegmatic nature, according to a physician who has specialized along these lines.

"The number of hours of sleep a woman or man gets is usually a habit governed by their mode of living," she says, "and for this reason one can easily regulate the time to have sufficient rest.

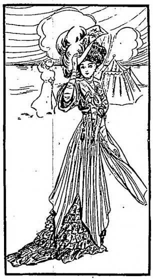
"The accepted time for sleep is eight hours, and for the average individual this is enough, but if less is needed then the extra time can be spent in some profitable way, while if nine or ten hours are required they should be taken, even if the recreation period has to be cut short. For a woman who does not get enough sleep is not only never a success in business, but is irritable in her home and undoubtedly is encouraging mental breakdown and nervous prostration, either of which is bound to follow in time.

The amount of sleep needed depends largely upon the work done during the day. If it is mental more rest should be taken, for with physical labor the body may be more wearied, but it recuperates much more quickly than the brain. A woman who is nervous needs from two to three hours more each night than one who is not, especially if her business keeps her working at high tension, yet few excitable persons ever get enough sleep, for it seems almost impossible for them to stay quiet a sufficient length of time to be properly rested."

BOTH PRETTY AND EFFECTIVE.

Description of Costume Worn at French Bathing Resort.

Yesterday afternoon, on the planches, I saw a most effective white frock, accompanied by a big Tuscan hat and a very long veil of dark emerald-green gauze, writes a correspondent from Trouville, France. The whole turn-out was chic as possible and entirely uncommon; the woman who wore this pretty costume was very dark, with a complexion of ivory and with vivid red lips. The bright green veil suited her to a charm. In Paris it certainly would have looked bizarre, but near the sea it was quite suitable. Pale blue veils are generally becoming, but pure white is best of all; it is always flattering to the skin and with burnt straw or Tuscan it is adorable.



White Frock and Tuscan Hat.

Try a Touch of Yellow.

Yellow is so smart that it is employed whenever and wherever it is possible upon a gown, without regard to the color of the gown, save that it should never clash with it. A little study in the combination of yellow with other colors shows that there are few colors that will not bear some shade of yellow in combination with them.

Yellow lace is even used upon white gowns with charming effect and is being much seen upon smart toilettes. White lace, on the contrary, although worn a good deal for practical reasons, is not used upon new gowns when it can be avoided.

Cheap dyes, easily applied at home, can convert white lace into any desired tint of yellow at a cost within 15 cents.

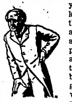
A guimpe of creamy yellow lace has with it embroidered blue velvet in the stock, gold being a feature of the embroidery.

Flounced Skirts in Linen.

There are flounced skirts in the heavy linen that are charming, each flounce with pattern of embroidery and finished with a scalloped border. One smart model has only the scalloped flounce and no other embroidery and the high girdle or bodice has wide bretelles also finished with scalloped edges. To wear with this is a smart little jacket, scalloped and with turned down callar, also scalloped. Made in pale green, coral, pink or bright blue this model has been considered extremely satisfactory and becoming. But the skirt requires to be well cut and carefully hung to look well. All flounced skirts require careful treatment, but this one especially must be well put together or the costume will [illegible] of style.

SICK FOR TEN YEARS.

Constant Backache, Dropsy and Severe Bladder Trouble.



Fred W. Harris, of Chestnut St., Jefferson, Ohio, says: "For over ten years I suffered from kidney disease. The third year my feet and hands would swell and remain puffed up for days at a time. I seemed to have a constant backache. Finally I got so bad that I was laid up in bed with several doctors in attendance. I thought surely I would die. I changed medicine and began using Doan's Kidney Pills when I was still in bed. The relief I found was so great that I kept on until I had taken about ten boxes. The kidney secretions became natural and after years of misery I was cured. I have increased in weight, and show no symptoms of my former trouble."

DISEASES DUE TO WORRY.

Imagination Throws a Good Many Persons Into a Decline.

Suppose that a man has an uneasy sensation in the locality of his heart which is due, let us say, to overeating or to gas in the stomach. But he begins to think he has heart disease. He reads the advertisements in the newspapers to learn about the symptoms and he learns about them.

"A sense of constriction about the chest." Yes, that is his difficulty exactly! "Slight pain on deep breathing, palpitation of the heart after vigorous exercise"—it is evidently a very serious case! He begins to worry about it. Worry interferes with his sleep. It interferes also with his digestion; he does not get well nourished.

Bad sleep and bad digestion make him worse and worse. Each one aggravates the other. And all the time he keeps thinking about his heart. In the end, his thinking actually affects its condition until he succeeds in fastening on himself a functional difficulty which may be a really serious and permanent trouble—and the whole of it can be traced back to his crooked thinking about that little pain in his chest.

This is no parable. It is the record of hundreds of actual cases. Every physician comes into contact with them.

A man who keeps worrying about the state of his liver will almost be sure to have trouble with it eventually. Indigestion can be brought on in the same way and a long list of other ailments.—World's Work.

Grape-Nuts food is in the form of hard and brittle granules, intended to be ground up by the teeth; that work not only preserves the teeth but brings down the saliva from the gums so necessary in the primary work of digestion.

Many people say (and it is true) that when they eat Grape-Nuts they seem able to digest not only that food but other kinds which formerly made trouble when eaten without Grape-Nuts.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Brought Relief, and Cure for Splitting Headaches as Well.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a remedy which has been before the American people for a generation, is still accomplishing wonderful results as is evidenced by the following interview with Mrs. Rachael Gardner, of Wilsey, Kans.

"It was very strange," she says, "I never could tell what caused it and neither could anybody else. For a long time I had bad spells with my stomach. The pain would commence about my heart and was so deadly agonizing that I would have to scream aloud. Sometimes it would last several hours and I would have to take laudanum to stop it. Besides this I had a headache almost constantly, day and night, that nearly crazed me, so you see I suffered a great deal. And when I think of the agony I endured it still makes me shudder.

"'Doctors,' did you say? Their medicine made me sicker. I couldn't take it and I kept growing worse until a friend advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I did. I began to feel better and was soon wholly converted to this wonderful medicine. It did me more good than I had ever hoped for. I kept on with the pills and now I recommend them to all who suffer."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured severe cases of indigestion, bloodlessness, influenza, headaches, backaches, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, nervousness and spinal weakness. The genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are guaranteed to be free from opiates or any harmful drugs and cannot injure the most delicate system. At all druggists, or from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y., postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50.

PHELIM'S BENEFIT

By SHAN F. BULLOCK

All day long Phelim had piped enticingly from the sidewalks; and now, the fair being over and people thinking of home, Phelim had pocketed his tin whistle and, in the market place, before Lismahee town hall, stood within a ring of admirers preparing to give his farewell performance.

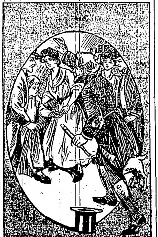
"Gather up, gather up, me sons an' daughters!" he shouted and shook himself inside his rags. "Come and hear ould Phelim! Gather up, gather up! Is jaynius to whistle to the winds an' die for lack of bread? Aw! pity the poor blind!" he whined with a sudden change of tone. 'Och! pity the poor blind! Long I've traveled, hard I've wrought this day. Up to heaven I cry, Och! pity the poor blind!"

The wheedling whine of him, so humorously pitiful, came shrill through the street; at sound of it you could see men's hands go quick to their pockets, and themselves press through the crowd to get a nearer look at the old beggar standing there blind and helpless within the ring crying shrilly up to heaven for pity for the poor blind.

"Pity poor ould Phelim!" he cried, and placing his hands upon his staff waited eagerly for his appeal to bring the coins rattling into the battered hat that rested before him on the stones.

A fine head he had (he was a schoolteacher once in the days before blindness and beggary) and strong regular features; his long yellow-white hair streamed back from his brow and fell curling on his drooping shoulders; a tattered coat (caught at the waist with a cord) hung round him almost to his feet and part covered a dog which lay on the stones, its head resting across Phelim's shoes.

"Pity poor ould Phelim!" he wailed, then suddenly found his natural voice "I don't hear them coppers tumblin' in," he said sharply to those around him. "How many hours longer are ye goin' to keep me? Come, boys, be Irishmen! Sure the blood o' ye loathes meanness. Rattle them in, me sons; that's right! Niver heed the ould beaver; like meself it'll stand a power of batterin' from money. I wish to glory it was full o' bank notes! It meself 'd scatter ribs o' beef among ye. Did I hear a penny fallin' then? Or was it only a jingle in some miser's pocket? Come, lads, come! That's right—one more! Hurroo!—another!



Quicker, Sharper, Went the Old Man's Voice!

Heart o' mine, it's rainin' them now! What," and ould Phelim turned his face towards the sky, "is the shower over? Well, well! Och! pity the poor blind!" he whined as he stooped and groped for his hat, lifted it, and coin by coin counted his horde into a dirty wallet.

"Whisht!" he would say as the coppers dropped, "there goes another, makin' fifteen o' them. Sixteen, as I'm a sinner. Wonders 'll never cease. Nineteen! Will there be twenty? Och! will there be twenty? Wait!—aw there is, there is! Twenty-three! Ah! childer dear, Ireland's gone to pot. Only twenty-nine this blessed day. Twenty-nine coin from such a crowd! Och, och! An' on such a day, wi' the sun pourin' down on me poor ould skull! Well, childer, dear, I forgive ye; an' in case the stony hearts o' any o' ye wid chance to melt, there's the ould beaver on the stones again ready for all it 'll get. Aw! pity the poor blind!" he whined again as he stooped and set the hat beside the dog; then straightened himself.

"Stand back from me there!" cried Phelim, and swung his staff round the ring. "Crowd back an' give me elbow room. Where am I? Am I in the middle o' the ring? I am. Well, am I straight under the town clock? I am. An' tell me, is the purtiest girl in Lismahee right afore me? Och! is she? Now, don't laugh. Are ye there, Mavourneen? Well, in the light o' your blessed eyes ould Phelim 'll sing ye a song—not av love an' beauty, aw no—jist a wee trifle about meself, out o' me own head. Are ye listenin', Mavourneen? Well, now then"—and stretching his hands and plucking at imaginary harp strings, Phelim sang.

"Good man, Phelim!" cried the ring as the old man finished and, crossing his hands upon his staff, waited for the applause. "Good man, Phelim!" 'Bully boy!" "Well sung, me boy!" Another!" cried the ring; "give us another! Give us Connie Roe."

Phelim raised his staff.

"Silence!" he called. "Silence! Don't be tellin' me what I'm to give ye. Ye'll get just what ye've paid for."

"Connie Roe!" went the voices again; "give us Connie Roe!"

"Will ye whisht there!" roared Phelim. "Another cheep from ye an' I'll shake my feet at ye all. Connie Roe, indeed! Connie Roe for nine an' twenty ha'pence! Who wants Connie Roe?"

"Iveryone!" came the roar.

"Then," said Phelim, and pointed down at his old beaver, "rattle in a few more o' the brown boys; make them forty all told, an' I start. Come! who's first? Quick now! Ho, ho! there they go. Keep at it, boys—one after another, like Paddy's ducks. Och! pity the poor blind! That's the way! Hurroo! Make it fifty and I'll shout meself hoarse. What! all done? Well, well!" he moaned, and stooped for the beaver, "hope I may die in a ditch an' niver see the workhouse! Sure me jaynius won't save me. Will what's there make the number, I wonder?" he said as he groped among the coins and dropped them through his fingers. "I misdoubt; but no odds I'll trust ye, childer, I'll trust ye."

Very skillfully he poured the coins into his wallet; then drew himself up, ran his fingers through his hair, and in a measured sing-song (intoning you might say) began:

"The sorry word flew round the country side that poor ould Connie Roe was dead and gone, dead and gone—gone home. Big wi' years was she—peace to her soul!—wi' years o' poverty, an' care an' woe. Light lie her bones! All through the weary years she passed as one whose tongue dropped wisdom, whose life was pure, whose hand was ever stretched to give, when givin' meant the stintin' of herself. Her end was peace. Kind willin' hands were by to soothe her passin' an' send her softly on her way. Peace to her soul!"

The old man bowed his head for a moment in the silence of the market place; then quicker, less mournful, the chant went on:

"An' now her neighbor come wi' willin' hearts to sit an' smoke, an' sing sad songs, to yell an' howl, an' glorify the dead wi' hideous mockery of the awe of death. I see them now. Theer in the mud-walled room—its rafters black wi' smoke, the floor of clay, the single window small an' dark, the gloom an' smoke—there on chairs, on stools, on bots of turf, set men an' women, old and young, speakin' tender o' the dead, now loud an' wild an' free, now hushed an' still.

'And in the middle o' the room is set a wooden coffin. All plain and rude it is —the portion of the poor. The hurdles stand; rough wood lies loose on top, rough wood below; above, the candles feebly burn; see how they flare an' gutter in the smoke, an' throw their glimmer through the flickerin' gloom on throngs of livin' ghosts! See how the weird light falls on shinin' tins all sparklin' round the walls. The kettle hisses there; the fire jumps and falls, jumps and falls—ah! jumps an' shows that gruesome thing stretched out between the candles an' the floor—a thing all shrouded up, all stark an' grim. Ah, ah! that senseless shape, that poor ould face so calmly restin' there an' peepin' up so still an' cold—so cold! Whisht! the fire falls. Back, back thou gruesome thing! Whisht! comes once more the merry laugh, the sharp debate, the horrid wail. See there again the heedless groups that give no thought to life or death, e'en in the haunt of Death."

The old man paused; the ring pressed closer; silence held the market place; quicker the chant went on:

"The wake was nearly done; the pipes were out, the talk grown flat an' dull, the courtin' pairs at last well sick of love; ould men were fast asleep, the young a-noddin' as they sat; no more the hags gave up their wail, but wagged their hairy chins in senseless talk.

"The wake was done; and yet none liked to go, for out of doors the night was dark and wild. At last one rose, and kicking o'er his stool, cried out, 'Here goes!' then started for the door; but goin' stumbled, slipped, and wi' a helpless crash fell on the bier. The candles fell; up rose the dead; quick, like a flash, the shroud and head-dress blazed—blazed up, flared out, and showed to all a shape that sprang like life, all wrapped in flame—sprang up, then fell and rolled out on the floor. And all were sure that Connie Roe had come to life to warn them of their sins."

"Then came a scene. A panic seized them all. With shrieks, an' yells, an' curses fierce an' loud, half blind wi' fear, half mad wi' dread, the wake made for the door. Look, there they go! Like beasts they go—brute beasts—and trample one another down. The door is shut, fast shut. Hear now the cries of fear turn quick to yells of pain. Quick, cravens, quick! One frantic rush. There, there! the wall goes down—the beasts are free! . . . Let then the flames mount high and give dead Connie Roe a martyr's burial. . . . Ah, heavens, not yet! Back, cravens, back! The roof is down, is all ablaze. Hear there that shriek!—it comes from one, a young fair girl, fast prisoned in that blazing tomb. Back, back, ye men, and set the living free!

"——What! Gone? All gone? Oh, hearts of straw!

"Blow then ye winds, blow hard and lick the flames; blow hard, and ere the morn strew far and wide the ashes of those two—the women old, and her, the maiden fair, whom cowards left to die! Peace to their souls!"

OF AID TO HOSTESS

SUGGESTIONS THAT MAY PROVE A PRESENT HELP.

Some Pretty Ways for Entertaining the Fortunate Modern Bride—The "Book Shower" One of Them —Game for Children.

The bride of to-day is a very lucky individual, for, besides her wedding presents, she has all sorts of delightful affairs given by her intimate friends. There are "stocking," "handkerchief," "plate and cup and saucer," "linen," "book," "flower," "kitchen" and "novelty" showers. Some or all of these functions are likely to fall to the lot of a girl who announces her engagement, and who gives her friends this opportunity to show their good will. Great care should be taken that only one's nearest and dearest friends are asked to parties of this kind; strangers or mere calling acquaintances should not be asked to contribute, for it would be embarrassing both to the giver and the recipient; this is one of the instances where a hostess must be sure of who the bride-elect would like to be present. Remember that the "gift without the giver is bare."

One of the very latest fads is a "turnover collar shower." Each guest is asked to bring material for a turnover and her thimble, and at the conclusion of an afternoon the fair (we take it for granted that adjective applies, as it seems to be the prerogative of a bride to be termed thusly) bride-to-be will have a number of these useful accessories to her trousseau.

The "book shower" must be arranged by a person who can find out what volumes the recipient does not possess, so there will not be duplicates. The name of the donor with an inscription will greatly enhance the value of the gift, and it is safe to say that this collection will be more than prized when placed upon the book shelves of the new home. The handkerchief and linen showers are both pretty. Each article can be thrown at the bride until she is fairly buried under the white offering.

The "china" shower is always a favorite, and a unique way was devised for the stocking shower by having a large "shoe" candy box in the center of the luncheon table with a ribbon going to each place: when the ribbons were pulled all drew out favors except the honored guest, who drew out a number of white packages, all rolled tight in white tissue paper—a pair of silk hose from each guest present.

A flower shower is the very prettiest of all, and should be given the day before the wedding. Each guest brings a bunch of flowers, and the bride is literally showered with blossoms from a huge floral ball suspended in a doorway. Have a large ball made of wire, cover wtih moss, and fill closely with flowers; carnations make a perfect sphere. The ball is made in halves and filled wtih rose petals. When farewells are being said the hostess pulls a ribbon which separates the two halves, releasing the petals, which fall upon the young woman who is about to leave the realm of single blessedness for the new and unknown way. This scattering rose leaves on the pathway of a bride is a very old custom.

A Game for Children.

Form a circle and cast lots or take a vote as to who shall be the "huntsman." When chosen, the hunter proceeds to give a name to each person—one becomes his coat, another his hat, gun, belt, shoe, etc. The huntsman then walks around on the outside of the circle, and calls for each article in turn. As they are called each person arises and takes hold of the person in front of him, the first person having attached himself to the hunter's coat tails. When all are going at a rather rapid pace, the hunter suddenly calls "bang!" then all, including the hunter, rush for a seat, and the one left must become the hunter.

STOP, WOMAN!

AND CONSIDER THE ALL-IMPORTANT FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers twenty-five years.

The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, and for many years under her direction, and since her decease, her advice has been freely given to sick women.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Following we publish two letters from a woman who accepted this invitation. Note the result:

First letter.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For eight years I have suffered something terrible every month. The pains are excruciating and I can hardly stand them. My doctor says I have a severe female trouble, and I must go through an operation if I want to get well. I do not want to submit to it if I can possibly help it. Please tell me what to do. I hope you can relieve me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 59th and E. Capitol Streets, Washington, D. C.

Second letter.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"After following carefully your advice, and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very anxious to send you my testimonial, that others may know their value and what you have done for me.

"As you know, I wrote you that my doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I then wrote you, telling you my ailments. I followed your advice and am entirely well. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I owe my life to you and to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wish every suffering woman would read this testimonial and realize the value of writing to you and your remedy."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 59th and E. Capitol Streets, Washington, D. C.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women whose testimony is so unquestionable, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

Those Winding Paths.

"There's no use trying to take short cuts across city parks," said the girl from the country. "You may as well go all the way round the square. Unless they let you strike stright over the grass and swim the little lakes, you don't make anything by it. You have to circle them."

Back at Him.

A young wit, looking out for mischief, endeavored to make fun of a professor. After badgering him for some time he asked him whether he could define the word "nothing."

The professor replied immediately: "Nothing is that which is to be found in the particular cell of your brain which should contain intelligence."

DO YOU KNOW

That a church worker is not necessarily one who works the church.

That a number of men will begin to regret that $10, about next Tuesday.

That some one is due to write a book on how to be rich and respectable.

That many a man thinks he can best enjoy a day at home by not being there.

That one way to success is to convince people you think as they do when you don't.

That some men are never so happy as when they are looking for work—and not finding it.

That when a married man is extravagant he is looked upon as wasting his childrens' money.

That the man who gets started at the top of the ladder, finds it easy to make a record coming down.

That circumstantial evidence finds an exemplification in finding a corkscrew in a prohibitionist's pocket.

That some people wouldn't know opportunity whether it knocked at their door or knocked them down.

That if you make a mistake in your spelling just explain by saying it is the reform way. Few will be wiser.

That, "Know ye, all men, by these presents," is suggested as an appropriate motto for a wedding invitation.

That it wont make any difference if they do spell it "kist:" it will be just as sweet and just as much indulged.

That every cloud may have a silver lining but you have got to show the man who gets caught without an umbrella.

That you mustn't think a man has praiseworthy aspirations just because he aspires to be praised, says an exchange.

That a Tennesee man has asked the legislature to bar peek-a-boo waists. He should be compelled to wear blinders.

That there may not be any such thing as luck but we all like to believe it—when the other fellow makes a killing.

That it was't one of her own sex who said a woman always wants to get her money's worth except when she is buying a bathing suit.

That a homely man is usually as attractive to a woman as a pretty girl is to a man. There is a peculiar reason for it if you ever stopped to figure it out.

That if you like to hear a hunting story ask Sam Hunt, Ernest Buse, Guy Meyers or Milton Converse about being treed by a bull that was running away from them.

That about the only time a bank examiner seems to work for his salary is when he tries explain a bank failure just after he has made an examination and favorable report.

That the New York Post tells this: They were on their honeymoon. He had bought a catboat and had taken her out to show her how well he could handle a boat, putting her to tend the sheet. A puff of wind came and he shouted in no uncertain tones "Let go the sheet." No response. Then again "Let go that sheet quick" Still no movement. A few minutes later, when both were clinging to the overturned boat, he said: "Why didn't you let go that sheet when I told you to dear?" "I would have," replied the bride, "if you had not been so rough about it. You ought to speak more kindly to your wife.

That an exchange tells the following: Pat had enlisted. Like the colonel of his regiment, he left the village with the whole community of seventeen souls bidding him be brave and wishing him good luck. He mused to himself: "Begorra, 'tis the foine head of an ar-a-mie Oi'd make, so it is." Three days later news reached the town of a terrific carnage at the front. That night Pat was sitting in front of his cottage door. "And what are yez doing here?" asked a mystified neighbor. Pat sat forward and explained: "Yez see, 'twas this way. The inimy comes up the road to blow us into 200 A. D. Thin sez the captain sez he: 'Now boys strike for your country and your homes.' And begorra, I was the only man in the whole regiment that wuz brave enough to strike for home."

LOCAL NEWS

Grand Master B. G. Covell, of Kirkhoven, Grand Secretary A. L. Bolton, of St. Paul; and Frank Cramer, of Crookston, were in the city last evening on an official visit to the Odd Fellow's lodge. After the ceremonies the visitors were given a lunch and smoke social.

Prof. Frank E. Miller, for nearly a year past director of the Red Lake Falls band, has tendered his resignation to that organization to take effect the first of October. He has not yet decided on his future movements nor has the band decided on his successor, tho there are several available men in sight. Mr. Miller has made good with the band and there will be many regrets at his departure.

Odd Wills Upheld.

John Stewart McCaig, a Scotch banker, left practically all of his estate, consisting of $15,000 a year and movables worth $50,000, for the erection of statues of himself and his relatives and the building of artistic towers on prominent parts of his land. His sister contested his will, but the Edinburgh court of sessions has upheld it. Belgian courts have upheld the will which a man named Davie, who hanged himself in Ardenne, scratched on a piece of rusty iron with a nail. He left $60 for the fire brigade at Aden "to have such a carousal as was never seen before."

High Scotch Personages.

The four principal personages in the British empire, ranking after royalty, are Scotch—the prime minister, the archbishop of York, the lord chancellor and the archbishop of Canterbury. The governor general of India is of the same race, as are several who hold important offices in the ministry, such as the chief secretary and the lord lieutenant of Ireland.

PUT UP A JOB ON SNITZ.

Early Day Jokers in Atchison Laughed a Saloonkeeper Out of Town.

A good many years ago a German named Herman Snitz kept a saloon on Fourth street. Charley Layng and W. C. McPike used to go in there occasionally in the morning for a glass of beer and a bite of lunch. They entered from the rear of the old McPike & Fox drugstore, then located on the south side of Commercial street, below Fourth. On their way into the place one morning they found an old cistern on Snitz' premises. This cistern was uncovered and Mr. Pike suggested to Snitz that he cover the cistern or someone would fall into it. Snitz put boards over it, but the next morning, when Layng and McPike went into Snitz' place they kicked the boards off the top of the cistern and again complained to Snitz. This they kept up several weeks, and greatly enjoyed Snitz' confusion. They told Snitz that people were talking about his carelessness and Snitz said he was being driven crazy over that cistern; he said he spent half his time putting boards over the mouth of the cistern, but these were kicked off every morning by Layng and McPike. The jokers finally had a straw man made in the McPike and Fox warehouse, and this was thrown into the cistern secretly. Then Layng and McPike went into the beer saloon and again complained of the dangerous condition of the cistern. Snitz followed them out, saying he was doing his best. "It would be easy for a man to fall in," Layng said. By this time the three stood beside the cistern. "Good heavens," McPike said, "there is a man in there now!" Great excitement. In two minutes the alley was full of people. Snitz wanted to pull the man out, but Layng said: "Do nothing until A. D. McConaughy, the coroner, comes." The coroner arrived and selected a jury from the crowd. Then the man was drawn to the surface and his true character discovered. Layng and McPike, at the time the body was drawn to the surface, were at Harmony Garden, laughing. Snitz was so annoyed over the affair that he sold his place and left town.—Atchison Globe.

WASHTUBS AND WASHTUBS.

The Kind Our Foremothers Used and One of the Sorts Used To-Day.

"What would our foremothers have thought," said Mrs. Flatdweller, "or those of them that on wash days went out to the wash bench and put on it two big round wooden washtubs, one to be filled with cold water carried to it from the pump, and the other with hot water carried from the stove, while in one of these tubs was placed a wooden washboard on which to do the scrubbing, and finally the tubs had to be carried out into the yard to be emptied—what would our foremothers thought, I say, if they could have seen the modern set washtubs of porcelain, set side by side, each supplied with cold and with hot water, to be had at will by the turning of a faucet, and to be emptied by the pulling of a plug, while in the inner conveniently sloping front of one, and without any legs for the clothes in the tub to get tangled around, were molded the corrugations of a porcelain washboard!

"They may have dreamed of many things, but probably never of this."

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

RED LAKE COURIER.

VOL. VIII—NO. 48. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1906. WHOLE NO. 412

THE PRIMARIES HAVE TOLD THEIR STORIES

A. L. Hanson Nominated for State Senator and J. J. Opsahl for Representative.

List of Candidates of Both Parties for County Offices—Returns Incomplete.

The primary vote in Red Lake county was extremely light, probably not to exceed 50 per cent of the votes of the county being cast. It can be accounted for in the rural districts by the farmers being too busy to attend the primaries. In the cities there was a lack of interest. The returns are still incomplete and will probably not all be in before tonight. Enough is known however, to give a very accurate forecast.

In the 61st legislative district A. L. Hanson is the winner easily carrying every county. The other candidates were L. C. Simons and D.C. Lightburn. For representative, J. J. Opsahl defeats William Mc Quaig by a safe majority. There were no democratic candidates for either office.

Following are the lucky ones on both tickets for the various county offices:

Democratic:—auditor, James E Ford, treasurer, K. M. Hansen; clerk of court, Joseph Perrault; sheriff, Dan Linnihan; judge of probate, N. W. Tarrant; register of deeds, Emil Zeh; county attorney, E. M. Stanton; superintendent of schools, Mrs. J. J. Doe; court commissioner, S. T. Johnson.

Republican:—auditor, J. B. O'-Brien; treasurer, O. f. Tanberg; register of deeds, E. L Quist; judge of probate, Charles Ecklund; sheriff, L. A. Nelson; county attorney, Thomas Germo; county surveyor, J. K. Wood; superintendent of schools, Fred Richards; court commissioner, Simon Paul; commissioners, first district, C. A. Lindquist; second, E. A. Aubul; third, Joseph Pidgeon. For clerk of court there is some doubt as the contest between Harry Ives and C. W. Johnson cannot be told without the full vote.

MEETING OF STUDY CLUB

Preparing Its Work for the Coming Season.

The study club held its first meeting of the season Monday evening at the study room of Rev. H. W. Knox and began an outline of its work for the winter.

One of the the things done was the taking hold of the Lyceum course of entertainments to be given in the city. Of its proceeds the club expects to maintain a circulating library and if there is still a surplus it will go to the school library. Along the line of the circulating library, Miss Baldwin, librarian of the State Library association, will be in the city during the early part of October for an address. Whether her address will be public or just to the club has not been determined.

The club will meet again next Tuesday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Argue, at which time it is hoped that all who intend joining will be present and the year's work will be outlined.

The officers of the club are: president, Dr. J. E. Argue; vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Boughton; secretary, Mrs. H. W. Knox; treasurer, Mrs. Chas. N. Bourdon; chairman of program committee, Prof. Chamberlain; chairman of membership committee, Miss Elere Hanson.

NEXT MARKET DAY SATURDAY SEPT 29

Red Lake Falls Merchants Specially invite Farmers to Come to Town That Day.

Large number of Valuable Prizes to Be given. Entertainment to Be Provided.

Red Lake Falls' next market day will be held Saturday, Sept. 29 and every effort will be made to have it a much greater success than the first one given which, tho highly successful in itself, was something of an experiment. The merchants of the city were satisfied with it and all those from the surrounding country who attended seemed to be.

The number of prizes offered this time will be greater and in a number of instances more valuable. The prizes given are also along a different line for the most part. They are worth coming after too. There are no strings attached to them and are to be had for the coming. At the last market day some of the prizes were uncalled for but this time the list should be more carefully studied and all taken away. Each merchant is the judge of the prizes he offers and they are so arranged that there can be no dispute as to who will be entitled to them after all the claims have been presented.

The arrangements are not all complete as yet but it can be known that some little entertainment will be furnished free during the day. A rest room for women and children, so much appreciated before, will be maintained. Those intending to come to the city on that day, should watch the Red Lake Falls papers next week for the complete program, and bills will be widely circulated. Following is a list of prizes and for what they will be given:

Every farmer calling at the store of Hunt & Kankel will be given a ticket good for one chance on an air tight heater worth $5.

Farmer bringing 30 bushels or more wheat the greatest distance, 100 lb. sack of Mascot flour, Red Lake Falls Milling Co.

Farmer bringing the biggest load of oats to town, third seat to buggy, Joseph Helm.

This list of prizes is incomplete, there will be a number more which will be announced in bills and next week's issue of the papers.

Where a prize is offered on any kind of produce, arrangements have been made to take care of all that will be brought to town and the highest market price paid for it.

In explanation of the prize given by Theo LaBissoniere, it should be remembered that it is given to the one buying the biggest bill of goods at any store. Get receipt from the merchant you buy anything of and present to Mr. LaBissoniere.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHNSON

Residents of Red Lake Falls will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. C. F. Johnson at one time a resident of the city, remembering her as a woman of kindly acts and impulses. The following is from the Herald at St. Peter where Mrs. Johnson spent the greater part of her life: Word was received here Monday of the death of Mrs. Alice Collins Johnson, wife of C. F. Johnson, which occured at her home in Minneapolis on Sunday. The deceased had been ill with a complication of diseases for the last three months and of late had been sinking rapidly. Alice Collins was born in Milton Wis., and was 46 years of age. When a young girl she came to St. Peter and this city was her home until 1884, when she was married to C. F. WEEK'S HISTORY IN EPITOME

ALL THE NEWS THAT IS WORTH TELLING CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

At the Capital.

President Roosevelt has completed the first draft of his next annual message to congress. It is his intention to put the finishing touches on this document before he takes his trip to Panama in November.

Secretary Bonaparte announced that the president has selected Pay Director Eustace B. Rogers to be paymaster general of the navy. There has been a spirited contest for this position, nearly every officer of the pay corps who was eligible having been a candidate.

The president has commuted the life sentence of Lizzie Carrich, an Indian girl fifteen years of age, to confinement in some reformatory institution until she is twenty-one years of age. On June 6 last the girl was convicted of arson in setting fire to and destroying the Indian school building on the Menominee reservation at Keshena, Wis.

PRESIDENT SENDS WARNING TO CUBA

TAFT AND BACON TO GO TO ISLAND TO INVESTIGATE SITUATION.

MORE SHIPS RUSH TO SCENE

UNITED STATES READY FOR ANY EVENTUALITY—PALMA GIVEN FULL POWER.

Oyster Bay, Sept. 16.—After a protracted conference with Secretary of War Taft, Acting Secretary of State Bacon and Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, President Roosevelt last night addressed an important communication to Cuba and arranged to send Secretary Taft and Acting Secretary Bacon to the island on Sunday to make a thorough investigation of conditions there and lend their influence to restore peace.

The communication is addressed to the Cuban minister to the United States, Senor Quesada.

Plea for Peace.

It is an impassioned plea to Cuba to realize her responsibility as a self-governing republic and to restore peace in the island. Her attention is called in no uncertain language to the responsibility which the United States bears to the island, and the certainty that such responsibility will necessarily be exercised should peace not be preserved.

The president says he has certain information that the peace of the island is now menaced and that American property has been destroyed.

Taft and Bacon Go to Cuba.

Taft and Bacon will leave for Cuba Sunday. They will go by rail to Key West, Fla., and from there the journey to Havana will be completed on a naval vessel.

The conference which resulted in the Cuban decision began at Sagamore Hill shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and continued until 10 o'clock last night. At its conclusion Secretaries Taft, Bonaparte and Bacon left for New York and will go to Washington to-day.

No Haste in Investigation.

Secretary Taft said as he left Oyster Bay that he had no idea as to the length of his visit to Cuba. He indicated that there would be no haste in the investigation which would be made there. Aside from this information nothing will be divulged by those attending the conference, the statement being made that the letter of the president was intended to cover the whole Cuban situation so far as it was desirable to do so in the public press.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana, a member of the senate committee on Cuban relations, also participated in the conference.

Give Palma Full Powers.

Havana, Sept. 16.—The extra session of congress called by President Palma completed at one sitting the business for which it was summoned. It granted to President Palma the fullest powers not already constitutionally possessed by the executive for carrying on war, including the right to use public funds for war purposes, revoking appropriations voted at the preceding session in order to permit diversion of the moneys, and authorizing increases of the rural guards to 10,000 and artillery to 2,000 men.

Increases the Army.

This triples the former force of rural guards and doubles the artillery. The measures, which were combined in one blanket bill, were passed by party votes, the Liberals and Independents refraining from voting and the Liberal Nationalists voting with the Moderates.

President Palma submitted a brief message, deploring the conduct of the opposition, which he charged with causing the revolution. The message contained no recommendations beyond suggestions that congress approve all recent executive decrees and take steps for ending the war.

Denver Jackies Withdrawn.

Another feature of the day was the return to the Denver of the bluejackets who were landed Thursday evening. The Washington government is believed here to have regarded the step as open to a construction of intervention. The events of yesterday also indicated that the insurgents in Havana province regarded the landing of American sailors as constituting intervention, and they signified their readiness on that account to quit the field. Nothing resulted from their offers to surrender.

Cienfuegos Captured?

The railroads are completely tied up, no trains leaving Havana. This is a particular hardship to hundreds of country families who were coming to the city for safety. Telegraphic communication is almost as badly paralyzed.

Reports of the capture of Cienfuegos are persistent, but the absence of telegraphic communication makes it impossible to verify them.

The Western railway will to-day endeavor to resume traffic, a promise having been secured from the insurgents not to interfere with trains. The insurgents in Pinar del Rio province are moving eastward, and so have no objections to the operation of the railroad.

Has Good Effect.

Many rumors are in circulation of the disaffection of the police and fears of attacks and uprisings have not wholly disappeared, though they have been lesssened by the presence of the Denver and the knowledge that the United States is sending other warships.

Gen. Rodriguez has taken personal command of 700 rural guards and artillerymen who, in conjunction with 300 volunteers and cavalry, will proceed against the revolutionists outside Havana.

Twenty-seven militiamen were surprised and captured at Wajay, in the outskirts of Havana, by revolutionists belonging to the band of Gen. Castillo.

Surround Cuba With Ships.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Having prepared for all eventualities in Cuba which prudence and experience could suggest, the officials in Washington who are temporarily acting as heads of the military branches of the government yesterday awaited developments and watched the execution of the plans they had already former. No additional orders came from the president.

There was no cessation of the activities of the subordinate officers who were charged with the execution of the details. Within a short time eight naval vessels will surround the island and they will be manned by marine contingents, making good a deficiency in the present equipment of the Denver.

More Warships Off for Cuba.

In addition to the Denver, now at Havana, the Des Moines is crossing the Florida straits from Key West for that port; the Marietta is probably at Cienfuegos, though interrupted telegraph lines make it difficult for her to report; the Dixie, with 300 marines aboard, is making all haste from Guantanamo for the Cuban capital; the Tacoma is about to sail for Cuba from Norfolk, to be followed by the Cleveland and the Newark at the same port, and the Minneapolis at League island. All are taking on stores. Meanwhile the marine corps is in perfect readiness and expects to be able to place 2,000 marines aboard ship at a few hours' notice.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Although the date has not yet been definitely fixed, the second Hague conference probably will be held next May or June, according to Dr. David Jayne Hill, American minister to the Netherlands, now in Washington on a special mission. The representation will thus be increased from thirty nations to about forty-five

FOUR MONTHS IN TOMB; NOW LIVES

FIANCEE DOUBTS DEATH, AND VISIT TO TOMB REVEALS THE TRUTH.

IS BROUGHT BACK TO LIFE

MARRIES HIS FAITHFUL SWEETHEART AND COUPLE DEPART ON WEDDING TRIP.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 13.—The following death notice appeared in Kansas City papers dated Jan. 13, 1906:

"Died at the home of his parents, No. 2829 Euclid avenue, Frederick J. Harvey, at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His death was due to consumption."

After being buried alive in the family vault at Kansas City from Jan. 9 to the middle of May, Frederick J. Harvey, one of the wealthiest men in Kansas, came back to life Tuesday, Sept. 4, married his Denver sweetheart, Miss Lily Godfrey, who was instrumental in restoring him to life, Sept. 5, departed on his honeymoon the same day and will arrive here next week to visit relatives.

Fiancee Doubts Death.

At the time of Mr. Harvey's death, as the family still term his entombment, he had contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia. His already tubercular system was not strong enough to throw off the additional trouble, and physicians pronounced him dead.

Although all animation and respiration had ceased, his affianced wife, Miss Godfrey, would have it that he was not dead. She wept and moaned and would not leave the casket until it was placed on a marble slab in the family's tightly closed vault.

For four months Mr. Harvey lay in the company of his dead ancestors, until Miss Godfrey, crazed by the feeling which grew upon her that her beloved was not dead, returned to Kansas City and begged piteously with the the family to accompany her to the vault.

Faith Is Rewarded.

The mother, who was devoted to her son, eagerly accompanied her, and the two went together to the family plot. Entering the vault for the first time since the burial, they stood astounded at the door. The casket was open. Sinister fears crept over them.

That a tragedy had occurred neither doubted. But the puzzling question was, Who had opened the casket? Trembling, Miss Godfrey approached it to learn the worst. Astonished beyond expression, she found Mr. Harvey just as he was on the day of the burial.

No Sign of Decay.

The lips and finger nails were still pink, the body was limber and there was not a sign of decay in the entire body.

Later the fact developed that the undertaker understood the pallbearers were to have put on the lid and that the pallbearers thought the undertaker would attend to it.

Mrs. Harvey and Miss Godfrey had the body taken to the family home, where they visited it daily until Sept. 4, when Harvey came to life, and the wedding followed.

Washington, Sept. 13.—In view of the indifference shown by the American people toward contributing money for the assistance of the sufferers from the Valparaiso earthquake and fire, it is probable that the president will in a short time issue another proclamation calling the attention of the people of this country to the distressing state of affairs in Valparaiso and asking for contributions.

"The fair grounds right now looks like the breaking up of a hard winter," said Secretary E. W. Randall. The secretary's office is so busy with premium settlements that Mr. Randall has not had time to think, summarize or turn around, so he reports.

A bird's-eye view from his window, however, taken by request, revealed disorder that a miniature tornado might have produced. Tents are being taken down and scattered about, and exhibits are being carried out of the large buildings. Mr. Randall says it will be some time before the grounds are cleared—a week or two. The Minneapolis fire department has gone home, but the St. Paul department will have its turn at an extra week this year, until the exhibitors and concessionaries are all off the grounds.

An attempt is being made to clean up the papers and rubbish left on the grounds by a careless public.

DULUTH GETS NEW ROAD.

Canadian Northern Likely to Extend Line From Gunflint.

The Canadian Northern road has begun preparations for the extension of its line from Port Arthur, Ont., to Duluth. It long has been known that ultimately the Canadian Northern would seek an entrance into Duluth, but heretofore it has been the supposition that the Head of the Lakes would be reached by an extension of the Port Arthur, Duluth & Western to a connection with the Duluth & Iron Range road at Ely, a distance of forty miles.

A hitch of some sort caused an abandonment of the plan and resulted in a decision to build a new line from this point to Duluth. The route is said to be from the present terminus at Gunflint, through Cook and Lake counties, to Duluth. This will give these counties railroad facilities which at present are lacking, and possibly will tend to promote the development of vast tracts of iron ore, which are known to exist in Cook county.

A survey from Gunflint to Highland, on the Duluth & Iron Range road, was made last fall. There is a possibility that the Canadian Northern may enter into an arrangement with the Duluth & Northern Minnesota, which now is building its line north toward Gunflint. At present it is only a logging road, but the roadbed is said to be in excellent condition and easily could be used for the traffic of the Canadian Northern.

STATE WILL GET BENEFIT.

Ore Properties Will Be Developed and Railroads Built.

As a result of the decision of the supreme court upholding the constitutionality of the state mineral lease law, the steel trust will spend more than $2,000,000 in improvements in Itasca county alone.

Frank B. Kellogg, attorney for the United States Steel corporation, said:

"The United States Steel corporation does not own a majority of the state mineral leases; in fact, only a small percentage of them; but I am sufficiently informed to know that the decision means a great deal for the development of state property and will mean the securing by the state of a large revenue for a great number of years.

"The United States Steel corporation is now putting in large washing plants in Itasca county to wash the sand out of low grade ore. The state owns several valuable pieces of property there which the steel company will develop as soon as the washing plants are completed.

"The company is also building a railway fifty miles long from Duluth to Corey, Cohaine and other Itasca county points."

Tours County Fairs.

The exhibit of adulterated foods and food information, which the state dairy and food department had at the state fair, will be sent the rounds of the county fairs this fall, where it is wanted. The exhibit was divided into two exhibits and one was sent to Shakopee and the other to Fairmont. The latter half of the week they will be at St. Peter and Blue Earth. One of them will be at Mankato the latter half of next week.

The exhibit attracted much attention at the state fair, but the department hopes to accomplish much more of educational value at the county fairs, as people have not so many other things to look at there. The exhibits sent around this year are considerably larger than last year.

Laborer Tortures Himself.

Red Wing, Minn., Special. — Carl Erickson, employed by the Reichert Cooperage works of this city, suffering evidently from dementia, committed suicide near Frontenac station. Yesterday morning the section crew discovered a pair of overalls, a blouse and a jack knife covered with blood. Directly across the track the body of the man was discovered. They found he had cut his throat and arteries of both wrists and inflicted severe wounds on his breast with the jackknife. After torturing himself he had crossed the track and died leaning against a barb wire fence.

Clay County Will Be Drained.

The board of county commissioners of Clay county has just established drainage ditches Nos. 11, 12 and 13, with a total length of about sixteen miles and a total estimated cost of about $20,000. Contracts for ditches to cost about $100,000 have already been let and viewers and engineers have been appointed for two other ditches, one in the town of Eglon and one in the town of Spring Prairie.

Hurry Is Fatal.

Dodge Center, Minn., Special. — While attempting to cross the tracks ahead of a stock car which was being shifted, Harvey E .Mathney was struck by the car and instantly killed.

Abuse of Mails Costly.

Deadwood, S. D., Special. — In the United States court yesterday Edward Hobart Dahlheimer, who had been found guilty on the charge of sending improper matter through the mails, was sentenced to a term of one and one-half years in the penitentiary.

CUBAN INSURRECTION.

CALLS OFF PEACE PROJECT.

Palma Suspends Constitutional Guarantee—Declares Martial Law.

Havana, Sept. 12.—President Palma last night issued a decree suspending all constitutional guarantees, with special reference to Articles XV., XVI., XVII., XIX., XXII., XXIII., XXIV., and XXVII., in the provinces of Pinar del Rio, Havana and Santa Clara. The law enforcing public order, which is equivalent to martial law, also is put in immediate effect in the three provinces named.

A supplemental decree has been issued suspending the decree of Aug. 28, pardoning repentant rebels, and ordering that all rebels be arrested and jailed.

Both decrees have been communicated to all officers in the field.

Arrest Liberal Leaders.

Coincident with the issuance of the decrees, which followed last night's decision not to yield to the peace demands, the government ordered the arrest of practically every prominent Liberal. Alfredo Zayas, president of the Liberal party, and several others have disappeared.

Among other Liberals arrested are Congressman Florencio Villuendas, brother of Congressman Enrique Villuendas, who was killed in a fight with a policeman at Cienfuegos a year ago, and Congressmen Borger and Varona.

Veterans Denounce Palma.

When the news of the issuance of these decrees reached the veterans' peace commission, which was in session at the home of Gen. Menocal, there was immediate and almost unanimous denunciation of President Palma and other members of the government.

Senor Sanguilo, independent, who was present, and who usually is moderate in his utterances, made an impassioned speech, in which he declared that there remained for Cubans but two roads to travel, one of honor and the other of disgrace. The government, he said, had refused offers of endeavors to settle the difficulty pacifically, and so nothing was left but to side with its opponents.

Veterans Join Rebels.

Gen. Collazo and other prominent veterans made similar speeches, and Gen. Menocal coincided with the views of the other speakers. It appears probable that most of the members of the veterans' peace commission will join the insurgents to-day.

The government does not intend that membership in congress shall shield anybody from arrest. Senator Morun Delgado was one of the first arrested, and several representatives were quickly added to the list of prisoners. Former representatives in congress and veterans are being searched for by the police.

Absolutely Irrevocable.

Prior to last night's action of the government, which as given out is absolutely irrevocable, Gen. Menocal and Alfredo Zayas reached a definite understanding as to what the Liberals would demand, and the peace commissioners were saying that while it was a difficult matter they had hopes of getting together. Neither Gen. Menocal nor Senor Zayas would give the basis of their reasons for the hope of reaching an understanding, but it is known that the Liberals have not relinquished their purpose of having new elections, or at least the in favor of Gen. Menocal, Senator Sanguilly or some other independent, though there is a possibility that they might accept the appointment of some Moderate as president, with the division of the other high offices with the Liberals. These claims were expected to be modified after the first discussion of terms.

No fighting was reported yesterday and it is not considered likely that Pinar del Rio will be occupied by Guerra, now that machine guns are proceeding in that direction. Havana and Santa Clara provinces are quiet, but Santiago is reported uneasy.

CRUISER RUSHED TO HAVANA.

United States Prepares to Protect Interests in Cuba.

Washington, Sept. 13.—The critical situation in Cuba is absorbing the attention of the administration, to the exclusion of all other foreign topics as indicated by the activity of the officials in the state, navy and war departments.

The prime object of the administration at present is to get at the facts, which is no easy task, in view of the mass of indefinite statements emanating from various quarters.

Whole Truth Not Known.

In the view of the officials here there is good reason to believe that the whole truth is not disclosed by either side. It is the purpose of the administration to proceed with great deliberation in dealing with the Cuban question, and it was said on the highest authority that there would be no intervention by the United States unless the rebellion assumed the proportions of a general conflagration. It was further stated that there had been no application for intervention from any authorized party.

Warship Sails Hastily.

The development of the day was the admission that the American cruiser Des Moines, which sailed Monday hastily from Norfolk, had gone southward to Key West with the ultimate purpose of proceeding to Havana if developments within the next two days seem to warrant such action. There is no intention in this movement of the Des Moines to show partiality toward one side or the other in the present conflict in Cuba. The ship will be at Havana to serve as an asylum in case of need, and be at the disposition of the American charge.

Army and Navy Ready.

If the navy is making ready in other respects for contingencies in Cuba, the fact is carefully concealed at the department. For its part, the army is prepared to answer any call, though there are absolutely no orders yet from the president or secretary of war.

Heavy Fighting Expected.

Havana, Sept. 13.—The government's outright declaration that the war will be prosecuted to a finish was everywhere the sole topic of conversation yesterday. That fighting of a far more desperate character will result as soon as the news shall have spread throughout the provinces is not doubted in any quarter. The fear of an attack by the insurgents on Havana is spreading, and there are rumors, more or less authentic, from all directions of new uprisings in various quarters.

Palma Reviews Troops.

Yesterday afternoon the government forces in Havana paraded through the principal streets and were greeted with some enthusiasm. The parade was reviewed by President Palma at the palace.

Particular plans have been prepared for the defense of the outskirts of the city.

The news that the United States is sending one or more warships to Cuba is exciting great interest here.

Nothing to Fear From America.

Members of the cabinet and other government officials who were shown the Associated Press dispatch declared that they were not especially concerned, as the administration had nothing to fear from the United States, which had always shown Cuba every friendship.

All the publishers and editors of newspapers were summoned yesterday afternoon to the office of the secretary of the interior and informed that the publication of anything inciting to revolution would not be tolerated.

There were only a few scattering arrests yesterday of alleged conspirators. The leaders have mostly joined the insurgents in the field. No new attacks were reported yesterday.

TELLS HORRORS OF SIEDLICE.

Correspondent's Story of Awful Scenes of Murder and Rapine.

Warsaw, Sept. 13.—With the sanction of the authorities, who provided an armed guard for the mission, the Associated Press correspondent yesterday visited Siedlce, the scene of the murderous events of September 8, 9 and 10. The railway station at Siedlce, when the correspondent arrived there, was crowded with Jews, among whom were many starving women, with infants in their arms. Almost on the moment there fell upon the ears of the frightened people the sound of a volley being fired in the town, which lies half a mile back of the station.

In Panic of Fear.

A panic ensued, men trembling with fear and women imploring the soldiers for mercy, anticipating slaughter of their loved ones and themselves. Gendarmes on guard at the station entered the waiting room and roughly ordered the people to be quiet, assuring them that their alarm was needless.

Paid to Start Slaughter.

Refugees state that Gov. Engelke was taken sick a week ago, and that control of affairs in Siedlce then passed into the hands of Col. Tuchanowski, an anti-Semite. The people at once began to desert the town, apprehending an attack upon the Jews. It is asserted that paid provocative agents so contrived matters that on Saturday the soldiers began shooting in the streets and bombarded houses, the occupants being forced to flee. To quicken the flames soldiers threw oil upon burning houses.

Savage Brutality.

An army officer stumbling upon a wounded Jew, remorsely killed him. It is related that soldiers killed the Jewish proprietor of a fruit store, put his body under a table and ate his provisions as they were spread upon the table.

DOZES; FALLS TO DEATH.

Man Who Goes on Porch to Have Smoke Meets With Accident.

Butte, Mont., Sept. 13.—Charles A. Rose was instantly killed by a fall from the porch of a boarding house where he was stopping. It is supposed Rose, who went out on the porch to take a smoke, fell asleep and lost his balance. The porch was about twelve feet from the sidewalk and the man struck on his head, fracturing his skull.

TEXAS FEVER IN ILLINOIS.

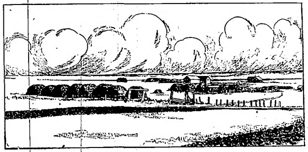
Cattle Suffer and Die and Quarantine Is Imposed.

Bloomington, Ill., Sept. 13.—The dreaded Texas fever has made its appearance in Illinois, twelve head of fine cattle belonging to Albert Stacey, near here, dying, while the remainder of the herd show symptoms of the disease. The herd was recently shipped here from La Belle, Mo., the car not being disinfected. State Veterinarian Scott has enforced a quarantine.

Wheat in Western Canada

A Good Crop of Excellent Quality Has Been Raised This Year.

The grain crops estimates from the Canadian West make a range of from 87,000,000 to 115,000,000 bushels, and an accurate statement will be somewhere between these figures—probably not far from 90,000,000 bushels. This year a larger acreage was sown, estimated at an increase of from 18 to 20 per cent., and had the average yield of last year been maintained, the aggregate would assuredly have gone considerably beyond the 100,000,000 bushel mark. The exceptionally large influx of settlers was responsible to a considerable extent for much of the increased area, and, there can be no doubt, is also responsible for a part of the decreased average yield. The first crop raised by the new settler—often unacquainted with the conditions of western agriculture—is not usually prolific, and 1905-06 placed a very large number of amateur farmers behind the stilts of the plow; but they will learn, and learn fast, and with another season or two will help to raise the average instead of depressing it.



Wheat and Oat Farms, Elbow Valley, Twelve Miles West of Calgary.

Of the estimates to hand, that of the Northwest Grain Dealers' association is the lowest: Wheat, 87,203,000 bushels; oats, 73,725,600 bushels, and barley, 16,980,600 bushels. The Winnipeg Free Press sent out five special correspondents, who returned after 20 days with a somewhat better report and gave reasons for the faith that was in them. They had traveled all through the spring wheat district; had driven 1,400 miles through the grain country, besides traveling thousands of miles by rail; and they had visited 93 localities and knew whereof they spoke. They reported: Wheat, 90,250,000 bushels, on 4,750,000 acres, with an average yield of 19 bushels per acre. The western division of the Bank of Commerce also investigated with the following result:

	Acres.	Yield. per acre.	Bushels.
Alberta.
Wheat	141,421	20	2,828,420
Barley	75,678	30	2,270,340
Oats	322,923	40	12,916,920
	540,022	—	18,015,680
Saskatchewan.
Wheat	1,331,649	22	29,296,278
Barley	41,273	30	1,238,190
Oats	542,483	40	21,699,320
	1,915,405	—	52,233,788
Manitoba.
Wheat	3,141,537	19	59,689,203
	4,771,740	—	120,154,903
Total.			Bushels.
Wheat			91,813,900
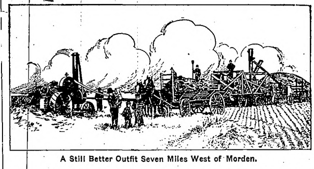
Barley			17,735,790

All of which goes to show that a wheat crop of nearly if not fully 90,000,000 bushels may be safely counted upon. This is less than was looked for by some enthusiastic western people, who maintained that increased acreage necessarily meant an increased aggregate. Still, 90,000,000 bushels of wheat is 6,000,000 better than what was looked upon last year as a good crop, and we do not think Western Canada has much cause to feel down in the mouth because the acme of its anticipations on the wheat crop may not have been realized. Taking one year with another, that country has demonstrated that it can be depended upon as a great wheat growing territory, and has to be reckoned with in the markets of the world.



A Still Better Outfit Seven Miles West of Morden.

The yield in oats has been increased this year by nearly 1,500,000 bushels, the aggregate estimate being 75,725,600, with the average at 41.2 bushels to the acre. The estimated crop of barley is placed at 16,980,600 bushels, which is a slight increase over the total of last year. Of flax the estimate given is 690,184 bushels, which is a material increase upon last year's figures.

Following are the figures in detail for wheat, oats, and barley in Western Canada for the three years last past:

	Wheat.	Oats.	Barley.
Manitoba	40,116,878	33,035,774	8,707,252
Saskatchewan	15,121,015	9,164,007	665,593
Alberta	1,118,180	5,187,[illegible]11	1,077,274
	56.856.073	47.387.292	10.450.119
Saskatchewan	15,944,730	10,756,350	598,336
Alberta	786,075	5,609,496	1,608,241

This year, the lowest returns, as we have stated, are estimated at: Wheat, 87,203,000 bushels; oats, 75,725,600, and barley at 16,980,600 bushels, which is very satisfactory, if not absolutely satisfying. To better appreciate this fact, all that is necessary to do is to go back 25 years in the history of Western Canada. At that time the agricultural product of the whole country was confined to Manitoba, and consisted of 1,000,000 bushels of wheat, on an acreage of 51,300 and 1,270,268 bushels of oats. The entire crop was at that time required for local purposes, and the export trade was an unknown quantity. To-day, allowing nearly 20,000,000 bushels of wheat for local consumption and seeding, there will be about 70,000,000 bushels for export, which at 70 cents per bushel will bring in outside money to the extent of nearly $50,000,000. The barley and oats exported are good for an additional $25,000,000, and the combined amounts, together with that received from dairying and other sources, are bound to make financial conditions very easy in the Canadian West until the next harvest matures.

In the last week of August a tour of inspection was made along the line of railway in the wheat area by the Northwest Grain Dealers' association and a number of American grain experts. What they saw convinced them that not only was the crop a good average one, but the quality of the grain grown was admittedly of the best quality, and more than one of the visitors stated that although the yield might have been larger, the quality could hardly have been improved. Speaking on this point, Mr. J. F. Whalley, the well-known wheat man of Minneapolis, said:

"The quality of the crop is excellent, and I think the average will be No. 1 Northern. I was up with the grain men two years ago, and I am very much struck with the improvement that has taken place in these two years. The growth is certainly marvelous; there is not a better country in the world than the Canadian Northwest."

The past few years, in which agriculture has been carried on to any great extent, have brought the problem of transportation very prominently to the front, and there is a railway development in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, Such as has never been seen anywhere. There are at present over 6,000 miles of railway in operation in that country, and a conservative calculation of the lines now in course of construction places the extent at 5,000 additional miles; a large portion of which will be completed during the present year. This means the opening up of a considerably increased agricultural area, and there is every reason to believe that in a very few years the agricultural wealth of the country will be developed to such an extent that instead of "A Hundred Million Bushel Crop" it will not be out of place to refer to the crop as "500,000,000 bushels of wheat for export." This may look like drawing the long bow at the present time, but, in the light of what has been done by Western Canada in the past five or ten years, there is no limit that can be placed upon what may be done in the five or ten years immediately in front of that lusty young giant of the West.

An Odious Comparison.

The "After Thoughts" of the Minneapolis Tribune are usually so long after that they seem to lack originality. "A Cupidian surprise" was too quick for Quentin and we will wager that he wouldn't breathe for several minutes if the expression "cupidian diplomacy" was sprung on him too suddenly.

President Stickney of the Chicago Great Western says rebates are still given and will continue to be given to big shippers in the form of refunds for overcharges. He is a marvel of credulity who believes a republican congress would pass a law that didn't have a loop hole in it big enough for a dozen trains to pass thru without touching the sides.

Extract from a speech delivered by Senator Henry J.Gjertson at a republican meeting held in Lake Street wigwam, Minneapolis Monday evening, August 27, 1906: "Mr. Cole and other prominent Republican members of the house came into the Senate and denounced the Recipocal Demurrage Bill pronouncing it pernicious legislation and soliciting senators to vote against it."

When the National Association of Milliners gets that artistically designed headgear, with its ribbons and flowers, its Louis XIV droop to the brim and its birds, enforced on the weak and submissive man, we purpose serving notice on them that they will have to accelerate their going proclivities to an unusual extent to keep pace with us as we have already placed an order for one that will make the dear girls' lids look like an overworked two spot in a brand new deck.

VOTE REGARDLESS OF PARTY

Halstad Reporter: If your party fails to put up a worthy man for you to vote for in supporting the party principles then vote for the man you know is worthy, if he does belong to another party. That is the only way to purify our politics. Each man must help at home.

OF COURSE NOT:

Odessa Tribune. (Rep.): Mr. Cole is not the lumber baron's candidate: O, no. no, no. They just nominated him for fun, and Tom Shevlin, the millionaire lumber king, was only engaged in a boyish prank when he worked over time at Duluth to accomplish Jacobson's defeat and he threw that double somerset simply because of a superabundance of animal spirits. Mr. Shevlin hateth Cole like the dickens. When it comes to beliving Republican stuff, the people are omniverous; we used to believe the foreigner paid the tariff.

JOHNSON "DOES THINGS."

Perham Enterprise: The Pioneer Press offiers an excuse for the lack of interest in Candidate Cole's opening speech by saying that Cole is not a talker, he is a doer." Minnesota's governor should be able to talk as well as work. Governor Johnson exemplifies both qualities in a marked degree. He is a fluent and forceful speaker whose adresses have reflected credit on the state both at home and abroad. He is likewise a man that does things. One recent act of his will save a million dollars to the farmers of the state in freight rates on grain this fall. Another act of his was of such importance as to win the commendation of President Roosevelt in a special message to congress. But there is no need to particularize. Cole is inferior to Governor Johnson in every respect and the people of Minnesota know it,

Ambitious Taft.

William H. Taft, secretary of war has a paramount ambition which is not usual one assigned to him, says the Satueday Evening post. He weighs very near the 320 mark and has to have his office furniture made along special lines. Outside his office he stands unless sure of the furniture: This weight, he feels, is too much to carry, so he has put himself on a strict diet, cutting out all sweet and starchy foods. His goal is the 250 mark. When he gets there (quoting the Post again) he will probably give a dinner in celebration of the occasion, and increase his weight 10 or 15 pounds. MALARIA AN INSIDIOUS FOE TO HEALTH

Malaria is an atmospheric poison which we unconsciously breathe into our lungs through the impure air arising from low, marshy places, stagnant ponds, damp cellars, sewer pipes, improperly ventilated houses, decaying vegetable matter, etc. Day after day these germs and poisons are taken into the lungs, and as the blood passes through them it becomes infected with the poison and in its circulation distributes the microbes of disease to all parts of the body. Malaria is a very insidious disease; it gives no warning of its coming until the circulation is filled with the poison and this foe to health has the system at its mercy. The blood becomes polluted, thin and weak and its slow, irregular circulation fails to properly nourish and strengthen the body. Then the entire system is attacked, and if the germs and poisons of Malaria are allowed to remain the strongest constitution will break down. No one can feel well when the system is in a malarial condition; the vitality is weak, the appetite poor, digestion deranged, the complexion grows sallow and the entire body feels the effects of the poison. Malaria must be removed from the system through the circulation and the only medicine that can accomplish this is S. S. S. It not only cleanses the blood of all unhealthy, morbid matter, but destroys the germs, cures Malaria and restores this vital fluid to a strong, healthy condition. S. S. S. is made of roots, herbs and barks combining purifying and tonic properties which keep the blood free of all poisons and the system in perfect condition. While destroying the germs of Malaria and building up the weak, polluted blood S. S. S. gives tone and vigor to the entire system. Book on the blood and any medical advice without charge.

The men came on and fixed upon him so intent a gaze that he returned it in mere surprise. They made no secret of their scrutiny, but they actually crouched in their eagerness, and stared at him with all their eyes. He was so amazed that he stood stock still and returned their stare. They went past him, and he turned to look at them. They turned also to look at him. He walked up and accosted them. Of the two one was obviously English and the other was obviously un-English.

"You appear to be curiously interested in me, gentlemen," he said, speaking in the language he had heard spoken by the taller and burlier of the two.

This personage did not appear to be at all abashed, but turning to his companion he asked in an English accent, but in French:

"Is that the man?"

"No," said the person appealed to, who was lame and withered, and had a noticeable scar running down one side of his face. "It is not the man, or anything like the man."

The Englishman looked chagrined and disappointed. "Are you sure?" he asked.

"Sure?" the other echoed. "Of course I am sure. It is not the man, I tell you, nor anything like the man. I have been brought here on a fool's errand."

"Well, you'll get the pay agreed on all the same," said the Englishman. "Come along. There's nothing to be got by staying here."

He threw into the air a something he had carried in his hand behind his back and caught it with a metllic clash. It was a brace of handcuffs.

Aloysius watched them as they walked off side by side until they disappeared at a turning in the road. Then he drew a long breath and walked slowly after them, with his eyes upon the ground.

"So," he said, aloud, but softly to himself, "the chase is afoot. Whom did that fellow with the handcuffs expect to find, I wonder?"

He went slowly on revolving this question in his mind.

"If that French fellow had even hesitated I should have had those bracelets on my wrists, I know. Now, whom did they expect to find?"

When he reached home he sat down to smoke and ponder.

"Crime has gone undetected many a time," he said. "It may do here, and yet I seem to feel it in the marrow of my bones that the Nemesis of that unnatural murder comes nearer and more near. One thing is certain. The hunt's afoot. I wonder what they suspect. I wonder what they know. I wonder what they came to look for here. Ah! I wish I could find it in my heart to pray!"

He sighed profoundly, and leaned a dejected head upon his hand.

"Oh, heaven! avert it," he murmured. "Avert it, in mercy!"

CHAPTER XIII.

Billery kept his lodgings in the mean street off the Gray's Inn Road, and the gaunt Miss Macab looked after his necessities with a stern assiduity. Since Sergeant Holt's failure to identify Aloysius with the man who had purchased the house in Agar Row, the inquiry into the Brangwyn mystery had been pretty much at a standstill. An investigation into the character of the witness whom Billery had hunted up in Paris, and who was prepared to swear that Aloysius had testified falsely as to his absence from London at the time of the elder Brangwyn's disappearance, had been very far from favorable to that personage. He had been found to be a needy hanger-on at the Paris studio, who had at one time acted as a model there, and had been dismissed for some act of petty larceny. He had several times been in trouble with the French police; and, in short, it was found that he could be so easily discredited that it would be of no use to offer him as a witness. The rest of the case against Aloysius was just so much pure conjecture and no more.

All the same, Sergeant Holt clung to the belief with which Billery had inspired him, and with the dogged patience which is one of the indispensible characteristics of men of his profession, he continued diligently to seek out and to follow up anything which appeared likely to serve him as a clue. The autumn passed, the winter season wore itself away, spring was here again, and, except for the handful of people who had been intimately concerned in the affair, there was barely a man or woman who ever gave a moment's thought to it.

Poor Billery and the gaunt Miss MacNab, his landlady, were having a talk together which was not of a character to be agreeable to either of them.

"Ah'm just as aware o' the facts o' the case, Master Billery," said Miss MacNab, "as if I'd been an eye and ear witness to the whole o' them. Ye've geeven in again to your besetting weakness. Ye've not been sober at your home-coming for a fortnight. Ye've not been in a fitting condition to be seen at the office, and ye're afraid to present yourself there. I wonder ye're not ashamed of yourself."

"I'm sorry to have caused you any inconvenience," said Billery, who was very much ashamed of himself, indeed.

"Sorry!" said Miss MacNab. "And what good does your sorrow do me? I'd like to be answered that, Mr. Billery. Ye're three weeks in arrear, and here am I with a notice from the water rates. Ye have some money, I suppose, and I'll not leave this room till I've something on account."

"I'll make an effort to settle up tomorrow," said Billery, "but at this moment I haven't a stiver. It's no use to go down to the office to-day because it's Saturday, and there'll be nobody on the premises."

"I'm not taking that for an answer," said Miss MacNab; "I'm wanting the money to-night, and unless I have it I'll lock the door against you as sure as judgment. I'm just weary of your idle, worthless ways, and I'd be very well satisfied if you'd just betake yourself elsewhere and make room for one o' your betters, Mr. Billery."

"I'm sorry," said the wretched Billery; "I'm awfully sorry, but I don't know what I can do before to-morrow."

"Ye can march out of my hoose," said the implacable creditor, "and ye can stay out of it until ye're prepared to pay me my just dues, the which amount is one pound seventeen shillings and sixpence, for rent, for money lent, and for goods supplied. I'm wanting that sum to-night, and I'm gaun to have it, or to know the reason why. An that's my last word upon the subject, Mr. Billeery."

With that she flounced from the room and came into impetuous collision with a very dirty-faced and slaternly girl.

"What are ye doing here, ye slut?" asked Miss MacNab.

"Here's a gentleman for Mr. Billery," the girl answered, in a tone of injury. "And don't you call me names, ma'am, for have it I will not. You're down on the lodgers fast enough, but you're none too fast at paying up yourself."

"And this," said Miss MacNab, "is the treatment I'm subject to in consequence of your irregularities, Mr. Billery. It's for the last time I'm telling you. I'll have that one pound seventeen shillings and sixpence this night, or out of my hoose ye go."

"Helloa, Billery," said a voice from the landing. "I seem to have chosen the wrong time for a call. Where have you been this two weeks? Have you been ill?"

Billery recognized Truscott's voice and dared not face him.

"No," said Miss MacNab, "he's not been ill. He's just surrendered himself to his auld habits, and if ye're as well acquaint with him as I am, ye'll know what they are."

"I think," said Truscott, "I heard you mention the sum of one pound seventeen and sixpence. Will you kindly take it out of that? I shall dock that from next week's screw, Billery."

Miss MacNab tucked up her gown and sought for and found a meager handful of silver in the pocket of an undergarment. Having handed two-and-six to the visitor, she retired wordlessly and closed the door behind her.

"I had a guess as to what might be the matter," said Truscott. "Is it any use to talk about it, Hamilton?"

"I don't believe it is," said Billery, sitting on the bedside and hiding his face in his hands.

"But what's going to be the end of it all, old man?" asked Truscott with a hand upon his shoulder.

"I know," the other answered, miserably. "There's nothing that anybody can say to me that I haven't said to myself a thousand times."

"By Heaven, Hamilton," cried Truscott, "it's a great shame! Here you are, as lovable a fellow as walks the earth, and a man with brains, a man who might carve out a career for himself, just feebly sauntering to perdition."

"Not willingly," said Billery; "I'm being dragged there."

"Dragged!" said Truscott, with an angry pity. "You've no right to let yourself be dragged."

"I know, Reggy," Billery answered; "no man knows it better."

"Well," Truscott declared, "if you won't mend it, I will."

Billery made no answer, and Truscott went on:—

"I'll hire a professional puncher, and I'll give him his instructions. I'll make him dog you like a shadow, and if he has to lay you out I'll pay his fines for him."

"It's awfully kind of you to say so, Reggy," said Billery; "but I don't think I could put up with that, even at your hands."

"Don't you?" retorted Truscott. "We'll see, my boy. I've been thinking this business out whilst you've been away, and I've made up my mind. I'm going to be mercilessly useful to you. It's an interference with the liberty of the subject, and you'll have your legal remedy if you like to take it."

"You mustn't do it, Reggy," said Billery. "I'm off it for a month. I've promised myself that, and I make the promise now to you. You never knew me to break my word when I've given you that undertaking."

"All right," said Truscott. "That's a bargain. And I shall have my man in readiness this day month."

"Rags," said Billery, rising to his feet and facing his old companion, "if anybody came between me and this accursed thing when the fit is on me I should kill him."

"Not you," Truscott answered. "You'll never kill anybody except by accident. Anyhow, you know what you have to look forward to. Until this day month you're a free nigger. From that time until you are prepared to swear off for another month I shall have you shepherded, and so on da capo and world without end, amen, until you are ready to pass your word for good. Why don't you do that here and now? Come! Be a man and face the music."

"No," said Billery; "I dare not. I can stand a month, and the beginning and end of that are like purgatory."

"We'll let it go at that for the time being," Truscott responded. "But I'm going to save your soul alive for you, and you've got my word for it. And now let's talk of something else. By the way, I've had a business call from Brangwyn."

"Aloysius?" asked Billery.

Truscott nodded. "Something the Thames Conservancy people want him to do. I referred him to the owner. That business of his uncle's disappearance is not being followed up, is it?"

"I think the inquiry practically over," Billery answered. "Holt tells me he has got nothing more to go on than I gave him."

"Well, you know," said Truscott, "I've only met the man half-a-dozen times in all, but he doesn't strike me as a sinister sort of fellow. He's not the kind of man I should feel inclined to associate with a cold-blooded murder."

"I am as certain of his guilt," said Billery, "as I am of my own existence. But if the truth is never to be discovered I shan't be sorry. His cousin Alexis shares my belief, I know, and he has such a terror of the exposure as I really can't describe. He fell positively ill with it, and he had to go away to the Continent for his health."

"He's back again," said Truscott. "I meet him now and then. He's engaged to be married to a fair neighbor of mine, a Miss Lee, a great friend of that rollicking Irish girl you used to know. My wife and Miss Lee are as thick as thieves, and Brangwyn comes down a-courting. He's a very different sort of person from his cousin, but really, judging for myself, I should no more think of suspecting one of them of the murder than the other."

"I like Alexis," said Billery.

"Well, now," Truscott answered, "if it weren't for the suspicion with which you inoculated me, I think I should have been disposed to like the other fellow better. It's rather a queer thing to think that you're talking to a man who is possibly a murderer, and a very resolute and cunning murderer into the bargain, but I can't associate the man with a deliberate crime. I seem to read a haunting grief of some sort, rather than remorse or fear."

"If I had to draw the face of a man haunted with the memory of a crime and by a constant terror of discovery," said Billery, "I should draw a portrait of Aloysius Brangwyn. If ever that man were put on the dock his look would hang him."

"You know Lisle, the parson down at the old place, don't you?" Truscott asked.

"I've seen him once or twice. I can't say I know him."

(To Be Continued.)

Veracity by Wire.

A bright young man was engaged in a desultory conversation with a prominent financier of a most economical disposition when the great man suddenly invited attention to the suit of clothes he was then wearing.

"I have never believed, said he, "in paying fancy prices for cut-to-measure garments. Now, here's a suit for which I paid $8.50. Appearances are very deceptive. If I told you I purchased it for $30, you'd probably believe that to be the truth."

"I would if you told me by telephone," replied the young man.

Lazy Man.

"Josh Drone is the laziest man in seven states," drawled the storekeeper at Bacon Ridge.

"What's he been doing now?" asked the cheese counter loafer.

"Wa-al, you know he was always so lazy he waited for the lightning to split his kindling wood?"

"Yep."

"And the flood to wash his windows?"

"Yep."

"Wa-al, now he's read somewhere that in the East the hailstones threshed a farmer's wheat and ever since he has been sitting in an easy chair praying for a hailstorm."

Tossed.

"Doubley has an auto now and he doesn't seem to do anything else but chase around the country in it."

"Yes, he's very strongly attached to his machine and——"

"He wasn't the last time I saw him on the road. He was about twenty feet above it."

Time works wonders. Even life doesn't look the same to a woman of thirty-six as it did when she was sweet sixteen.

The Age of Machinery.

We live in the age of machinery. The thinking, directing mind becomes daily of more account, while mere brawn falls correspondingly in value from day to day. That eccentric philosopher, Elbert Hubbard, says in one of his essays, "where a machine will do better work than the human hand, we prefer to let the machine do the work."

It has been but a few years since the cotton gin, the "spinning Jenny" and the power loom displaced the hand picker, the spinning wheel and the hand loom; since the reaper and binder, the rake and tedder, the mowing machine took the place of the old cradle, scythe, pitchfork and hand rake; since the friction match superseded the flint and tinder; since the modern paint factory replaced the slab and muller, the paint pot and paddle.

In every case where machinery has been introduced to replace hand labor, the laborers have resisted the change; and as the weavers, the sempstresses and the farm laborers protested against new-fangled looms, sewing machines and agricultural implements, so in recent times compositors have protested against type-setting machines, glass blowers against bottle blowing machines, and painters against ready mixed paints. And as in the case of these short-sighted classes of an earlier day, so with their imitators of to-day, the protest will be in vain. It is a protest against civilization, against the common weal, against their own welfare.

The history of all mechanical improvements shows that workmen are the first to be benefited by them. The invention of the sewing machine instead of throwing thousands of women out of employment, increased the demand to such an extent that thousands of women have been employed, at better wages, for shorter hours and easier work where hundreds before worked in laborious misery to eke out a pitiable existence. It was so with spinning and weaving machinery, with agricultural implements—in fact, it is so with every notable improvement. The multiplication of books in the last decade is a direct result of the invention of linotype machinery and fast presses.

The mixed paint industry, in which carefully designed paints for house painting are prepared on a large scale by special machinery, is another improvement of the same type. The cheapness and general excellence of these products has so stimulated the consumption of paint that the demand for the services of painters has correspondingly multiplied. Before the advent of these goods a well-painted house was noticeable from its rarity, whereas to-day an ill-painted house is conspicuous.

Nevertheless, the painters, as a rule, following the example set by the weavers, the sempstresses and the farm laborers of old, almost to a man, oppose the improvement. It is a real improvement, however, and simply because of that fact the sale of such products has increased until during the present year it will fall not far short of 90,000,000 or 100,000,000 gallons.

Hindsight is always better than foresight, and most of us who deplore the short-sightedness of our ancestors would do well to see that we do not in turn furnish "terrible examples" to our posterity.

Looking Forward.

"Was your husband killed in the Subway crush?" asked the woman in violet crepe.

"No, he perished in the 'Seeing New York Auto' accident."

"How odd. I lost mine during a trolley crash at the bridge."

"And your son?"

"In the elevator accident."

"And your daughter?"

"Died from heart failure after a bargain hunt."

No, this is not a conversation in a play, it is merely some of the small talk overheard at an afternoon tea in the year 2000. And yet we continue to go the pace.

Answered.

"I suppose you are bored a good deal?"

"Yes," admitted the busy man, "I am."

"What sort of people bore you most?"

"Well, to give you a careful answer, the kind who ask me if I am not bored a good deal."

At the Seashore.

"Aren't going to take a plunge in the surf this morning, colonel?" queried the Ohio man.

"Nevah again foh me, sah!" replied the Kentuckian. "I tried it yestahday mawning and accidentally swallowed a quart of watah, sah."

Idiotic.

"I can tell whether a man is going to his work or coming from it by the way he walks."

"Indeed? How do you tell?"

"Well, you see, when a man is going to his work he walks toward his office, and when he's returning he—why, where are you going?"

Noncommittal.

"How old are you, madam?" asked the judge of the woman who had been arrested for assaulting the lady next door.

"Five years younger than her that had me pinched."

"Well, what age is that?"

"Ask her first."

Flatter a storekeeper in a small town and he imagines that he was cut out for a merchant prince.

FOR WORKS OF ART

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION IS NATIONAL GALLERY.

Decision Recently Made Is of Much Importance and Means Assembling of Magnificent Art Collections.

By a decision of Justice Stafford in the District supreme court, it has been determined that this country already posseses a national art gallery. This decision is interesting first because no one realized that there was such a thing as a national gallery in this country, and, second, because it brings to the government and incidentally to Washington the Harriet Lane Johnston art collection, which is intrinsically valuable, very beautiful, and will form the nucleus around which a real national collection eventually will be built up. The pictures have just been transferred to the custody of the Smithsonian institution and will be placed on exhibition as soon as possible.

This decision of the court is more important than even the transfer of the Johnston collection would indicate. The Smithsonian has had an art collection for years, and it has slowly been growing, mostly through gifts; but the present decision recognizes it as a national gallery. This will attract more donations, and although the collection for the present will be housed in the lecture hall of the National museum, there will doubtless in time be a separate building erected for the art collection; and there is no reason why in time the national gallery in Washington should not be quite as much a center of attraction to visitors as the National gallery in London.

By the will of Harriet Lane Johnston in 1903 her art collection, consisting of 29 paintings, busts and other objects, was left to the Corcoran art gallery until such time as there should be established by the United States government a national art gallery. The bequest to the Corcoran gallery was acompanied by a number of conditions such as that the collection should be housed in a separate room without artificial heat, and there were some other provisions, to comply with which would have entailed more expenditure than the trustees felt that they were justified in making for a merely temporary collection. They therefore declined the custody, and it looked for a time as though the collection would have to be sold and the money divided with the estate, going principally to the Harriet Lane Johnston Home.

President Roosevelt, who is interested in such matters, urged on congress its duty to establish a national gallery, but it is seldom that such a thing can be done in one session and the matter went by default. Finally the executors of the estate and the Smithsonian institution went into court in a friendly suit to determine the custody of the pictures. Then it was that Judge Stafford decided that the Smithsonian already constituted a national gallery.

As a matter of fact the formation of an art gallery is one of the first duties of the Smithsonian under the act creating it, and when the present Smithsonian building was erected it was designed with two of the biggest rooms specially built for a gallery. The act creating it says that it "shall have custody of objects of art, the results of curious and foreign research." This function of the institution has been recognized by the regents all along and there have been a number of valuable objects acquired that have more place in an art gallery than they have in a museum.

Some of them have been turned over to the temporary care of the Corcoran gallery and some to the library of congress; but they will all go with the Johnston collection toward forming the foundation of a national gallery. There are other and more extensive plans afoot that will help on the work, but they have not yet taken official shape, but it is sufficient for the present to refer to the fact that they are in existence.

One of the first purchases of the Smithsonian, directly in line with the formation of the art gallery, was the Marsh collection of prints and engravings. This was a lucky speculation, as it proved. George P. Marsh was for a long time United States minister to Greece and to Italy. His collection of prints was a notable one and was bought by the Smithsonian in 1849 for three or four thousand dollars. It was temporarily deposited with the congressional library, and experts estimate its value now at between $50,000 and $60,000.

The Smithsonian already has quite a large collection of busts of prominent men and scientists, several valuable portraits and other objects, all of which will go into the new collection.

Senator's Wonderful Record.

William Pinckney Whyte, United States senator from Maryland, who has just passed his eighty-second milestone, has never been inside a saloon, never smoked and never rode in a cab. He framed the instrument on which the unique government of the District of Columbia is founded. He lives outside of Baltimore, yet is able to appear at a trial in Baltimore in the morning and be in Washington in time to answer to the noon roll call of the senate. Twice chosen United States senator, he has also been governor, mayor, state senator, state representative, city solicitor, attorney general and state comptroller. He was defeated for the United States senate by the late Arthur P. Gorman and then succeeded Gorman at the latter's death. He was a member of the Maryland legislature when Gorman was a lad in Howard county.

FADED TO A SHADOW.

Worn Down by Five Years of Suffering from Kidney Complaint.

Mrs. Remethe Myers, of 180 South Tenth St., Ironton, O., says: "I have worked hard in my time and have been exposed again and again to changes of weather. It is no wonder my kidneys gave out and I went all to pieces at last. For five years I was fading away and finally so weak that for six months I could not get out of the house. I was nervous, restless and sleepless at night, and lame and sore in the morning. Sometimes everything would whirl and blur before me. I bloated so badly I could not wear tight clothing, and had to put on shoes two sizes larger than usual. The urine was disordered and passages were dreadfully frequent. I got help from the first box of Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and by the time I had taken four boxes the pain and bloating was gone. I have been in good health ever since."

AWFUL PSORIASIS 35 YEARS.

Terrible Scaly Humor in Patches All Over the Body—Skin Cracked and Bleeding—Cured by Cuticura.

"I was afflicted with psoriasis for thirty-five years. It was in patches all over my body. I used three cakes of Cuticura Soap, six boxes of Ointment and two bottles of Resolvent. In thirty days I was completely cured, and I think permanently, as it was about five years ago. The psoriasis first made its appearance in red spots, generally forming a circle, leaving in the center a spot about the size of a silver dollar of sound flesh. In a short time the affected circle would form a heavy dry scale of a white silvery appearance and would gradually drop off. To remove the entire scales by bathing or using oil to soften them the flesh would be perfectly raw, and a light discharge of bloody substance would ooze out. That caly crust would form again in twenty-four hours. It was worse on my arms and limbs, although it was in spots all over my body, also on my scalp. If I let the scales remain too long without removing by bath or otherwise, the skin would crack and bleed. I suffered intense itching, worse at nights after getting warm in bed, or blood warm by exercise, when it would be almost unbearable. W. M. Chidester, Hutchinson, Kan., April 20, 1905."

He Dodged.

It is said of a noted Virginia judge that in a pinch he always came out ahead. An incident of his childhood might go to prove this.

Well, Benny," said his father when the lad had been going to school about a month, "what did you learn to-day?"

"About the mouse, father."

"Spell mouse?" his father asked.

After a little pause Benny answered: "Father, I don't believe it was a mouse after all; it was a rat."

Where Nature Stopped.

The single woman was protesting against increased water rates, and the town clerk was waiting his turn, but not expecting to get it.

"It's a shame, anyway," she concluded emphatically, "to have to pay for what nature supplies so bountifully."

"But nature doesn't supply the pipes, ma'am," replied the town clerk, rather happily, it seemed to him.—Youth's Companion.

WOMEN'S NEGLECT

SUFFERING THE SURE PENALTY

Health Thus Lost Is Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well and strong? We hear every day the same story over and over again. "I do not feel well; I am so tired all the time!"

Miss Kate McDonald

More than likely you speak the same words yourself, and no doubt you feel far from well. The cause may be easily traced to some derangement of the female organs which manifests itself in depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or do anything, backache, bearing-down pains, flatulency, nervousness, sleeplessness, or other female weakness.

These symptoms are but warnings that there is danger ahead, and unless heeded a life of suffering or a serious operation is the inevitable result.

The never-failing remedy for all these symptoms is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Kate McDonald of Woodbridge, N. J., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"Restored health has meant so much to me that I cannot help from telling about it for the sake of other suffering women.

"For a long time I suffered untold agony with a female trouble and irregularities, which made me a physical wreck, and no one thought I would recover, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me, and made me well and strong, and I feel it my duty to tell other suffering women what a splendid medicine it is."

For twenty-five years Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, has under her direction, and since her decease, been advising sick women free of charge. Her advice is free and always helpful. Address, Lynn, Mass.

A SAILOR ON SEA PICTURES.

A Few Criticisms on Alleged Marine Paintings.

"I'll take a sailor along with me the next time I buy a sea painting," said a millionaire. "I bought two marines last month, and yesterday my old friend, Capt. Salthorse, had a look at them.

"Salthorse said:

"'In this picture we've got a trading schooner in charge of a tug towing away from a rock-bound coast through a fearful jumble of sea. The schooner's main topmast is gone, and all sails are lowered except her staysail, which is being hoisted, though she is towing hard on the gale. Why that hoisted staysail? All hands, I suppose, are drunk.'

"'In the second picture,' continued Capt. Salthorse, 'the principal boat, an 18-footer, is racing, yet has no flag flying. That's as incorrect as it would be for you to go to a dinner party minus a shirt. The crew of this boat are getting in the spinnaker, and, if they lower away, both spinnaker and boom will be in the water, for they have neglected to let the boom go forward. But I know what the trouble is with them. They, too, are drunk.'"

Wise Doctor Gives Postum to Convalescents.

A wise doctor tries to give nature its best chance by saving the little strength of the already exhausted patient, and building up wasted energy with simple but powerful nourishment.

"Five years ago," writes a doctor, "I commenced to use Postum in my own family instead of coffee. I was so well pleased with the results that I had two grocers place it in stock, guaranteeing its sale.

"I then commenced to recommend it to my patients in place of coffee, as a nutritious beverage. The consequence is, every store in town is now selling it, as it has become a household necessity in many homes.

"I'm sure I prescribe Postum as often as any one remedy in the Materia Medica—in almost every case of indigestion and nervousness I treat, and with the best results.

"When I once introduce it into a family, it is quite sure to remain. I shall continue to use it and prescribe it in families where I practice.

"In convalescence from pneumonia, typhoid fever and other cases, I give it as a liquid, easily absorbed diet. You may use my letter as a reference any way you see fit." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville" in pkgs. "There's a reason."

SUBURB OF THEIR VERY OWN.

Washington Newspaper Men Lay Out a Rural Addition.

Washington is about to have a suburb like unto which there is nothing in the records of things suburban. Probably the most remarkable thing about this suburb is that it is not going to be put on the market. That is not its only unique feature, for it is to have no streets, and a man with a bank account of more than three figures will not be welcome within its limits.

It is to be a "truly rural" suburb, controlled by a diminutive suburban trust, and if the plans of its builders materialize the civic millennium will have been discovered, and folks living out Chevy Chase way will have a model settlement where great social problems will have been solved, where there will be neither capital nor labor, where politics will be an entity, and the lion and the lamb will lie down together.

The trust that is about to give being to this mysterious suburb is composed of Washington newspaper men, who, with a modesty that is paradoxical, request that their names be not published. About six months ago these men—six in number—bought a part of Clean Drinking Manor, just to the eastward of Chevy Chase lake, and adjoining the estate of "Old Nick" Jones.

The tract—23 acres in all—is covered with a natural growth of timber; in fact, it is a veritable forest. The six newspaper men have divided the property, and each one is preparing to construct thereon a low, rambling bungalow of logs, with rough shingle roofs, broad porches, dormer windows, and all that sort of thing.

Instead of streets, the boys have provided for typical country roads winding through the trees, thus retaining to a marked degree the rustic effect. The material for the bungalows will be cut from the roadways and from the clearings for the building sites. The entire tract is to be fenced in, little pathways will be laid out under the pines and the poplars and the elms, the wilderness of honeysuckles will be left undisturbed, and the members of the suburban trust will settle down, far from the madding crowd.

In order to assure a thoroughly congenial community, the boys will not let any one else in on the deal except possibly one or two mutual friends.

POWER TAKEN FROM CONSULS

Result of Law Providing United States Court in China.

The new law passed at the recent session of congress creating a United States court in China greatly diminishes the powers of American consuls in that country. Under the new law the consuls will have jurisdiction over small cases of relatively little significance only, and even in these the right of appeal to the court whose establishment is thus contemplated is guaranteed.

Heretofore the consuls have had full jurisdiction over American cases arising in China; that is, in all cases of judicial proceedings.

The court is to hold sessions at Canton, Tienstin and Hankow at stated periods, at least once annually.

The law gives the consul the same jurisdiction as they have now in civil cases where the value of property involved does not exceed $500 in gold, and in criminal cases where the punishment for the offense charged cannot exceed by law $100 fine or 60 days' imprisonment, or both; but appeals go to the district court established by the act, and may go from there to the supreme court of the United States.

The law gives this new court in China supervisory control over the discharge by consuls and vice consuls of the duties prescribed by the laws of the United States relating to the estates of decedents in China.

Pies and the Rate Bill.

When the rate bill in the senate was being hotly discussed, many of the senators had their remarks printed in pamphlet form. Mr. Tillman being one of the senators who did, Senator Spooner had gotten possession of one of the printed speeches, and was sitting in the senate cloakroom scanning it when Senator Tillman entered.

"Hello, Ben," exclaimed the Wisconsin senator, "I wonder you never told me that you had your remarks on the rate bill printed in pamphlet. I happened to see one this morning, and it contained some of the best things I have yet seen in any pamphlet on the subject."

"I'm proud you think so," said Mr. Tillman, with a self-satisfied air, "and what were the things that pleased you so much?"

"Why," replied Mr. Spooner, "as I passed by a pastry shop this morning on my way down I saw a girl come out with two cherry pies wrapped up in one of your works."—American Spectator.

Evolved Thirst Quencher.

While the mercury in Washington was hovering between 95 and 100 recently Quartermaster General Humphrey put his brain to work with the view of ameliorating the general thirst. As a result he perfected what has come to be known in the capital as "the Humphrey soother." Here is the specific: Take a long glass and squeeze a whole lime into it. Put in a chunk of ice, pour in a hooker of rum—Santa Cruz or Jamaica, as you prefer. Then fill the glass with the best ginger ale obtainable and after it is mixed and cold drink and be soothed.

A NERVOUS WRECK

General debility is a term that covers a multitude of cases where there is no acute disease, yet the patient continues to lose strength and the doctor's medicines have no apparent effect. This is the decline that leads to death if means are not found to check it. In a great majority of cases Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will check it and restore health and strength because they actually make new blood and so send renewed vitality to every organ and tissue of the body.

Mrs. S. A. Green, whose address is Box 29, R. F. D. No. 4, Franklin, Ga., says: "For three and a half years I suffered with weakness and nervousness, complicated with stomach trouble. At times I was confined to my bed for periods ranging from three weeks to two months and was under the physician's care most of the time for three years. I do not know the cause of my trouble but I was prostrated with weakness and, although I took a great deal of medicine, nothing seemed to give me strength. At times my stomach hurt me something fearful and my head often troubled me. I was sleepless and what sleep I did get did not refresh me.

"When I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I weighed but 104 pounds. I knew I was so bad that a few doses would not cure me and I had patience. Soon the pills began to give me strength, my blood got in better condition, I could sleep well at night and help some with the housework. Now I weigh 130 pounds and think nothing of walking half a mile. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done wonders for me and the neighbors all know this statement is true."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

BRIGHTER SIDE OF RUSSIA.

Decent Amusement Is Provided for the Workingmen.

Aside from its working hours, Russia rises superior to her neighbors in providing decent amusement for the immense laboring class whose meager earnings forbid them the amusements of the prosperous, says the Craftsman. Nearly every Russian city has a miniature Coney Island supported by the state or municipalities, the prevailing admission fees being from half a cent upward. St. Petersburg has the finest and cheapest popular theater in Europe. Where racial and religious considerations are not involved, the Russian laws are superior to those of many European countries. For ordinary murders, capital punishment is never inflicted, while the illegitimacy statute, amended three years ago, is the most liberal on earth, completely annulling the social stigma and other obstacles which usually attend this misfortune, which in the case of children is nothing more. Unfortunate is the word invariably employed to describe criminals and convicts.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

That in answer to one who wrote the poem. "The lips that touch tobacco will never touch mine," the Prison Mirror states the author is an unmarried woman who is so far past the forty-fifth mile post that she could not see it with a Yerkes telescope.

That a story is told of a benevolent old gentleman being stopped on the street by a tramp, who asked for a night's lodging. "Well look here my man" the old gentleman said, "what would you say if I offered you work?" Bless your life, sir, came the reply, "I wouldn't mind it a bit; I can take a joke same as most people.

That a teacher was explaining to a class of juveniles how the English sparrow was imported into this country to exterminate a worm that was doing a vast injury to vegetation; then how in their turn the sparrows were killing off the song birds. When she had finished, she called on a small boy to tell which was worse, the worms or the sparrows; "I don't know," said the boy, "I never had the sparrows."

TO BUILD TROLLEY ROAD

Roseau and Greenbush Want to get Out of the Woods.

Business men of Roseau, Badger, and other towns in that part of the state are agitating the project of an electric line from Roseau, the county seat of Roseau county, to Karlstad, a station on the Soo's Winnipeg line. The distance is about forty miles, and the line from Greenbush to Roseau, twenty miles, is graded.

The idea of the electric line was suggested by representatives of eastern electrical manufacturing concerns who noted the magnificent water power going to waste, and the need of the country for better railway connections.

Roseau and other towns in the territory have long hoped for railroad connection with the outside world. The towns have struggled along on more or less promises of relief, and the country has been slowly filling with settlers who are willing to take the chance of railway communication. The Great Northern has extended its Thief River Falls line to Greenbush and has graded on to Roseau, but pressure of competition elsewhere, it is presumed, has operated to delay the laying of steel beyond the present terminus.

An electric line, built by eastern capitalists or built on the co-operative plan, if no better plan can be had, has been favorably received. The distance from Karlstad to Greenbush is about twenty miles, all new construction, and mainly through a heavily timbered country. From Greenbush to Roseau the grade has been made by the Great Northern, and is practically ready for ties and steel. Some of the enthusiastic advocates of the electric line argue that the Great Northern grade can be condemned and used for the new electric line.

A meeting of the business men of Roseau, Badger, Greenbush and other towns, and of the substantial farmers along the proposed line, will probably be called in the near future. It is estimated by the bankers of that territory that $100,000 can easily be raised among the business men to help finance the deal. The co-operation of the Commercial club of Crookston and other commercial bodies will be sought.

ADVENTURES IN BRIDGEBUILDING

The riveting up of the Zambesi bridge proved to be a more formidable undertaking than had been anticipated. Several of the riveters we brought from England were unable to stand the climate, and we had to depend largely on the men in the country. We found that an average day's work in England and in Africa were two very different things. Although we had good hydraulinc and pneumatic equipment, the rate of progress was rather slow.

An interesting incident occurred during the riveting. A leopard, which had previously devastated the henroosts of every one in the the locality, besides taking sundry dogs and cats, was run over by an engine one night. He had apparently been dazzled by the headlight and had lain on the track. He was seen by the driver, who pulled up. The skin was found to be scarcely damaged.

The deep pools among the islands in the river were the haunt of numerous hippopotami, which, although peaceable most of the year, if left alone, at certain times became dangerous. We were chased on one or two occasions when in Canadian canoes, but never came to grief. Others were not so fortunate. Three canoes were overturned in one week. In one case one of the civil commissioners' native paddlers was drowned. In another, the man overturned lost his rifle and other gear and had to swim to one of the islands, where he remained all night.

Another adventure that befell two of our riveters, is, perhaps, worth recording. They went a little way along the gorge and there found the remains of a red buck. They started to cut out the horns. Suddenly they heard a growd behind them. Turning, they saw a lioness with two cubs, who was evidently annoyed at this interference with her dinner. The two men did not stop to argue, but made a bee line for the gorge, down which they jumped—about as dangerous a proceeding, one would think, as facing the lion. Luckily they stopped sliding a good way down, and returned very much bruised and excited. The lioness was followed next day for some distance, but the party was unable to come up with her.—World's Work.

AS IN THE MELODRAMA.

Police Chief's Story of Two Disguises and an Arrest.

"A man and a woman," said the police chief, "occupied a compartment of a Pullman. In a desolate place, the train speeding like lightning, the man said to the woman:

"'Madam, I will ask you to look out of the window a few minutes. I am going to make some changes in my apparel.'

"'Certainly, sir,' said the woman politely.

"Two or three minutes, filled with odd, rustling noises, passed. The man said:

"'Now, madam, I am finished.'

"She looked at him and, behold, he had transformed himself into a dashing girl, heavily veiled, fashionably dressed and with rich and beautiful blond hair.

"Some moments later, in her turn, the lady said:

"'Now, sir, or madam, whichever you are, I'll ask you also to look out of the window. I have some changes to make in my own dress.'

"The other complied and, when he was permitted to withdraw his gaze from the passing landscape, what was his surprise to find the lady changed into a man. He gave a loud laugh.

"'It seems,' he said, 'that we are both fugitives. Hence we should be pals. I am a bank robber. What are you?'

"'I,' said the other, 'am Detective Hawke of San Francisco, and for three days, in female attire, I have been shadowing you. Wrists together, please, so that I may now slip the nippers on.'

"Thus," concluded the police chief, "did my friend Hawke arrest the notorious Jack Graeme in '79. It was the neatest arrest, from the melodramatic standpoint, of the year."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Old Bullion's Arrogance.

"Benton was a most remarkable man," said the late Col. Switzler. "In some respects the most remarkable I have ever known, but he could not begin a careet at this time. The people would not tolerate him. He would impress even a stranger by his appearance. He walked as if he owned the earth. With head raised at an angle of 45 degrees and hands behind his back he would stalk with measured tread down the street, looking neither to the right nor to the left, recognizing no one.

"If he had an appointment to speak at 2 o'clock, promptly at 2 o'clock he would arrive. He would come in his carriage unattended. He would permit no one to introduce him. But, passing through the crowd, he would make his way to the rostrum and begin, 'Citizens.' Never did he say 'Fellow citizens.' Those before him were no fellows of his. And when he had concluded he would make his way back to the hotel, without personally addressing a soul in his audience. No one dared interrupt him in his speech. He refused to recognize the right of any constituent "to ask him how he stood on any subject."—Columbia Herald.

Kaiser Wilhelm has a violent dislike for cats, and it is believed in Berlin that he instigated the ordinance which puts a tax on felines of the capital. Unless a cat wears a collar and medallion showing that the tax has been paid, it will be killed by the police.

There were three towns in which either no election was held or they got lost in the shuffle as no returns were made. They were Goodridge, 153-39 and 154-39.

At present there are two independent candidates in the field, Frank Jeffers for register of deeds, and H. T. McAnulty for superintendent of schools. Both are now circulating their petitions and will have little difficulty in getting the required number of signers, 240.

AN ASSOCIATION FORMED

Red River Valley Imigration and Development League.

A large number of delegates from cities in the Red River valley met at Crookston Monday and Tuesday and organized the Red River Valley Imigration and Development league, the purpose of which is expressed in the name.

One of the things discussed was the continuous advertising by weekly writeups from well known men to appear in one of the leading papers of Cleveland, Indianapolis, Chicago, Des Moines and Minneapolis, the expense to be born by the different towns represented in the league.

The delegates from Red Lake Falls, F. A. Grady and J. A. Duffy, were prominent in the proceedings. Mr. Grady was chairman of the committee on resolutions and at the banquet Monday evening is said to have made one of the best speeches in a long list of good speeches. Mr. Duffy was made a member of the board of directors.

The meeting was a highly successful and it is prophesyed much good will eventually come of it.

FOR MARKET DAY

Saturday Septemeber 29 the Big Day---A Large List of Prizes Offered---Free Auction Sale--- Rest Room for Women

The Courier wants its readers to remember that Red Lake Falls will hold its next big market day on Saturday of this week, September 29, and that it will be to the advantage of every farmer within twenty-five miles to come here that day. There are a number of excellent reasons for coming; read them:

A large list of valuable prizes are offered, more valuable than many other towns give which have market days. There are no strings on on these prizes and they are given away to the one who wins in the several competions without any charge whatever.

There will be special sales at the stores that will be of real benefit to the purchaser for the reductions are genuine and upon goods that are seasonable.

An auction rale will be held at which any farmer having anything to sell may have it auctioned off free of charge. Joe Belair has been employed by the market day committee and will be paid by them. The auctioning will be done at any time during the afternoon that there is anything for sale, in the square in front of the city hall.

A rest room will be provided for women and children where they may go and rest in easy chairs and find articles of toilet for their free use.

The Red Lake Falls concert band, the best in the northern part of the state, will give a parade and open-air concert during the afternoon.

Again just remember there is no expense attached to anything and come to town Saturday and see for yourselves whether or not things are done as advertised.

There are two excellent reasons for the merchants of this city offering these inducements; first it draws trade to the city that is not in the habit of coming here; and, second, it is a splendid advertisement to intending settlers to know there is a live town where they can do their trading.

Following is a list of prizes; read it carefully, you will find something there that is yours just for the coming to town:

Farmer guessing nearest to weight of rock at Anderson & Wander's, mandolin valued at $5.

RAILROAD MONEY USED IN CAMPAIGN

OFFICIAL OF OMAHA ADMITS EMPLOYES WORKED IN LA FOLLETTE CAMPAIGN.

FIND OUT WHAT WAS SPENT

WITNESSES WHO KNOW WILL BE CALLED—NOTHING SPENT IN MINNESOTA.

St. Paul, Sept. 23.—A. W. Trenholm, general manager of the Omaha road, who was on the stand at the hearing on commodity rates before the railroad commission yesterday, admitted that he had allowed leave of absence to ten or fifteen men so that they could do some political work in Wisconsin. Pushed for an answer as to what campaign they had worked in, he stated that he did not know, but supposed it was in the last campaign of Robert La Follette for governor of Wisconsin. He admitted that the company had paid a bill of at least $300 for the expenses of some of the men while engaged in this work, and that the salaries of all of them continued just the same.

Worked Against La Follette.

Mr. Trenholm was asked if he did not know Jack Cluen of Ellsworth, Wis., an engineer; George Wright of Elroy and Solon Perrin, an attorney for the Omaha at Superior, Wis.

He replied that he knew the men named. Then Mr. Manahan, attorney for the shippers, said:

"Isn't it true that Mr. Perrin, as a legal representative of your road, spent much money belonging to the company—thousands of dollars—in opposing the candidacy of La Follette in Wisconsin?"

Mr. Trenholm replied that Mr. Perrin was not under his jurisdiction and that he could not answer for what he did.

"Did you not permit subordinates, officials and employes, to take part in the campaign and spend time while in the pay of the company to work against Senator La Follette?"

Their Pay Went On.

"Certain men came to me and asked for leave of absence to take part in the campaign for governor, and I granted such leave."

"Did they participate in the campaign against Senator La Follette?"

"Yes, I think they did."

"Their pay went on just the same?"

"Yes."

An attempt on the part of Mr. Manahan to secure the names of the men engaging in the work was futile.

Objection on the part of counsel for the Omaha to going any further into the matter was not sustained by the commission.

Want to Know How Much.

Commissioner Staples contended that it was material to the hearing to show just how much money the road had spent in politics, as it would show what had been diverted from the earnings. Mr. Manahan, who conducted the examination, was unable to find out further than the $300 and the salaries paid the ten or fifteen men while they were campaigning just what had been expended for this purpose.

Mr. Manahan declared that if the company would allow an examination of its records that he could show that the amount would figure into thousands.

Others Will Be Called.

Mr. Trenholm declared that he had only honored vouchers for $300, but that other sums might have been paid and he would not know anything about them. The names of those who would know, had such money been paid, were secured and they will be called to testify.

"Is it not true," continued Mr. Manahan, "that Mr. Perrin brought 400 to 500 Italians to Superior and held them there long enough to have them vote for the candidates opposed to Senator La Follette?"

"I know nothing of that whatever," he replied. "Mr. Perrin does not report to me."

As to "Other Expenses."

Mr. Manahan then took an item of $53,000 credited as "other expenses" in the 1904 annual report of the company. He attempted to bring out by cross-examination that the political contributions alleged to have been made might be lurking in this item of general expenses.

Mr. Trenholm stated that there were innumerable items which went toward making the classification known as the "general expenses."

R. A. Stone, assistant attorney general, then began an examination of Mr. Trenholm. He asked him if any of the money spent by the Omaha in politics had been spent in Minnesota. Mr. Trenholm declared that not one dollar had been spent in Minnesota.

How she came to be in such a condition, or what took her to that place is not known, and the girl is too weak to explain the circumstances. She is being cared for at her home, but the physicians have no hope of her recovery.

TAFT LENDS EAR TO BOTH SIDES

GETS STATEMENT OF FACTS FROM PRESIDENTS OF MODERATES AND LIBERALS.

AUGURS WELL FOR SUCCESS

TAFT PLEASED WITH WAY THE LEADERS OF FACTIONS HAVE RECEIVED HIM.

Havana, Sept. 21.—The pdesidents of both the Moderate and Liberal parties yesterday submitted to Secretary of War Taft and Assistant Secretary of State Bacon their respective statements of the facts leading up to the revolution and the conduct of belligerents. Each of the presidents to-day will present a written statment of the peace terms to which they are willing to agree. Gen. Menocal, representing the veterans, also related the efforts he has made for peace and the difficulties he has encounter and gave his opinion as to what courses hold any promise of an amicable settlement.

Hearings Are Private.

Yesterday's hearing began at the home of Minister Morgan, in the village of Marianao, which is only three miles from the most advanced insurgent forces. The hearings were held privately.

Secretary Taft informed Vice President Capote, Senor Alfredo Zayas and Gen. Menocal that yesterday's conference would be purely preliminary, and that all will be heard again. After the heerings Secretary Taft said that it is evident that the mission will require more time than he had anticipated. He intimated that ten days will be required to complete his errand, but he could not say whether it would be necessary to visit insurgent camps or other cities.

Taft Is Pleased.

He was pleased that representatives of every faction had appeared, considering that this augurs well for the success of the mission. Mr. Taft said that he expects to talk also with representatives of the commercial interests.

A private telegraph wire is being strung from Minister Morgan's house to the cable office in order that Messrs. Taft and Bacon may be able to report direct to President Roosevelt.

Three hundred rural guards have been sent to Marianao, which hitherto has not been specially protected.

Oppose New Election.

Vice President Mendez Capote said that the government is opposed to any plan which involves new elections He added that he is preparing a written statement of the terms which the Moderates will accept.

Senor Zayas said he had been asked not to talk about the conference, but acknowledged that he had been urged to use his influence to stop fighting. He said that he feared he would be unable to reach distant insurgent camps in time and pointed out that an attack by the government forces on the insurgents under Tello Sanchez at Sancti Spiritus, on Tuesday, was a violation of the government's armistice.

Encouraged to Talk Freely.

Mr. Taft was careful not to commit himself to either faction, but encouraged all to talk freely.

During Secretary Taft's visit to President Palma early in the day the latter spoke freely of the situation and the future possibilities, adding that in the contingency of a general election being ordered he would not feel that it would be consistent in him to continue as president. No member of the government, President Palma said, will consent to a general election.

Taft Meets Rebel Chief.

Following his visit to President Palma, Secretary Taft boarded the cruiser Denver to return Commander Colwell's call. He found there Senator Zayas awaiting him under a prearrangement with Commander Colwell, and thus cordial relations were established both with the palace and with the revolutionists.

The conditions in the field are quiet, although the situation at Cienfuegos is threatening. Gen. Roderiguez said that rural guards and militia were patrolling the outskirts and suburbs of Havana. One thousand militimen from Mantazas have been removed from the Cabanas fortress to Camp Columbia.

Overt Act in Eastern Cuba.

Santiago, Cuba, Sept. 21.—The first overt act by the revolutionists in Eastern Cuba was committed Tuesday afternoon.

Fifty mounted men under Capt. Vincento Costa and Lieut. Francisco Salmon, entered Firmenza, twenty miles east of here, where the Juragua iron mines are located. They presented to Superintendent of Mines Whittaker a document bearing the alleged signature of Gen. Hierezuelo, demanding the delivery of two cases of dynamite and two blasting batteries. The superintendent refused to delived the goods. The insurgents thereupon seized the explosives and the batteries' ammunition and other supplies giving their receipt therefor.

Will Molest No Further.

They promised not to molest further if the company's railway was not used to transport government troops. The governor yesterday ordered that

REHEARSE TO KILL THE CZAR

TERRORISTS RUN THROUGH PALACE FENCE IN AUTO AND THEN ESCAPE.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 23.—According to the newspapers the mysterious automobile which the police have been trailing for several weeks in the belief that it belonged to revolutionists and was being used as a base for a terrorist conspiracy, has been seized in the vicinity of the palace of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch at Peterhof. The machine bore a false number. The passengers were armed and could not properly identify themselves.

The most daring exploit of this machine is reported to have occurred at Tsarskoe-Selo, where the motorists are said to have crashed through a fence surrounding the little palace and made a rapid trip through the inclosure and out again, presumably in rehearsal for an attempt on the life of the emperor after his return from the present cruise in Finnish waters.

The suburb of St. Petersburg adjoining the Narva Gate was shaken yesterday by the explosion of a powerful bomb, which was thrown by one of three well dressed men, and which tore an enormous hole in the grounds and broke all the windows in the vicinity. There was no loss of life. The bomb throwers disappeared before the arrival of the police

NEWS OF INTEREST.

STATE TIMBER SALE.

Auditor Prepares Lists of the Timber That Will Be Sold on Oct. 11.

Forty-five million feet of timber will be offered at the annual sale of state timber which the state auditor will hold at the capitol on Oct. 11. A complete list of the timber is ready for distribution. Most of the timber is in Itasca and St. Louis counties.

The amount is not much more than half of what was offered last year, when 80,000,000 feet were sold at high prices. The amount last year was a little over the usual amount, however. The small amount offered this year is partly on account of the growing scarcity of timber. Although the timber is not all of the highest grade, it is expected that a great deal of it will bring fancy prices. Most of it is pine, but there is some spruce, tamarack, cedar and balsam.

The purchaser of this timber must pay 25 per cent of the appraised value before the close of the sale. If he fails to do this, the timber will again be put on sale. The permit to cut the timber is good for two years, and the purchaser must give bond to pay the full price, whether he cuts it or not, except that the timber board may grant an extension of one year.

The sale at the capitol is the big sale, where the large lots are offered. The auditor also has issued a circular stating that sales of several small lots of timber will be held later, probably at Duluth, Grand Rapids and Bemidji, and possibly at Aitkin, Walker and Park Rapids. The dates for these sales have not been fixed and the lists have not been completed. The timber will be in lots of less than 100,000.

OLDEST MINISTER DEAD.

Rev. M. D. Reeves Passes Away at Parkers Prairie.

Rev. D. D. Reeves, the oldest minister in this county and probably the the oldest in the state, died at his home at Parkers Prairie at the age of ninety years. Rev. Mr. Reeves was born in 1816 and joined the Baptist church in 1836, being baptized in the river at Chicago, when that city was a small village. He served with Abraham Lincoln in the Blackhawk war, and came to what was then the territory of Minnesota in 1855, organizing the second church in the state at a point called New Lebanon. He labored as a frontier missionary in the southern part of the state for seven years, organizing numerous churches, and settled in this county thirty years ago. When the settlers here lost their crops in the grasshopper year, Rev. Mr. Reeves solicited aid from Gov. Pillsbury, and his wife had charge of the distribution of relief through the country adjacent to their home. His ministerial labors continued up to a short time before his death, and he attended the last Old Settlers' meeting, which was held on June 22 of this year.

AN AX HIS WEAPON.

Finlander With a Grievance Had to Be Bound.

August Jauppi, a Finlander, has been bound over to await the action of the October term of the district court at Aitkin on the charge of attempting murder.

Jauppi, it is allelged, has long threatened that he would kill any one who attempted to work on the road which the county has been constructing over his land, and had purchased a Winchester rifle and a supply of ammunition. Half a dozen men had been sent by the town supervisors to repair the road at a point near Jauppi's dwelling. Suddenly he appeared with an ax, and it is charged made a vicious swing at the head of Jonas Finley, another Finlander. Finley dodged but the ax sunk into his forearm almost seering it from his body.

Then, according to the complaint, Jauppi attacked another of the party with the ax, but the man was too powerful and succeeded in overpowering the Finn. Jauppi was bound and brought to Aitkin, where he was arraigned and held for trial.

VILLAGE OF SCANDIA GROWING.

New Addition Platted for Homes of Retired Farmers.

There are not enough lots in the village of Scandia, in the northern part of Washington county, to supply the want to retire and make their homes there. As a consequence a farmer has been induced to divide a portion of his farm into lots, and County Surveyor Joseph Oldham is preparing a platted addition to the village. This is an old settlement, made more than half a century ago by Scandinavians, and there are many families that are related who want to live close together.

Eus. Normandeau, a blacksmith, met with a serious accident at Red Lake Falls. He was cutting a piece of iron, and the chisel flew out of his hand, the sharp edge striking him in the groin, severing a vein. He all but bled to death before assistance reached him.

PARENTS CAN'T WAKE GIRL.

Miss Snow Has Been Sleeping for More Than Six Weeks.

After six weeks of a sleep which has baffled all the efforts of physicians Miss Maud Snow, living in Marshall county, near Enok, has started on the seventh week.

Six weeks ago Miss Snow told her parents that she believed she would lie down and take a nap, and for them not to disturb her. She slept through the afternoon, the night and well into the next day before any effort was made to arouse her.

Then her parents tried to awaken her, but without success. Becoming alarmed, they summoned a physician. To awaken her he employed a needle, starting on the feet and going upward on the body. The young woman did not wince nor show any signs that she felt the needle until the armpits were reached, when she manifested a slight sensitiveness to the operation, but did not open her eyes. Finally she was aroused, but only for a brief moment and at once fell asleep again.

At intervals the family, by heroic means, succeeded in awakening her. Pinchings, beatings, rubbings and pins were utilized and often dashes of cold water were employed. Those sometimes would remove the condition of lethargy and Miss Snow would awaken for an hour or two, and would converse in a rational manner. All at once she would say: "Oh, I am so sleepy," and would at once lapse into slumber.

The physicians who have attended the young woman are thoroughly puzzled by her condition. Food has been administered to her in fluid form, and she apparently is in the best of health and has lost no flesh. But it seems to be impossible for her to keep awake for any long consecutive period.

Hypnotists and spiritualists argue that the young woman is in a trance and have desired to try all sorts of experiments with her. To this, however, the parents have objected, and have stuck to the old school of physicians. While the latter as yet have been unable to solve the mystery, they still believe that it is susceptible to relief by such means as they are permitted to use by their code of ethics. An improved form of the electrical machine has been suggested and this has been sent for to the Twin Cities.

CATALOGUE HOUSES PREVENT DEVELOPMENT OF TOWNS

The following letter written by ex-Mayor William D. Sweet of Fargo, N. D., to the Forum was published by that paper some time since, and although it may be a little old, it is well worth reprinting:

To the Forum: You touched the heart of the subject the other day when you recounted the incident of how Sunhagen, the jeweler, promptly subscribed to lift a local church debt as follows:

Sunhagen, the jeweler........$25.00
Chicago catalogue house...... 00.00

It is a mistaken idea with many consumers that the catalogue house system of trade is a benefit to the community at large.

The catalogue house is a modern device of trade, the motto of which might aptly be "heads, I win; tails, you lose." And the process of operation, a sort of cat-in-the-bag trade, or a "swap unseen" so far as the consumer is concerned.

The catalogue house occupies a citadel of security from which radiates a system of tenticles reaching into the heart of every community; and a counter system of well greased skids along which glides to their coffers the wealth of the land. There is a deft ingenuity in the system, which retains every advantage for the house, and gives nothing in return, until the last penny is yielded up by the farmer. The accumulation of prepayment, thus artfully exacted, looks like the inception of another Tontine insurance scheme, which, if developed unchecked, may some day invite another uprising of the people, and at least furnish fame for a Moses, a Roosevelt or a Lawson.

The theory of the catalogue's system, if carried to its logical conclusion, means a stop to commercial development, a centralization, and monopoly, compared with which the beef trust is a roadside peanut stand. It means the extinction of the country merchant, and the obliteration of inland distributing centers. With the country merchant and kindred industries, the villages and towns disappear and the country at large finally resolves itself into a system consisting of one great center of supply on the one hand, and an unbroken expanse of agriculture on the other. With the innumerable small commercial centers must also go the ready facilities that make suburban life endurable—the doctor, the lawyer, and all of the professions that cater to the convenience and happiness of communities—all drawn to the one congested vortex of strenuous life, and leaving the balance of the country to the loneliness of toil to enrich the one great octopus of city life. This condition attained, and monopoly is ripe for its final stroke that makes all commerce the servitor of the great trust, for which peoples and governments must exist only as feeders. Thus in theory the catologue house commences a long stride toward universal trustification, a condition which some political economists say is ideal, but against which all intelligent humanity struggle aghast, knowing that the price is the extinction of the last atom of individuality, reducing all men to a single unit as cohesive and indistinguishable as a mass of dough. This view, even if drawn with broad strokes, is yet the finality of the catalogue house theory. There is no class who rebel against monopoly, centralized power, and trustification more than the farmer; and yet their response to the sap-sucking tenticles of the catalogue house does much to transfer the wealth of the country to the great centers—unwittingly they are sending abroad wealth, which, in the channels of trade at home, would replenish and multiply. They are sapping the life of home commerce which is the basis of social and industrial development; the first of which makes life worth living, as the second provides the abundant means of it. They are destroying that touchstone of progress, credit—without which the great West would be yet a wilderness. Under the cataloguers' regime it would require ten times the money now in use to carry the exchanges of commerce and by the difficulty of its procurement, to that extent retard the development of the country.

The country merchant and all he stands for represents a theory directly opposite to that of the catalogue house—he represents the greatest axioms of political economy, in bringing the consumer and producer in closest touch. He represents the idea of the completeness of commercial organization and thus, the ideal society with the most varied happiness of life.

The country merchant by the beneficence of widespread credit furnishes millions of capital that have turned the desert to a garden and many a poor man from poverty to opulence. He gives the choice of selection on the spot, the advantage of which in economy and effective results, few consider. He stands as the visible guarantee of his goods which is an everlasting incentive to the highest standard of quality. And finally when the quality of the goods, the variety presented to view, the choice of selection, the quickness of delivery and the inestimable value of credit when needed, the saving of freight, are all considered, he lays the goods in the farmers' hands at less cost than any catalogue house ever can do. North Dakota alone probably purchases in supplies each year $20,000,000 and pays therefor later on, after the crops are harvested, sold and the money secured. Wipe out the country store and this $20,000,000 would go out of the state before a dollar came from the crops and would require a mortgage on nearly every farm in the state to raise the money.

The popularity of the catalogue house is based on prestige not warranted by facts. A voluminous catalogue, profusely illustrated, glowingly worded and presenting baits for cash in advance, conveys the impression of bed-rock prices, but making no account of freight, expressage, exchange, cash discount, loss of time, misfits and poor quality. It's a myth; but the danger comes in the credulity of the people who continue to bunco themselves, and impoverish their community, to fatten the deluder. To send their stocking-hoarded savings East, and then lean on their country merchants for necessities, until another crop puts them on their feet again. I say the advantage of the catalogue purchase is a myth, which allures the farmer and ghosts the merchant; and which will disappear when the merchant boldly unmasks a given case of competition, totes up the cost and advantage on both sides and puts them side by side.

In the language of John Burns, "for the welfare of the people give us bigger villages and smaller cities," and long may it be ere the sinister cloud of the C. O. D. extinguishes the benign sun of the I. O. U.

—Wm. D. Sweet.

Can Hold His Own.

Here's a business man who can hold his own with catalogue houses. A merchant of Humboldt, Iowa, has a two-page advertisement in his paper and says he can outsell, out-bid and out-do any catalogue house in Chicago, and he is doing it, too. Why not? His rent is less, insurance less, clerk hire far less, goods come in large quantities with less freight. A man who goes into his store and buys, knows what he is getting and the ad tells just what he has to sell. Catalogue houses can't compete with the live country merchant.

Merchants Must Study.

There is only one salvation for the local merchant. He must study the methods of the mail order house and make them his own. He must fight them with their own weapons. He must face the fact that the mail order house is a competitor and that if it can persuade the people that it can sell better and cheaper goods that the home merchant, it will remain a feature of modern business life and will grow greater, all the man-made laws to the contrary, notwithstanding, and that it will in the end strip the home merchant of the larger part of the patronage which he now enjoys.—Ex.

Why Not?

A writer in a weekly paper not long ago accused the local merchants of making enough money out of the farmers to erect fine dwellings. We would ask the farmers why they don't kick about the palaces they are erecting for Chicago's merchant princes, and which are taxed to pay the expenses of Cook county, Ill.—Ex.

BEAUTIFUL MARINE CLOCK.

Bronze Timepiece Weighs 50 Pounds and Has Dial of Burnished Steel.

Ex-Commodore B. P. Cheney of the Boston Yacht club has installed in his summer home on Calf island, near Boston, light, the massive bronze marine clock presented to him by the club members at a dinner given him at the B. A. A. on May 4.

It stands nearly two feet high and weighs fully fifty pounds. The dial is burnished steel and the bronze case is finished in a dull luster.

On the base is this inscription:

May 4, 1906.—Presented to B. F. Cheney by the members of the Boston Y. C. as a token of their appreciation of his zeal, generosity and loyal services to the club.

Of all good things that e'er can be,
May yours be best on land and sea;
With fairest skies and weather fine,
And still a thought for "Auld Lang
Syne."

In receiving this gift Mr. Cheney made a droll speech, saying that he had suspected the gift was to be a walking stick, and that he had prepared a speech for a walking stick. Thereafter when mentioning the gift in his speech, he referred to it with mock gravity as "this handsome walking stick."

Regulating Bakers.

Bakers in France are subjected to certain unusual rules and regulations. In large fortified towns, for instance, they must always have a certain stock on hand in case of war. Not only this, but everywhere they have to deposit a sum of money in the hands of the municipal authorities as a surety of good conduct; and the law, not content with merely looking after their weights and measures, actually, decides the price at which bread is sold.

Every Shot Missed.

Gen. Funston was praising in San Francisco the marksmanship of the American volunteers.

"Thank goodness," he said, "our boys are not like those foreign volunteers of whom it is said that a company of them bought a washtub from an old woman for $1.50 and used it all the afternoon for a target.

"When they had finished the old woman went out into the field and brought back her washtub as good as new."

TOWN WRECKED BY DYNAMITE BLAST

12 TO 40 KILLED; 200 HURT

HALF MILLION DOLLARS' WORTH OF PROPERTY DESTROYED—500 HOMELESS.

Jellico, Tenn., Sept. 23.—Twelve deaths, the injuring of scores of other persons and $500,000 damages to property were caused here yesterday when a carload of dynamite standing on a track near the Southern railway depot exploded with a report that was heard for twenty miles. Buildings were shattered in the business section of the town and nearly every piece of glass within a radius of one mile of the scene was broken.

The freight car contained 450 boxes of 25,000 pounds of high explosives, consigned to the Rand Powder company, at Clearfield, Tenn.

Use Car as Target.

Two causes are assigned for the explosion. One is that three parties were shooting at a mark on the car and that a bullet entered the car and caused the explosion. The other is that while the car was standing on a side track a car load of pig iron was switched against it, and that the impact caused the explosion. People here are divided as to the theories, some going so far as to say that they actually saw the men firing at the car with a rifle.

The depot of the Southern, which was located near the scene of the explosion, was wholly wrecked. Two hotels, the Glenmorgan and the Carrathers, were badly wrecked, the third story of the latter being wholly destroyed.

Two Hundred Are Injured.

The list of injured will number 200, counting those slightly hurt. Business houses were badly disfigured and stocks of goods ruined, while residences suffered severely.

Some estimates on the loss of life extend the number as high as forty, but it is believed this is an exaggeration. Fully 500 people are homeless.

The disaster is the worst since the terrible explosion in the Fratherhill mine in 1902, when 184 miners lost their lives.

MRS. SAGE COMPROMISES.

Heads Off Litigation by Doubling Legacies to Heirs.

New York, Sept. 23.—The will of Russell Sage was presented to the surrogate yesterday and proved without contest. Counsel for the executors announced that Mrs. Sage intends to give to each of Mr. Sage's relatives who are beneficiaries under the will an additional sum equal to the amount of his or her legacy, provided there is no contest. This was accepted as satisfactory by Senator Edgar T. Brackett of Saratoga, who is preparing to contest the will in behalf of Elson M. Coonrad of Watervliet, N. Y., a grandson of Mr. Sage, who was to receive $25,000, but will be given $50,000.

McCleary will be asking if his standpatism is on straight long before W. S. Hammond gets through with him.

None of the rabidly partisan papers have so far suggested that either Johnson or Cole was responsible for the many recent railroad accidents.

One salient point of difference between Rooseveltism and Bryanism is whether the railroads shall own the government or the government own the railroads.

Under our form of Government all rights are vested in the people but many of the avenues for the enforcement of these rights have been closed by their own latches and carelessness of those they have elected to to office.

Let us have men in office who are honest in both their public and private relations, is the cry of the masses who were wont to accept anything the bosses placed upon the ticket and labeled them republican or democratic as best suited their purpose.

The people of the Sixth District are to be congratulated on getting rid of Buckman. He is said to have done more for his district than any congressmen they ever had but the people are coming to demand men with clean hands and honorable personal records.

Roosevelt is so strenously active in starting new reforms that he forgets all about the previous one in his anxiety for the next. Spelling reform has again placed him in the international spot light but has any one heard of a deminution of the trust abuses in this country?

Anyone who knows Governor Johnson and Candidate Cole personally, knows this very distinguishing difference between them: Governor Johnson has the ability to write his own keynote speech and candidate Cole couldn't have written his in a thousand years, unaided.

At Home Industry.

Did you ever stop to think how many cigars were smoked in Red Lake Falls every day? And did it occur to you that if all those cigars were made in this city it would furnish employment to eight or possibly ten more men than are at work here now in that line; that these men would probably have families that would make Red Lake Falls their home.

People talk about patronizing home industries yet probably not one-twentieth of the cigars smoked in city are made here. The "B.B." and the "I Lead", made by the Brunelle Brothers, are the equal of any ten or five cent cigars brought into town and the superiors of most of them.

Patronize your home industry, it means more men employed and more money kept at home instead of sent away to factories which do not pay taxes here or help support local institutions. Just remember, every time you buy an outside cigar you are sending away money that does not come back. Then buy a "B.B." or an "I Lead."

Five Minute Automobiles.

Mr. Herbert N. Casson in Pearson's magazine says that the factories of America turn out one automobile every five minutes. This country is making more automobiles than England, Germany, Italy or even France, and we have $21,310,000 invested in the industry. Twenty-four thousand machines are registered in New York state, while in France where the machine originated, there are not more than 17,000. This shows the marvelous growth of an industry which has merit. The merit of golden grain belt beer, embodied in its purity and healthful qualities, recommends it to every provider for the home. Standard Oil Prosperity.

Of all investments now offered the public, none perhaps is so certain to produce quick and large profits as the stock of the Self Threading Sewing Machine Needle company of Minneapolis. This is true because the manufactures of this wonderful needle have a monopoly of the business, and have already a larger demand than they can meet and as the profit on needles is simply enormous about 600 percent— owners of stock in this concern are more than likely to experience some real Standard Oil prosperity. If you have a few idle dollars that you'd like to invest at something like 12 per cent to begin with, it will certainly pay you to investigate this. The Self Threading Needle Co.'s offices are at suite 708 Andrus Bldg. Minneapolis, Minn. 49

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

Burning Off Paint Makes Insurance Void.

It seems that considerable danger to property exists in the practice of burning off old paint before re-painting. The question has long been a subject of debate in the technical journals, and now householders and the newspapers have begun to discuss it. Those of us who, with trembling, have watched the painters blow a fiery blast from their lamps against our houses, and have looked sadly at the size of our painting bill because of the time wasted on this preliminary work, are interested in the investigation by the Greenfield (Mass.) Gazette and Courier, which gives considerable space to the reasons for the practice, questions its necessity and suggests ways to prevent the risk of burning down one's house in order to get the old paint off. It says:

"There is a good deal of discussion among householders as to the desirability, in painting houses, of burning off the old paint, a practice that has grown very common of late in Greenfield and elsewhere. Insurance men are strongly opposed to this method. It makes void insurance policies for fires caused in this manner. Several houses in Greenfield have gotten afire as the result of this method, and in some places houses have burned as a result.

"It is undoubtedly true that when a house has been painted over and over again there comes to be an accumulation of paint in bunches. If new paint is put on top of these accumulations it is almost sure to blister. To burn it off is the quickest and cheapest and perhaps the surest method of getting rid of this old paint."

The Gazette and Courier quotes certain old patrons to the effect that accumulations of paint are unnecessary. These old-timers lay the blame partly on the painter who fails to brush his paint in well, partly on the custom of painting in damp weather or not allowing sufficient time for drying between coats, and partly to the use of adulterated paints instead of old-fashioned linseed oil and pure white lead. The paper says:

"Many of the old householders say that if care is taken at all these points it is absolutely unnecessary to have paint burned off. They advise that people who have houses painted should buy their own materials, and to have them put on by the day, so as to be sure to get good lead and oil. Of course the burning off of paint greatly increases the cost of the job."

The trouble householders everywhere have with paint is pretty well summed up by our contemporary, and the causes are about the same everywhere. By far the most frequent cause of the necessity for the dangerous practice of burning old paint is the use of poor material. The oil should be pure linseed and the white lead should be real white lead. The latter is more often tampered with than the oil. Earthy substances, and pulverized rock and quartz, are frequently used as cheapeners, to the great detriment of the paint.

Painters rarely adulterate white lead themselves and they very seldom use ready prepared paints—the most frequent causes of paint trouble. But they do often buy adulterated white lead because the property owner insists on a low price and the painter has to economize somewhere. The suggestion is therefore a good one that the property owner investigate the subject a little, find out the name of some reliable brand of white lead, and see that the keg is marked with that brand.

The linseed oil is more difficult to be sure of, as it is usually sold in bulk when the quantity is small; but reliable makers of linseed oil can be learned on inquiry, and, if your dealer is reliable, you will get what you want.

Pure white lead and linseed oil are so necessary to good paint that the little trouble necessary to get them well repays the house owner in dollars and cents saved.

Black Splotches All Over Face—Affected Parts Now Clear as Ever—Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black splotches all over my face and a few covering my body, which produced a severe itching irritation, and which caused me a great deal of annoyance and suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the leading physicians of my town. After a thorough examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin eczema in its worst form. They treated me for the same for the length of one year, but the treatment did me no good. Finally my husband purchased a set of the Cuticura remedies, and after using the contents of the first bottle of Cuticura Resolvent in connestion with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, the breaking out entirely stopped. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and after that every splotch was entirely gone and the affected parts were left as clear as ever. The Cuticura Remedies not only cured me of that dreadful disease, eczema, but other complicated troubles as well. Lizzie E. Sledge, 540 Jones Ave., Selma, Ala., Oct. 28, 1905."

"Well, he's in love with his new parishioner. He tells me he's one of the most generous and open-handed fellows in the world. The children of the place adore him. Now, I'm very much inclined to trust in a child's instincts."

"Yes," said Billery, "you've told me all that before, but it makes no difference to my opinion. The money is conscience money, as I've said since first I heard of it. The fellow was always supercilious with me, but I admit that with some people he used to have a very taking manner, and he has one of the sweetest vices I ever heard. But Nero had a voice, you remember, and was rather a captivating covey until you got to know him, I believe."

"I can't read the man as you do," Truscott answered, "and if the truth is ever to be known it may turn out that he killed the old man by misadventure, and that he hid him in the manner you suggest; but that he is a deliberate and wilful criminal I simply won't believe."

Billeery stood by his guns.

"The brute killed old Brangwyn for his money, and if he were here I'd tell him so to his face."

Just as he spoke the words a knock sounded at the door and the slaternly slavey at Billery's bidding came in, holding a visiting card pinched between finger and thumb in a corner of her ragged apron.

"If you please, sir, another gentleman to see you. He's a-waiting in the hall, and he says he has very particular business, Mr. Billery."

Billery took the card and glanced at it with wide-open eyes.

"Talk of Satan," he said, and handed the card to Truscott.

"Jehoshaphat!" cried Truscott, staring in his turn. "Shall you see him?"

"Yes," said Billery, "I'll see him." His cheeks had gone very white and accentuated the warm pink of his nose. "Don't go, Rags. I can't see him without a witness. Show the gentleman upstairs, Belinda."

"Yes, sir," said the girl, and the two men stood staring at each other as she trailed her loose slippers down the staircase.

"What in thunder brings him here?" said Billery.

"You will know in a moment, I presume," Truscott answered.

The name inscribed upon the card was that of Aloysius Brangwyn.

CHAPTER XIV.

He looked much more self-possessed than his accuser as he entered the room, hat in hand. One might have thought that a brisk wind was blowing in the legs of Billery's trousers, he trembled so violently. The new-comer was perfectly self-possessed, and in his scrupulous attire and with the fine distinction of manner which belonged to him he presented a strong contrast to the occupant of the room, whose recent indulgence in his only vice had left him with debased features and unstrung nerves. Billery after a week's sobriety was unmistakeably a gentleman. Billery after a week's debauch looked like a beery loafer. He was not trembling from fear, for, though he had the temper of a sheep, he had no want of physical courage. He made a tremendous effort and pulled himself together.

"To what do I owe the honor of this very unexpected visit?" he asked.

Brangwyn, who on his entry had gravely saluted Truscott, placed his hat upon a chest of drawers and looked at Billery with a quiet disdain which was not easy to endure.

"I am not sorry to find you here, Mr. Truscott. I understand that you are this gentleman's employer, and that in the inquiries he has felt it his duty to make about myself he has had your sanction and support."

"So long as Mr. Billery's inquiries lasted they had my sanction and support," said Truscott. "I believe they would have had the sanction and support of any man who occupies a position similar to my own."

"Of that it is impossible for me to judge," returned Aloysius, calmly. "I can have no knowledge of the grounds on which you acted. But you have the reputation of being an honorable and upright man, and I must assume that you were actuated by a sense of duty. I am not here to complain of inquiry if I have appeared a proper object of suspicion. So far as I am personally concerned I do not care if every action of my life since I came to manhood were examined into. But what I do care for is the fact that this gentleman has seen fit not to confine himself to inquiry, but has given himself the pains to denounce me in certain quarters, and to revive an old and baseless scandal which cast a cloud upon my life seven years ago. Now, I am here to warn him that on any repetition of that scandal I shall proceed against him, and to exact from him at present a written retraction of the statements he has made."

"What are those statements?" asked Billary, who had by this time recovered his self-possession, and was ready to face armies in which he felt to be the cause of justice.

"The first statement is that you are absolutely assured, on evidence known to you, that I am the murderer of my uncle."

"I shall not retract that statement, Mr. Brangwyn," said Billery.

"Very well, sir," said Aloysius, as calmly as ever. "In that case you shall learn at what value a court of law will assess your evidence."

He took his hat and, with a faint inclination of his head to Truscott, turned to go.

"Wait a bit," said Billery. "It might interest you, perhaps, to learn what is within my knowledge."

"It would certainly interest me very much indeed," said Aloysius, facing round again.

"You swore at the inquest that you were not in London at the time of your uncle's disappearance. You were seen here on the very night on which your victim was last seen alive. The body was concealed in the clay of the colossal statue on which you afterward worked, but which your cousin Alexis had begun."

"Ah!" said Aloysius. The sound escaped him involuntarily, and for a moment that transnent look of fear which Truscott had noticed at their first interview flashed into his eyes. "A shrewd supposition, Mr. Billery," he said, "but based on what?"

"Based on the facts," said Billery, "that the body was in a state of preservation when first seen, that the floor of the cellar was deeply covered with modeling clay when the water was pumped out of it, and that a workof art of considerable value has totally and mysteriously disappeared. That touches you, Mr. Brangwyn. You take it well, but you can't withdraw that startled exclamation."

"No," said Aloysius, as calmly as before. "You startled me, certainly. But there is one point of interest. How am I indicted in the matter?"

"You are indicted by the fact that just before your uncle's death the old man had decided to disinherit you, and had given instructions to that effect to his solicitor."

"These are the statements which induced you to assist this gentleman in his inquiry, Mr. Truscott?" asked Aloysius.

"These are the statements which appeared to me to justify inquiry," Truscott answered.

"You compel me to ackowledge that they do appear to justify inquiry. But they do not justify the assertion that I am guilty of my uncle's death. They form a chain of suspicious circumstances. If they did more I suppose that I should before now have been upon trial for my life. I presume from the courage with which Mr. Billery advances them to me that he believes them still."

"Yes, Mr. Brangwyn," said Billery, "I believe them still. I have retired from this inquiry and I am willing to let sleeping dogs lie, if you are. You need fear no further assault from me, for I have given my word to your cousin that I will not attempt henceforth to cast a stain upon the name he bears."

"You have given that assurance to my cousin?"

"At his urgent request," said Billery. "I am indebted to him for many acts of kindness, and, when all is said and done, I had fulfilled my duty when I communicated my facts to the police."

"It is fortunate," said Aloysius, "that so far as your suspicions attach to me I am in a position to rebut them all. I cannot complain that you have held them, or that you still hold them, so long as I do not choose, for good and sufficient reasons of my own, to disarm them and sweep them out of being. I have borne my burden now for seven years, and I must bear it still. I came here in the belief that you had acted wantonly and maliciously in answer to some imagined slight. I believe that we share a common antipathy, but I owe you no grudge now that I understand the grounds on which you acted. Yet I trust, for my own sake and for yours, that you will allow yourself to be governed by discretion in the future. You will accept my warning, not being offered in a spirit of enmity or anger, but as coming from one whose patience has been tried so long that it is near the breaking point."

"That for your warning!" cried Billery, snapping his fingers in a flush of hatred and contempt. "I've given my promise to Alexis, and I shall keep it, not out of any fear of you or your blessed law libel, but because a promise to a friend is sacred."

"I shall rest content in that assurance, and, in your own phrase, sir, I am willing to let sleeping dogs lie. I wish you good day Mr. Truscott."

"Good day, Mr. Brangwyn," answered Truscott, and without another word on either side Aloysius left the room and walked in seeming tranquility down the stairs.

"Did you ever see a fellow brazen out a case like that?" Billery asked, before the noise of his footsteps on the uncarpeted woodwork had died away.

"I can't read guilt into that man's manner," Truscott answered. "I am convinced that you are doing him a wrong."

"Upon my word, Rags," cried Billery, "I can't make you out. The man comes here to demand a retraction of as vile a charge as could conceivably be brought against him and goes away without it, and says he's quite convinced that I've acted from a proper motive. Would an innocent man endure to have a charge of murder flung into his face and then offer that sort of answer?"

"Not unless he were a very uncommon sort of man," Truscott assented, "and had some very urgent reason for his conduct. I don't profess to understand it, but I can't read guilt into the man's face. He puzzles me completely."

"He doesn't puzzle me," said Billery. "He came here to bluff me, and he's gone away without exacting what he came to exact, and admitting in so many words that I had acted rightly and naturally in denouncing him. I never met so impudent a villain."

"I never met with so obscure a riddle," Truscott answered. "Say no more about it. I must go now. I have spent more time here than I meant to spend. I suppose, after the little scene I broke in upon on my arrival, it's hardly necessary to ask you if you have any money?"

"I haven't a cent," said Billery, suddenly recalled to a remembrance of his own misconduct and hanging his head once more.

"We'll mend that," Truscott answered. "But look here, Hamilton, it doesn't come easy to one Englishman to tell another that he loves him. But we're very old comrades, you and I, and barring that one failing I never found an ounce of vice under your skin. I'm very sore about you, Hamilton, and if I hadn't a sincere affection for you it wouldn't be in your power to hurt me as you do. You're an awful ass, you know, old chap, and if it hadn't been that Providence has been kind to one old friend, you'd have brought yourself to the gutter long ago. You must forgive me for saying that, but I have proved myself a friend."

"You have, indeed," said Billery, who was easily moved to tears, and was giving free vent to his emotion now. "Heaven knows you have."

"I only dare to name it because I want you to do me a favor in return."

"I wish I could," said Billery.

"You can," his friend answered. "Give it up, old chap. Give it up and be your old bright, brave self again. You can if you'll only try. Promise me this. Tell me that you won't avoid me at the end of the month, as you did last time. Come and report yourself, and we'll go and dine together somewhere, and you shall have a moderate skinful and I'll shepherd you home. Now promise."

"Yes," said Billery, "I'll come."

"Why, hang it all!" cried Truscott, slapping him on the back. "If the enemy's so big and strong that we can't beat him all at once and altogether, we must circumvent him, bit by bit."

"I'll come," said Billery; "I promise."

"I'll tell you," Truscott said, "how we'll work the oracle. You say this fit comes on once a month?"

"Yes," was the answer. "I've never been able to stick it longer, since the thing began."

"Well, I don't suppose that there's any actual need to go a regular mucker at it, is there?"

"No, I don't suppose there is, but when it once gets started——"

"Quite so," said Truscott; "when it once gets started it's a difficult thing to stop."

"That's where it is," said poor Billery.

"This day month you shall come down home with me. W'll dine together, and you shall have what you want in your own room, and you shall give me your promise for another month. You'll have to come back to town next morning, but I suppose the temptation will be over for the time being."

Obvious.

A teacher in a small Oregon school was giving a lesson on the circulation of the blood. Trying to make it clearer, he said:

"Now, children, if I stood on my head, the blood, as you know, would run into it, and I should turn red in the face."

"Yes, sir," said they.

"Now, Arthur," continued the teacher, addressing a small boy, "what I want to know is this: How is it that when I am standing upright in the ordinary position the blood doesn't run into my feet and turn them red"

"Why, sir," answered Arthur, "because yer feet ain't empty."

This is the way a Colorado bachelor poetically lays a bouquet at the feet of his best girl: "There is gladness in her gladness when she's glad, there is sadness in her sadness when she's sad. But the gladness of her gladness nor the sadness of her sadness is nothing to her madness when she's mad."

TWO SHARP TRICKS

CONFIDENCE MAN BEATEN AT HIS OWN GAME.

Simple Scheme Evolved in the Keen Brain of Rufus Choate Resulted in Cattle Dealer Recovering His Money.

When Rufus Choate was practicing law in Boston, before he had gained a national reputation, he showed his keenness in numerous small cases, one instance of which will illustrate his genius.

A cattle dealer coming to Brighton to attend the regular weekly cattle sale on the following day, having several hundred dollars in currency with which he intended to buy stock, gave $100 of this sum to the landlord of a road house at which he stopped, to put in the safe for him over night. The next morning when he called for the money, he was told that while in an intoxicated condition the previous night he had asked for the money, and it had been given to him.

The countryman was dumfounded for he was not a heavy drinker, and was perfectly sober when he retired for the night; but, protest as he would, the landlord stuck to his story, and showed the empty cash box as evidence.

In the emergency some one advised the dealer to consult Choate. He went to Choate's office and explained the case.

As soon as he had concluded, Choate said: "Take a friend along as a witness, and see the landlord, and tell him you are satisfied that you got the money, and get him to take another hundred for safe keeping, and then come back here."

The dealer did as he was told, and the landlord accepted the other hundred. When he had reported, Choate said: "Now, go back alone and ask for the last deposit when no one is present." The landlord handed over the money promptly and the dealer reported as before. Choate said: "Now take the friend who saw you deposit the last hundred and demand your money."

He Got His Money Back.

When confronted by the witness and asked for the money which he had seen him take, the landlord was very indignant and insisted that he had returned it; but the dealer stoutly denied this. When the landlord discovered who had the case he reluctantly gave up the second hundred.

MILK PAIL SAVES LEGISLATOR.

His Little Son Cast Reflection Into Eyes of Infuriated Bull.

Representative Timothy E. Townsend, a prominent union republican member of the Delaware legislature, owes his life to the action of his 12 year old son Fred in casting the reflection of a bright milk pail into the eyes of an infuriated bull that attacked and gored him. Mr. Townsend is a farmer and cattle dealer near Frankfort, Sussex county, and it was on his farm that the affair occurred.

The legislator was being trampled when his little son saw his peril. The boy seized the milk pail, the only thing handy, and rushed to his father's rescue. As the sun was shining brightly, the pail proved more effective than a gun or pitchfork. The reflection made it look to the bull like a ball of fire. Young Townsend realizing this and with rare presence of mind, turned the reflection into the eyes of the bovine. The animal immediately became terror-stricken and actually ran from the inclosure. Mr. Townsend will recover.

A Spider That Fishes.

Professor Berg, in Buenos Ayres, has discovered a spider which practices fishing at times. In shallow places it spins between stones a two-winged, conical net, on which it runs in the water and captures small fish, tadpoles, etc. That it understands its work well is shown by the numerous shriveled skins of little creatures that lie about in the web net.

Vegetable Boa-Constrictor.

The "vegetable boa-constrictor" is a queer representative of the genus Cucumis, which is grown in India for ornamental purposes, the vines being trained over trellises and verandahs. The fruit of this green vine is, both in shape and color, the exact counterpart of the snake from which it takes its name.

DOCTOR DESPAIRED

Anæmia is just the doctor's name for bloodlessness. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure anæmia as food cures hunger. They cured Mrs. Thomas J. McGann, of 17 Lincoln Place, Plainfield, N. J., who says:

"In the spring of 1903 I did my usual house cleaning and soon afterward I began to have the most terrible headaches. My heart would beat so irregularly that it was painful and there came a morning when I could not get up. My doctor said I had anæmia and he was surprised that I had continued to live in the condition I was in. I was confined to my bed for nearly two months, the doctor coming every day for the first few weeks, but I did not improve to amount to anything. Altogether I was sick for nearly two years. I was as weak as a rag, had headaches, irregular heart beats, loss of appetite, cramps in the limbs and was unable to get a good night's sleep. My legs and feet were so swollen that I feared they would burst.

"Before very long after I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I felt a change for the better. I have taken about twelve boxes and although I was as near the grave as could be, I now feel as if I had a new lease of life. I have no more headaches, the heart beats regularly, my cheeks are pink and I feel ten years younger. I feel that I have been cured very cheaply and I have recommended the pills to lots of my friends."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

A GOOD SALE.

System That Brought Unexpected Returns.

A well known public accountant was talking about good and bad "Business systems." During his discourse he told this story of a system used in one of the nearby summer resorts, says the Philadelphia Ledger:

"One day a man came into this store and bought some silk and told the clerk to charge it. The clark forgot to ask whom it was to be charged to, and when the purchaser went out he asked his proprietor what to do about it. The proprietor, not wanting to lose the money, the bill amounting to $10, told the salesman to charge it to each person who had an account there. 'Those who didn't buy it will kick and he who did will no doubt pay for it,' he said.

"A month later the proprietor asked the bookkeeper:

"'Did you find out who got that silk about a month ago?'

"'No, sir, I did not,' was the reply, 'but seven different customers have paid for it.'"

THE WAY OUT.

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build her up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost I finally got to the High School, but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria.

"My food did not agree with me, I grew thin and despondent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines.

"This wretched condition continued until I was twenty-five, when I became interested in the letters of those who had cases like mine and who were being cured by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I had little faith, but procured a box and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger.

"I had a new feeling of peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease—of course using Grape-Nuts every day. It is now four years since I began to use Grape-Nuts, I am the mistress of a happy home and the old weakness has never returned." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason." wealth of the United States. If we would stop for a moment to consider the importance, then, of the insurance question in its relation to our business affairs and to life itself, I think we will all agree that there is need for the greatest care and watchfulness upon the part of state officials that every public interest along this line be safeguarded and protected.

The state of Minnesota is to be congratulated over what it has accomplished in the field of insurance during the past two years. Before my inauguration, my attention was called to the uncertain and unsettled conditions of one of the great life insurance companies doing a business throughout the entire western country, with its central organization and home office in this state. It was shown me that by reckless extravagance and a total disregard of the interests of the policy holders, the persons in control of the organization and the management of its affairs were unworthy of the confidence of the people. I therefore appreciated the fact that the problem was one requiring great ability, conservative judgment, and unquestioned integrity, and it is a pleasure now to feel and know that the man selected for the position of insurance commissioner of Minnesota was not only equal to that occasion, but has become a leader in the insurance reform which is agitating the entire country.

I do not propose to discuss the various and specific acts of the department of insurance further than to say that through the efforts of the insurance commissioner, Thomas D. O'Brien, the company referred to was stopped in its mad course toward bankruptcy, placed on a sound conservative business basis, and the assets preserved to the thousands of people who had invested in it their savings. Through the efforts of the state, the company has been reorganized and a set of honest and efficient directors and officers installed; the former officials, recreant to their trust, have been indicted and in part convicted; the interests of the policy holders have been protected; the company itself preserved and strengthened, and Minnesota saved the shame of a financial scandal.

The department in like manner has supervised the business of other insurance companies whose home offices are located within the state, and unsafe and unsound companies either have been directed toward safer methods and put upon a safe business foundation, or have been required to suspend their charters. It is safe to say, and doubtless will not be questioned, that there never has been that general care and efficient supervision, that thorough-going investigation and at the same time constructive superintendence, of insurance affairs within the state of Minnesota, as during the past two years.

Nor have the efforts of the administration been confined to the insurance situation within our own state. By reason of its activity, energy and intelligent management, Minnesota has become a pioneer in the movement for insurance reforms within the nation, and to such an extent that the governor of Minnesota and the insurance commissioner appointed by him were approved and commended by Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, in a message to congress upon the insurance question, in which due credit was given for our interest and work along this line.

Such a large proportion of the insurance in force in Minnesota is written by companies organized in other jurisdictions, that it has been necessary for the insurance department to extend its activities beyond the boundaries of the state. When the scandals disclosed in New York in the early portion of 1905 made the policy holders of the large New York companies solicitous as to the solvency of those companies, the Minnesota department, in conjunction with four other state departments, entered upon an examination of the affairs of the New York Life Insurance company. That examination occupied many months and established the entire solvency of the company, so that it was felt that the policyholders could await with entire serenity the result of the movement to secure a general reform and uniform laws upon this important subject. Under my direction, the insurance commissioner of this state proceeded to Washington and requested President Roosevelt to inaugurate such a movement and he promptly instructed the superintendent of insurance for the district of Columbia to co-operate with us. The result was a representative gathering at Chicago on February 1 last, in which thirty-two states of the Union were fully represented.

The good effect of this conference cannot be overestimated. It first strengthened the advocates of reform then contending in the legislature of the state of New York. Through a committee of fifteen, which I, as chairman of the conference, appointed, uniform bills adopted by all the states generally along the lines of the bills proposed by the Armstrong committee in New York, have been prepared and at a recent meeting of that committee held in the city of St. Paul, it appeared that the committee had persistently and intelligently continued the work inaugurated at the conference in Chicago. I have therefore no hesitation in saying that in the work of insurance reform so much needed throughout the United States, Minnesota has played a conspicuous and effective part.

In harmony with the recommendations which I made to the last legislature, this department has been completely reorganized. The insurance commissioner was placed upon a salary basis exclusively, and the working force of the department was increased that its efficiency might be augmented. The result has been an immense gain in dollars and cents to the state. The net revenue in 1904 to the state of Minnesota from fees was $18,800.39. In 1905, during a portion of which the new law was in force, the net revenue to the state from fees was $22,265.55. This year, during all of which the present law will be in force, the net revenue will exceed $35,000. This, of course, is exclusive of taxes, which this year amounted to $237,785.29.

In this department there has been an honest administration of law and those in charge of it have endeavored conscientiously to safeguard the interests of the public and give an honest and economical administration of the affairs of the office.

No language of mine would be sufficient to properly impress the people with the gravity of the insurance situation in our country. For half a century or more the people paying life insurance on the theory that they were protecting the interests of those dependent upon them and to secure a competence in their declining years, have, with a blindness of faith almost sublime, reposed confidence in their trustees and year after year have poured their earnings into the coffers of the great life insurance concerns of the country, until these organizations are among the most gigantic and powerful in the land. This is an age of centralization of power and the American people are beginning to realize that the fruits of their toil for many years past have gone into the control of a few people, enabling them to build up a commercial and financial empire over which they have absolute and undisputed control. The New York Life, the Mutual Life, and the Equitable Insurance companies of New York possess assets today of a billion and a half of dollars, and these three gigantic institutions are in the absolute control of three individuals, Messrs. Ryan, Morgan and Rogers. In their control of the assets of these companies, they have at their command wealth and power not possessed by the Federal government. It is within their power to build up or destroy any commercial, transportation, or industrial enterprise. Cities and communities are at the mercy of these three potentates. No monarch of the old world has the power which these gentlemen have taken unto themselves and if they see fit to use it to the disadvantage of the people, the misery which might follow would be untold.

A great movement has sprung up in this country, looking toward the dethronement of these three individuals in the possession of capital which does not belong to them and the restoration of the same to the people to whom this wealth belongs. The power possessed by these people is a menace to the institution of liberty, and if they are not dethroned in the great movement now being undertaken by patriotic and public-spirited citizens, I hesitate to predict the result. It has been my good fortune to contribute something to this movement and I have been associated with public-spirited men throughout the country in an effort to give the policy-holders of two of these companies the possession of their property. They will have that opportunity on the 18th day of next November and if they fail to avail themselves of it at that time, the time may never come again and they may then have passed to these potentates forever the power to control the money which belongs to the people.

I do not claim any particular distinction or credit for my co-operation in this matter. It was the duty of any public-spirited citizen, and especially the duty of an official representative of the people. There is no disposition on the part of the International Policyholders' committee or any man connected with it to impair the solvency of any insurance organization. The discussion of a proposition along that line is absolutely absurd. No man desires to disturb a prosperous business enterprise when conducted along legitimate channels, but in my judgment it would be better far that these companies cease to exist and the assets of the companies be distributed to the owners of the organization, than that these two or three men be perpetuated in the power which they now possess. I see a ray of hope in the awakening of the American people to a realization of the great danger which confronts them, and it becomes every man, whether a candidate for office or otherwise, to make an intelligent and close study of this situation, with a view to a better understanding of the problem and with the desire of giving himself to this patriotic service, that the condition in our country may be made better than it is today.

Dairy and Food Department.

No discussion of the history and record of this administration would be complete without reference to the splendid work done by the dairy and food department under the able management and direction of Edward K. Slater, dairy and food commissioner. Perhaps never in the history of the state has the department done so much for the development and promotion of the dairy interests of the state; and no previous administration has made such wonderful progress along the lines of pure food regulation and the enforcement of pure food laws. The policy of this department has undergone a wonderful change; formerly it was the policy to simply prosecute and punish offenders. While these prosecutions reach the innocent retail dealer, a citizen of Minnesota, it entirely failed to reach the manufacturer outside the state, who was the real culprit. Under the present policy this has been changed, and by securing the co-operation of the local and generally innocent dealer in manufactured articles which are adulterated, coupled with the greatest possible public exposure of the character of such articles, it has been possible to exclude impure and adulterated food to an extent hitherto unknown, and has afforded the manufacturers of our state protection in the manufacture of pure canned foods. Where real guilt has been discovered it has been earnestly prosecuted, but the great work of the department has been in the campaign of education and co-operation, and by this policy of co-operation has won the earnest good will and co-operation of the Minnesota Retail Grocers' Association and the business men allied thereto. Consumers have been interested in the requirements of the pure food laws and general interest has been aroused. Bulletins have been issued by which the people might know the difference between good and deleterious foods. The box car merchant, an Arab institution, which was for so many years a flagrant violator of our pure food laws in this state, has been driven from within our borders, and the few of these who remain engaged in this business are compelled to handle the same grade of good foods which are sold in the legitimate establishments of this state.

It has not been the aim of this department to drive out honest competition in any form, but it has been the policy to compel all dealers, great and small, to handle only such goods as come under the provisions of our pure food statute. Persecution of small milk peddlers has not been the aim of this administration. The purpose has been rather to attack the mighty and strong, the great centralized plants which supply thousands upon thousands of homes, and has compelled in every instance the supplying of pure milk and pure cream to the families of the large cities as well as the small cities of our state. In short, the record of this administration during the past two years has been a great stride in the matter of progress along the lines of pure food regulation.

The work along dairy lines has been exceptional and the success has been so signal that the commissioner has been invited to accept a federal position at a largely advanced salary; which, however, was declined, that he might complete the reforms inaugurated by him in Minnesota.

Board of Equalization.

The subject of taxation is one of most vital interest and of great importance to the people. Our present system, and the system in vogue in our state from the beginning until now, has been very unsatisfactory. A large portion of the property which is properly the subject of taxation has escaped this duty entirely. In my message to the legislature I recommended the enactment of a law providing for a constitutional amendment, giving greater latitude to the legislature in the regulation of our tax system. The legislature has passed such a law and the people of Minnesota will be afforded at the next election an opportunity to vote upon this measure. I wish to take this opportunity, and all other opportunities which may come to me during this contest, to urge upon every citizen the necessity and the duty of giving this measure his unqualified endorsement, support and vote. I have no criticism to make on those who have been entrusted with the administration of law along this line in the past, but I desire to state that the members of the state board of equalization appointed by me are entitled to much credit for the work accomplished by them.

Public service corporations, and corporations generally, which have hitherto borne a small proportion of taxes for sustaining the state and municipal governments, have had their valuations very materially increased. More than two million dollars was added to the assessed valuation of the Twin City Rapid Transit company alone; this increase being more than twenty-five per cent of the maximum amount of their assessment in the past. Gas companies, electric light companies, and other corporations were treated in the same manner. The board of equalization had but one desire, and that was to see that the taxes were equalized so far as possible.

For the past two years the iron mining property, located on the iron ranges of St. Louis county, and largely controlled by the United States Steel corporation, have been assessed at practically $38,000,000. I have had conferences with the officers of that company and demanded from them that their assessment by the board of equalization of their own county be fixed at not less than $60,000,000, an increase of over sixty per cent, and pursuant to that conference the county board of equalization of St. Louis county increased the assessed valuation of this property from the former $38,000,000 to $60,000,000. It is possible that the state board of equalization will add to this amount.

By these increases and others of a like nature, the revenues of the state have been increased more than $100,000 per annum.

I am not here to say that the corporate interests of the state have been taxed or assessed sufficiently. Much improvement, however, has been made during the past two years in this connection, and with the latitude afforded the next legislature by the proposed constitutional amendment, which ought to and I believe will pass, it will be possible in the future to make far greater progress in securing an equal distribution of the burdens of taxation.

Board of Grain Appeals.

The farmer of Minnesota is directly concerned in the state inspection and weighing of grain. The laws for this purpose are as complete and as advanced as in any other state in the Union. Formerly the entire system of grain inspection was subordinate to the office of governor. Since the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners became elective, they are not directly responsible to the chief executive for the performance of their duty. One section of this department, however, is still appointive by the governor, this body being the board of grain appeals for Minneapolis and Duluth.

Four years ago the Republican campaign committee made a report of the work of the board appointed under the administration of the governor then in office. They proved by figures which cannot be contradicted that a raise of grade was made in 2778 cars, and that thereby they saved to the farmers of the state of Minnesota almost $80,000, or about $28.80 per car. I am not going to question the figures published by that committee. Comparisons are not always odious. During the recent crop year ending August 1, 1906, the board of appeals appointed by me has raised the grade of 4772 reinspected cars of grain. If the figures published at that time were correct, and applied to the changes made by the present board of appeals, the saving to the farmers by the present board of appeals would be $137,400, or more than $50,000 in excess of the amount laudably boasted by the committee at that time.

The present board of appeals at Duluth and Minneapolis reinspected over 18,000 cars of grain as against 11,000 cars by their predecessors. This increase of over fifty per cent in the number of appeals to the state board is signal testimony, to the increased confidence of the grain producing and grain shipping public in the justice and ability of the present board. If the state system of grain appeals is of any value to the growers of grain, they certainly must find some satisfaction in the splendid work accomplished by this board.

State Binding Twine Plant.

Another matter in which the farmers of Minnesota have a keen and vital interest is the manufacture of binding twine at the state prison. For many years the state has maintained a manufacturing plant at this institution for the manufacture of this important commodity. Believing that the farmer of Minnesota should have his twine at the lowest possible price, and believing that the state prison plant has done much to reduce the price of this product to the grain growers of Minnesota, I was and am convinced that practically all the convict labor which could possibly be devoted to this enterprise be directed to the state manufacture of twine.

I have urged upon the board of control the extension of the prison twine plant, and am proud to say that as a result of this effort, supported cordially by the board and by Henry Wolfer, warden of the state prison, the capacity of this plant has been increased two millions of pounds per annum.

I am also in favor of a modification of the present law which will permit the sale of the excess product in the open market of the world, that the plant may be protected from annihilation by the cordage trust.

Prison labor should not come in competition with the free labor of the state. Instead of that, the labor of the prison should be so far as possible devoted to the manufacture of goods which would not compete with the product of the legitimate business institutions of our state. Our present contract system is open to a great deal of criticism, and I have done what little I could to bring about a change in this direction, with the hope that the results will be to the best interest of the taxpayer and to the laboring people of Minnesota.

Drainage, Forestry and Good Roads.

As a member of the state drainage commission it has been my desire that every dollar appropriated by the legislature for the drainage of swamp lands should be honestly devoted to this purpose. The drainage board, in my judgment, has acted wisely and well in pursuing the policy that state officials had no right to spend money appropriated by the state for the improvement of private property, and we have insisted at all times that every dollar given into our hands for this purpose by the state legislature should be used for the improvement of state property. I am satisfied that the legislature should make more liberal appropriations in the future than they have in the past. The state of Minnesota has upwards of 2,000,000 acres of swamp lands in the northern part of the state, and good business policy demands that these lands be improved that they might be open for settlement as early as possible. During the past year a topographical survey has been made of the lands owned by the state of Minnesota. A complete and comprehensive report will be made by the drainage commission through its engineer at the next session of the legislature, and I am of the opinion that the state of Minnesota is proceeding along the proper lines. This, however, is a matter for legislative consideration and legislative action, and I am certain that whatever policy is outlined by the legislature looking toward the development of these resources of the state will be carried out in both letter and spirit by the state officers appointed for this purpose.

Drainage, forestry, and good roads are three sister lines of state development, which go hand-in-hand. The state has made marked progress by legislative and administrative action along each of these lines during the past ten years, and has received in this work the hearty and effective co-operation of the respective counties and towns, as well as of public-spirited individuals and interested corporations. The important work of development for which the people of Minnesota have created and maintained the state drainage board, the state forestry commission, and the state highway commission, has the hearty co-operative support of every section and class, every industrial and political interest in the state, and there is every assurance that the work so well and auspiciously begun will be pushed with even greater vigor in the future in step with the growing public interest therein.

The allied causes of drainage, forestry and good roads have been and are especially effective in the development of the newer counties of the northern section of the state. How swift and substantial has been the recent development of this northern section is shown by the statistics of the recent state census of 1905. The net population increase of the twenty-seven northerly counties during the brief five years period, 1900 to 1905, is given by the superintendent of the state census as no less than 97,720 people; and the population gains of this great and fertile northern domain, through which four railroads are now building, promise to be even greater during the next five years.

The Public Schools.

The marked educational growth of Minnesota finds statistical expression in a public school enrollment of nearly 450,000 pupils in attendance at upwards of 8,000 school houses. Our State University is one of the four greatest in America. The common school buildings alone represent an aggregate value of $20,000,000. The permanent school fund approximates $18,000,000; and the annual outlay of Minnesota for public education today exceeds $10,000,000.

During the campaign of 1904 I stated on every occasion upon which I addressed the people of Minnesota, that I believed the educational department of our state should be divorced so far as possible from party politics, and that if I were elected I should do everything within my power to bring about this condition. It is a well known fact that the educational system of Minnesota leads in progressive methods and efficiency that of every other state in the Union, and that along this line as well as many others, Minnesota stands first in the sisterhood of states.

Upon an investigation of the affairs of this department, as administered by Superintendent J. W. Olson, I became convinced that the department as it stood at that time was accomplishing great results, and that positive harm would ensue if any change was made. Departing from the usual custom of appointing political friends to office, I have for two years maintained this department in tact as I found it upon my entrance to official position; and so well am I satisfied that this has been for the best interests of the state that I take occasion at this time to renew the pledge I made two years ago. The proper education of our youth is a sacred trust, and I am entirely convinced of the wisdom of the policy pursued in this regard.

State Institutions.

Thousands of the good women of Minnesota have taken a deep interest in the welfare of the unfortunate girls who have been committed to our state training school. There has been much discussion in the public prints of the segregation of the sexes at this institution. Realizing the importance of this as a domestic problem, I took occasion during the past summer to visit several of the great institutions devoted to the reformation and training of girls in the eastern states, and my study and observation lead me to the conclusion that the segregation of the sexes is absolutely necessary to the highest possible development of such institutions, and that the school for girls should be removed to some other section of the city in which the training school is now located.

Labor Department.

The labor department of Minnesota under the direction of Commissioner W. H. Williams, has applied patriotic energy to the regulation of the child labor evil; and by reason of the state's activity in this connection, hundreds of children illegally employed have been put back into schools by instructions of the department, and in all cases the employers have been compelled to comply with the law. A free employment bureau was established in the city of Minneapolis under authority of an act of the legislature, and it is a matter of pleasure to know that because of energy displayed by this department, ten thousand laboring men and women have been afforded employment, realizing a saving to them of more than $20,000 by this service, and this has been accomplished without an increase of appropriation or even of office force.

Board of Control.

Believing that the public business of the state ought to be open to public scrutiny, I recommended a change in the rules of conduct of the public business by the board of control, and by that change, which has been adopted by the present board, provided that all public bids for the construction of public buildings should be made public. I know of no reason why there should be any secrecy in the transaction of any public business, and if I am reelected, I shall make special effort in the direction of having all public business open to the inspection of the people who pay the taxes for the government of the state.

Public Examiner.

The administration of P. M. Kerst, as public examiner and superintendent of banks, has been characterized by marked efficiency. From February 1, 1905, to date, there has been recovered from railroad corporations $21,441.85 of unpaid taxes, and from express companies and telephone companies over $13,000 more, making a total of $34,711.43. In addition there is now pending against these corporations further charges aggregating upwards of $100,000 awaiting the decision of the supreme court.

Through the examination of county officers and institutions, the department has recovered and paid into the county treasuries for the current fiscal year ending August 31 alone, the sum of $13,803.00, this sum being in the shape of official shortages, excessive fees, and illegal disbursements, collected from 122 county officials, and does not include claims aggregating about $5,000 awaiting the action of the courts against a former treasurer of Itasca county. In Beltrami county the investigations of the department have resulted in the removal by myself from office of two county commissioners and the resignation of a county attorney, against whom charges were preferred.

Upon my recommendation the legislature has provided for the examination of city accounts in Minneapolis by this department. As a result of their examination, among other important items, we have found that there is due the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis upwards of $40,000 from the Twin City Rapid Transit company for uncollected license taxes called for by the company's franchise, and awaiting the action of the respective city governments for their collection.

During past campaigns it has been the custom of opposing party managers to predict dire financial disasters as a result of Democratic administration. The examination of the banks of this state by this department reveals the fact that the state has experienced its greatest financial prosperity during the last two years. In the number of state banks, savings banks and trust companies subject to state examination, the increase has been from 345 in July, 1904, to 448 in July, 1906. The total deposits have increased in round numbers from $65,000,000 two years ago to $88,000,000 in July of this year, an increase of $23,000,000 or 38 per cent. This is the greatest growth in volume and percentage of deposits in the history of Minnesota, and is, I believe, an answer to the vociferous argument of the opposition in the past, and is also an answer, I trust, to the theory that Minnesota is not a prosperous and well developed state.

During the present administration under the examination made by this department, there has not been a failure of a single bank subject to superintendence, and no depositor in the state has lost a single dollar.

In Conclusion.

This is not a national campaign, and avoiding reference to national questions, I have confined myself to a discussion of the things which are of immediate concern to our own people and a brief summary of the history of my administration of the affairs of this state during my incumbency in the office of governor.

Permit me at this point to depart for a moment from the discussion of state affairs to pay a tribute and express a debt of gratitude. It would scarcely add to my reputation for intelligence if I claimed my election two years ago as a partisan victory. I recognized then and still recognize the vote of confidence given me by so many thousands of Republicans who voted as they did solely because they believed in so doing they were acting for the best interests of the state. Nor have they claimed any reward from me or made any demand upon me except that I give to the people of the state the best service of which I was capable. The realization of this fact has been a constant source of inspiration to me in the performance of public duty.

In conclusion let me renew the suggestion that the past two years has seen an honest administration of public affairs.

There has been no waste of public funds.

Timber stealing has been stopped, and state timber today is safe from the encroachments and plunder of those who would deprive the state from its property without legal compensation.

These several departments subordinate to the chief executive have given most efficient service, and I might add that the executive departments controlled by Republican office holders have been the most efficient in the history of the state.

We come before you asking a renewal of your confidence. I make bold to say that the confidence reposed in us has not been abused, and that there has been no humiliation to the state of Minnesota because of Democratic administration.

It is important that the state of Minnesota shall have the best administration of law which can possibly come to it. We invite honest criticism and honest comparison, and believe that if this is done, the people of Minnesota will endorse our official conduct; and if I shall again be chosen to discharge the duties of governor of this state, I promise that same obedience to duty which I have endeavored to yield in the past.

As a citizen and public officer of Minnesota, I am proud of the achievements and the progress made by our state. It is one of the great empire states of the Union. First in agriculture; first in the field of dairying; first in mining of iron ore, and first in its educational system. It is, also, I believe, at the head of all the states in the character of its citizenship. We have two millions of patriotic, law-abiding people. They are entitled to the best and highest form of government, and entitled to every opportunity to enjoy the blessings of free government and the propriety necessary thereto, and are also entitled to all the favors and privileges which the law-making power of this state has given to them. It has been my desire to safeguard, so far as I might, every possible interest which will promote the general welfare of the people.

I thank you for the indulgent patience with which you have listened to me, and submit my cause to the unbiased judgment of the voters of the state. To their decision I shall gracefully yield.

No Mortgage on Gov. Johnson.

In speaking of whether political conditions have changed in Minnesota in the past two years, the old reliable and conservative Mankato Review says:

"But have conditions changed? The question can be asked in all seriousness for the charge is made by those who are familiar with the tactics employed to secure Mr. Cole's nomination at the Duluth convention that it was dictated by the big lumber interests of the state. Even before and since the convention are corroborative of this report and where there is much smoke there must be some fire. How much better off will the people of Minnesota be with a man in the governor's chair who would represent the lumber barons than they would have been two years ago with the merger representative elected? This is a question for the voter to consider. To use the words of the Dispatch, 'the governorship of Minnesota is no place for a mortgaged man,' and there is no mortgage on Governor Johnson."

No "Normal Majority."

Crookston Times (Rep.): There has been a good deal of reckless talking by Republican editors about the normal Republican majority and the dominating party in Minnesota, etc. When it comes to the governorship there is no dominating party, no normal majority. How many of our glibly praising editors, for instance, know that Dave Clough, ten years ago, got 10,000 more votes than any other man who ever run for governor of Minnesota? How many of them know that Van Sant at the height of his merger popularity, got only 3,000 more than when he was comparatively unknown? How many of them know that John Lind, Democrat, got within 3,000 of as many votes as any Republican who ever ran for governor of Minnesota? It is the unexpected that always happens with the governorship in Minnesota.

Mr. Cole is Handicapped.

Annandale Advocate (Rep.): Governor Johnson was re-nominated by the Democratic convention, held at Minneapolis on Tuesday. He has made a most excellent governor and despite the fact that he received many votes in revenge instead of admiration will make a strong run this time. Mr. Cole, the Republican nominee, is handicapped by a following who threw down Jacob Jacobson in the interest of corporations, when it became evident that they would defeat him at the polls. So we might call this a "handicap campaign" and we can only guess how it will wind up.

Comparisons are Odious.

The Minneapolis Journal pretends to be surprised because Governor Johnson did not make what it pleased to term a stronger acceptance speech. Let's see, what did Candidate Cole say at Duluth when he was nominated? An observing people can not remember. The Journal man should freshen their memories a bit.—Fairmont Sentinel.

Governor Expresses Debt of Gratitude to Independent Voter and Invites Continued Co-operation of Friends of Good Government.

Red Wing, September 19.—Governor John A. Johnson opened his campaign for re-election at the Sheldon Memorial auditorium here tonight. The governor was greeted by an immense audience and spoke for an hour and a half. His address, which is the keynote speech of the campaign, was almost wholly a review of his administration and of state departments of state government under his control. Observance of the law was the dominant theme, and the Governor showed conclusively that his administration has fulfilled every pledge made for him two years ago. His address was punctuated by enthusiastic applause and was concluded amid an ovation never before accorded a candidate for office in this Republican stronghold.

Governor Johnson's speech in full follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Two years ago the people of Minnesota, departing from their usual custom, chose a representative of the minority party as governor of this commonwealth. It was my fortune to have been named by the Democracy as their candidate for chief executive, and their choice was duly ratified by the people of the state at the polls. The close of my official term now being near at hand, I come again before the people asking the indorsement of a re-election at their hands.

The time has arrived, therefore, when it is fitting I render an account of my stewardship. The people who elected me have a right to know whether or not I have been worthy of the confidence reposed in me; whether I have fulfilled my pledges to them and have been loyal to their interests; whether I have been diligent, competent and efficient in the performance of my official duties; in short, whether I have kept the faith and fought the good fight of and for our commonwealth.

Enforcement of Law.

Two years ago I made the promise that, if I was elected governor, I should abide by and enforce the laws of our state as they stood upon the statute books, for the protection of the rights and the heritage of the people. I maintained that, if the laws were wrong, they should be corrected; but that no public officer in the discharge of his official duty had a right to assume that his position or authority was greater than the law of the state; that the constitution was more than a convenience; that it was a sacred instrument, and that in its declarations the people and their servants must abide.

There are a number of achievements of which I and my associates are justly proud; but standing higher and above all these, we are proud of this fact, that we have abided by the laws of the state; that we have enforced the laws as we found them upon the statute books, and that, to the best of our knowledge and belief, there has been on our part no violation of the spirit or letter of a single law upon the statute books of our state.

Government is divided into three separate and distinct parts: the executive, the legislative and the judicial. It is the province of the legislature to lay down the rule of conduct for the government of the people. It is the province and the function of the judiciary to interpret these laws. It is the province and the duty of the executive to administer the laws without fear or favor, and impartially in their application to every interest. In my administration of the duties of this high office I have been prompted by the single motive of administering the laws for the government of all the people as laid down by the representatives of the people. I have maintained for myself and for those subordinate to me, that if it was incumbent upon the people, the soverigns of our commonwealth, to yield the strictest obedience to law, it was in a fuller sense the absolute duty of their public servants to yield obedience to the law and loyalty to the public interest.

Fulfillment of Pledges.

Two years ago the Democratic party, in its platform and in the acceptance speeches of its candidates, made certain promises to the people. It is a matter of special pride with me on this occasion that every promise has been kept; that not a pledge has been broken; that we have kept faith with the people who reposed their confidence in us. Conditions change from time to time, and issues change from time to time. There are some things eternal. First and foremost among these is the right of a people to govern themselves; and secondly, the duty of the public officer to be true to the trust reposed in him by the people. Firm in the belief that the promises of the past have been kept, and realizing full well the cares and responsibilities of the future should I again be called to this high position, I now pledge to devote myself and every energy of which I am possessed to the honest fulfillment of duty along the same lines of conduct which have ruled and governed me during the past two years.

Public Timber Trepass.

The history of the last contest, with all its aroused public sentiment and sensational acrimony, has not been forgotten. It will be remembered that one of the chief issues of that campaign was the charge that the law had been violated by public servants in the settlement of the state's just claims against men who, without the authority of law and without due legal compensation, had taken the state's lands, timber and mineral rights, thereby robbing the school children of Minnesota of a sacred and valuable heritage. It was charged in an official state document after official investigation, that a system had come into vouge by which it was cheaper to steal the timber from the public domain and settle for it with state officials, than it was to buy the timber at legal public sale. I promised at that time that if I were elected governor of Minnesota I would see that suits were instituted by the state to recover, so far as it was physically and legally possible, every dollar which belonged to the school fund of this state.

One of my first official actions was to demand a complete transcript of all the charges thus preferred, and to submit the matter to the attorney general. In an official communication, dated Feb. 1, 1905, I made inquiry as to the status of all suits pending, and asked the attorney general whether his department was fully equipped to institute suits for the recovery of the money properly belonging to the state, and give immediate and continuous attention to the prosecution of those cases; that I considered it greatly important that their prosecution be immediate an continuous, and volunteered to co-operate to the fullest extent for the recovery of all moneys of which the state had been wrongfully deprived. The attorney general advised me that the current business of his office was sufficient to keep his office force industriously busy and that for the preparation and trial of the cases referred to additional counsel would be required.

On February 9, 1905, this correspondence, together with a complete transcript of the public examiner's report, was submitted to the legislature in a special message urging that body to make proper provisions that there might be an enforcement of the law, and that the attorney general might have every facility for the prosecution of these cases. Pursuant to this recommendation, the legislature made provisions for the appointment of additional counsel by the attorney general, that suits might be instituted for the recovery of all the moneys belonging to the state. Suits were instituted. The defendants demurred to the constitutionality of the law providing for penalties for timber trespasses and illegal settlements. Necessarily the litigation has been somewhat tedious, but the supreme court of our state has finally handed down an opinion in which the constitutionality of the law is upheld, and there remains no doubt whatever of the successful termination and conclusion of these suits against a number of individuals.

A partial list of the defendants and amounts claimed by the state, to the aggregate of over $400,000, was recently published by the state press. In addition to these cases, many referred to in the public examiner's report have been settled by the state timber board according to law; and others have been settled subject to ratification by the next legislature. Thousands of dollars have come into the state treasury through this course. These, however, are cases of timber trespass which occurred under previous administrations. I wish to emphasize the fact that timber trespass cases involving thousands of dollars have been settled by the state timber board during the past two years, and not a single case has been settled except in accordance with the law and for the entire double or treble damages legally due the state. I desire to be perfectly fair and honest in my statement of this question and at this time wish to accord to the attorney general for his able legal services, as well as to my other associates on the state timber board, the credit to which they are entitled in their vigorous and loyal co-operation in every movement looking toward the recovery of the value of the timber which belonged to the people of Minnesota.

From the testimony of patriotic and reliable witnesses I became convinced that millions of feet of timber had been improperly cut from the public domains of Minnesota. In my message to the legislature, on page 9, I recommended that a sufficient appropriation be made as a contingent fund to be placed at the disposal of the timber board in order that they, from time to time, might make a physical examination of the timber lands of the state, and also to enable them to appoint cruisers and employ agents for the state to see that the state's property was properly preserved, and that losses to the state might be recovered. Under the direction of the timber board, these examinations have been made. The revelations already made are startling. In a single county in this state, on less than half a dozen sections, there are discrepancies of millions of feet of timber. I am convinced that proper steps in the future and the proper prosecution along the lines of investigation, which led to the recovery of hundreds of thousands and perhaps millions of dollars, which belong to the school children of the state of Minnesota. The timber board has been active in the prosecution of this enterprise, and I promise you that if I am re-elected to the office of governor it shall be my constant purpose to reclaim every dollar which has been unlawfully taken from our public domain.

Trespass Cases Pending.

Cases now pending for settlement will bring a half million dollars into the state treasury. I am satisfied that more than this amount will be realized to the state of Minnesota after the proper investigations have been completed. Under these conditions and circumstances, it was perfectly natural, in my judgment, that a defendant in one of these suits for an amount of more than $50,000 should have boasted openly of the amount of money he spent in an attempt to control the Republican convention at Duluth, and that at a celebrated banquet given to the defeated candidates for governor at that convention, he claimed the credit of a great victory and announced to them that if they had done business with him, one of them might have been nominee for governor in that convention.

In the keynote speech of my opponent in this campaign, there is little or no discussion of the timber question in Minnesota. It is a question in which every citizen of the state has a keen and vital interest. It comes as close to the interests of the common people of this state as any other question. The least that any man who is a candidate for public position in this state could have said on this great question was that, if he was elected to any public position, he would see to it that the public interest was conserved, that trespass cases pending should be prosecuted to the end, and that timber trespassers would be made at all times to pay the full penalty of the law. I promise you that if I am re-elected I shall pursue the same course in this matter in the future that I have in the past, and try always to convince the people engaged in lumber business on state lands that honesty is as essential in their business dealings with the state as in other departments of commercial life, and that it is not cheaper to steal the timber than to buy it at legal sale from the state of Minnesota.

The Railway Question.

No question before the public mind today is of wider general interest than that of railroad regulation and control and the establishment of rates of transportation which will be just and fair to all the people of the country. It is a question which has engrossed the attention of the president of the United States and the Federal congress for more than a year, and it is still a living issue before the American people.

Minnesota, in railroad transportation, has become one of the leading states of the Union. The railway mileage of Minnesota is nearly that of New England and the railway investment officially accredited to Minnesota is nearly four-fifths that accredited to New England. But, in volume of annual net earnings from operation, the amount officially reported for Minnesota is today greater by several million dollars than the amount officially reported for the entire group of New England states. This fact indicates that Minnesota, with its $35,000,000 of annual net railway earnings, is an exceedingly profitable field for railway enterprise.

In my message to the legislature at the time of my inauguration, I took the position that there was an unjust discrimination of rates within our state. I still hold to that opinion. I pointed out on that occasion that the rates of transportation were from twenty-five to forty per cent higher in Minnesota than in our neighboring state of Iowa and declared that any system which permitted this condition imposed a serious injustice upon the people of our own state. I took the position then that the failure of reform was not due to want of legal authority, but because of the lack of aggressive administration. The board of railroad and warehouse commissioners are today, and for several years past have been, clothed with the legal authority to establish and enforce just and reasonable rates.

In my inaugural message I recommended the appointment of a joint legislative committee to make a full and complete investigation of the prevailing rates of transportation within this state, with a view of establishing a maximum tariff rate of transportation, which should be based upon a reasonable rate of interest and profit on the investment and which would be fair to all parts of the state and absolutely prohibit unjust discrimination between localities and individuals.

Pursuant to this recommendation the legislature enacted chapter 350 of the Laws of Minnesota for 1905, the same being a joint resolution relating to transportation rates, the essential features being covered by the following section:

"Whereas, The railroad and warehouse commission is the proper tribunal and the only body properly equipped to undertake the work of securing an equitable, intelligent and fair readjustment of the rate situation in this state.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved By the Senate, the House concurring: We recognize the prevailing conditions which seem to warrant the existence of a distributing and a distance tariff, and believe that in maintaining a distributing tariff it is possible to provide not only several points in the state which are valuable to the people as sources of supply, but afford a home market for our products. We believe, however, the two tariffs should show but little difference in the rate for a given mileage—in no case should the difference exceed five per cent.

"Resolved further, The railroad and warehouse commission is hereby directed to undertake the work of securing a readjustment of the existing freight rates in this state, which will give a more uniform scale of percentages which each class rate shall bear to the first class, the readjustment to secure a substantial reduction in the existing merchandise rates."

This resolution was duly approved by me on April 14, 1905, and under this direction of the legislature, the state board of railroad and warehouse commissioners has undertaken an appraisment of the valuation of the railroad properties of the state and also begun a hearing and inquiry into the merchandise rates, with the view to a reduction of these rates, and on the 8th day of September, 1906, the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners entered an order making a general and material reduction of merchandise rates in the state of Minnesota.

During the pendency of this inquiry certain admissions were made by railroad companies with reference to the reduction of rates of transportation on grain, and they voluntarily proposed a reduction, provided that the hearing on the question of merchandise rates be suspended. Upon my suggestion and as a result of a conference with me, the board of railway and warehouse commissioners issued an order citing the railway companies of Minnesota to appear before them and show cause why there should not be a general reduction of commodity rates, including grain, coal and other staples. As a result of this order the railroads of Minnesota requested permission to make an immediate reduction upon the rates for the transportation of grain. A hearing for the proposed reduction of commodity rates is still pending.

The above quoted resolution properly states that the railroad and warehouse commission is the proper body to undertake the regulation of the rates of transportation, but it is the privilege of the Governor to interest himself at all times in that which concerns the general welfare of the people. Being thoroughly impressed with the importance of this great question, and believing that the people of Minnesota have unjustly suffered in the past and that a radical change in this situation should be realized, I have upon every possible occasion given utterance to my sentiments along this line. My position on this question certainly cannot be misunderstood. Before a body of railway magnates in the city of Chicago, on Feb. 18, 1905, I stated that railroad discrimination, the rebate, private car and other evils had brought into existence gigantic trusts and monopolies which levied upon American industries and produced a volume of tolls sufficient to yield from twenty to forty per cent dividends upon a collossal and fictitious capitalization, and that these monopolies of natural resources had been permitted, under the cloak of law, until the public conscience was in revolt.

I am a believer in govermental regulation and control, because that principle has been upheld by the supreme court of our land and because of the right of the American people to control the highways of the country and protect their own interests. Before the Municipal League meeting in the city of St. Paul, on January 10, 1906, I presented a table of statistics carefully compiled, showing that the rates of transportation in our own state were altogether out of harmony in proportion to those of surrounding states and declared that in my judgment the positive power of the railroad and warehouse commission should be exercised to fix and determine rates of transportation and place the burden of proof in showing unfairness of such rates upon the power which now controls and establishes these rates.

Before the State Editorial society and before the Convention of United Commercial Travellers at Albert Lea, I positively declared for a flat two-cent passenger fare and for the abolition of passes, and because of the agitation which followed these two public declarations, the Republican party of this state, for the first time in its history, has incorporated a plank in its platform declaring for these propositions.

For months I employed at the expense of the state an expert statistician to compile and tabulate schedules of the rates of transportation on all of the lines of the railroad from the principal terminals to all of the stations within the state of Minnesota, and caused him to compare these rates with the established schedule rates of transportation obtaining in the neighboring state of Iowa. This table shows that the rates of transportation in our state are from twenty to forty per cent higher than in a state across the border, which is our natural competitor.

It needs no long academic discussion to state any public man's position on this important question. The railroads of the state are entitled to a fair and reasonable rate of interest on their investment, and not a single dollar beyond that. The producer of the state is just as essential, aye, more essential to the building up, growth and development of Minnesota, than is the common carrier of the state. Both are essential to the public welfare and there can be no true development of Northern Minnesota or Southern Minnesota so long as there is a discrimination in favor of one locality at the expense of another, and there can be no true development of the whole state with a discrimination in favor of territory north or south of us and so long as the common carriers of the state exact a rate of transportation out of harmony with the conditions which justly should prevail.

During my entire administration I have upon every possible occasion done that which I could consistently and righteously do to bring about a reduction of the rates of transportation, because I believed they should be reduced, and if re-elected to the high office of governor I shall devote every possible energy to the establishment of a true and just condition between the people and the common carries of the state.

The history of railroad regulation and rate reform is a part of the history of this administration and cannot be denied. The progress which has been made has been the direct result of the suggestions and co-operation of the chief executive of this state and it is a singular thing that the only two great general reductions which have come to the people of Minnesota during the past half century came under the administrations of Governor John Lind and myself. In a discussion of this question my opponent, if correctly reported, has proposed as a solution of the railway rate question the adoption of new laws. This is the familiar plan proposed to postpone and evade action. With the adoption of the reciprocal demurrage bill, killed by the last legislature, the laws of Minnesota are both efficient and sufficient. An investigation has convinced me that they are undoubtedly the most advanced laws upon the subject of the regulation of railroad rates to be found upon the statute books of any state in the Union, and that the remedy lies in aggressive administration of the law by public officials charged with this responsibility.

Insurance.

One of the great questions that has forced itself upon the public mind during the past two years is that of insurance and the proper regulation and supervision of insurance companies in the control of the vast amounts of money committed to their care for the protection and the benefit of the people. Human mind is scarcely capable of grasping the mathematics or the total figures involved in insurance finance. A glimpse of the situation is gathered from the fact, that in the single state of Minnesota 385,512 policies are carried upon the lives of men and women who have some one dependent upon them for support; that, with the lowest possible estimate, at least three persons are represented and interested in every policy carried; and that over a million people in this state are directly concerned in the life insurance business. The amount of premiums paid annually by these insured people is over $10,000,000 and the total amount of insurance carried by these policy holders is more than half a billion dollars.

It is not alone in the matter of life insurance that the people of Minnesota are interested. They carry today more than a billion dollars in fire insurance and pay annually more than seven millions of dollars in premiums for the fire insurance which they maintain. In addition to this, the people bearing casualty insurance pay upwards of a million and a half of dollars annually in premiums.

A further glimpse of the situation from a national standpoint may be seen in the statement, that the assets of the so-called old line insurance companies alone represent more than two and one-half per cent of the estimated

SALIENT SENTENCES FROM GOV. JOHNSON'S KEYNOTE SPEECH

It is a singular thing that the only two great general reductions which have come to the people of Minnesota during the past half century came under the administrations of Gov. John Lind and myself.

The governor of Minnesota and the insurance commissioner appointed by him were approved and commended by Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, in a message to congress on the insurance question, in which due credit was given for our interest and work for insurance reforms.

Never in the history of the state has the dairy and food department done so much for the development and promotion of the dairy interests, and no previous administration has made such wonderful progress along the lines of pure food regulation and the enforcement of pure food laws.

The box-car merchant—an Arab institution—which was for so many years a flagrant violator of our pure food laws, has been driven from the borders of our state.

I was a terrible sufferer from pelvic weakness and had headache continuously. I was not able to do my housework for myself and husband.

I wrote you and described my condition as nearly as possible. You recommended Peruna. I took four bottles of it and was completely cured. I think Peruna a wonderful medicine and have recommended it to my friends with the very best of results.

Very few of the great multitude of women who have been relieved of some pelvic disease or weakness by Peruna ever consent to give a testimonial to be read by the public.

There are, however, a few courageous, self-sacrificing women who will for the sake of their suffering sisters allow their cures to be published.

FADS IN SLEEVES.

DESIGNED TO GIVE DISTINCTION TO FALL GOWNS.

Hints by Which the Home Dressmaker May Profit—Some Novelties Among Those Described.

The best way for the home dressmaker to give distinction to her fall gowns is by the design of her sleeves.

Below will be found four of the best types to choose from. They may also be combined effectively. Fashion will run in two extremes—the tight mousquetaire sleeve, trimmed with buttons and braid, and the very full sleeve, with the material set in box plaits and tied over the elbow with a huge knot of ribbon, says the New York World.

One of the features of the autumn styles is the profusion of buttons, some of which are very beautiful. One novelty is the cloth or satin button, hand painted in harmonizing shades. The girl who is clever with her paint brush can do this for herself and make an absolutely novel decoration for sleeve and bodice.

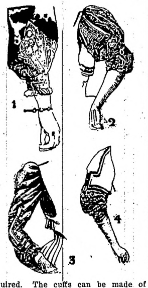
1. Long full sleeve with deep cavalier cuffs, to be worn with morning gowns, house dresses, separate silk waist, or where long sleeves are required. The cuffs can be made of odds and ends of lace carefully joined or of one good piece of embroidery.



2. All over lace undersleeve with cape of the same material as the dress. The sleeve forms one large puff and a smaller one coming well over the elbow.

3. Three-quarter length sleeve for coats and jackets, the fulness at the shoulder and tight-fitting round the lower part of the arm. The sleeve itself is of cloth with stitched band around the cuff and running up the side of the sleeve. The bands are edged with tiny buttons. The cuff is finished with ruffles of finely plaited cambric.

4. A cloth and lace sleeve reaching a little below the elbow; the upper part being of cloth, of a rather novel shape, edged around and joined with black velvet. The under sleeve is of rows of lace thickly ruffled with a cuff of the velvet to match the upper part.

JACKETS FOR THE AUTUMN.

Attractive Models of Plainer Types Being Shown.

Some attractive models of the plainer types of suits show jackets which are made of contrasting material to the skirt, the only thing that connects the two being collars and cuffs of the skirt material added to the coat.

With one particularly stunning walking suit even that connection was missing, yet jacket and skirt very evidently belonged together.

The skirt was of striped material, so deftly made that it seemed like a plain cloth until you got close to it. And the way it was cut brought the stripes together directly in front into sharp diagonal lines. The jacket was of plain cloth, exactly the same color as the striped stuff, and the velvet collar repeated the color note—only more insistently—of the stripe itself.

For such coats the regulation coat sleeve is used almost entirely, usually with some sort of a trim little cuff.

In length, most of them are about hip length, and they are fitted closely—either double or single breasted—or are semi-fitting. The loose coat, for such purposes, is very seldom seen, except upon the very young girl.

A great many cassimere effects are seen in the new cloths—rich dark Scotch colorings and irregular weaves. Some of these have self-toned raised figures; others are in dull rich colors.

New in Combinations.

Something quite new in the way of a combination of material is a not too heavy nor wide, but bright, ivory silk braid applied to a silk muslin exactly matching in tone. A very original gown was formed of this combination and very quaintly fashioned in a somewhat severe yet picturesque style as a quaint little coat over a short-waisted skirt. The muslin was plain, but ivory silken dots were embroidered between the strappings of braid upon ivory net, and even the big picturesque hat had a net veil with narrow silk braid border. The belt was formed of a very clever interlacing of the braid as a high corselet.

VARIED STYLES OF COIFFURE.

Spanish Combs and Aigrettes Are Much in Favor.

Of importance to the feminine world is the cult of the coiffure as taught by leading hairdressers. Not only is the hair structure bigger then ever, with its curls, braids and padded puffs, but Spanish combs and aigrettes from six to eight inches in height must set off the evening head.

Then with the high square topped combs the lace mantilla of the Castilian beauty also threatens, coiffeurs showing already the correct method of wearing them, and invariably getting in a word of the new queen of Spain, whose adoption of Spanish customs has revived interest in these charming trifles.

The best of the imported combs are enchantingly lovely, filigree silver, chased gold and plain shell forming them. The very much ornamented ones, those with blinding paste gems are spurious imitations, jewelers affirm, but these are shown, too, by the coiffeur.

The arrangement of the mantilla, which may be of white or black lace, with the high comb is simple. One end is dropped slightly over the top of the comb, and the rest of the filmy fabric, which is in square shawl form, gracefully veils the shoulders and back of the head.

The picturesque becomingness of this headdress is too taking to be entirely ignored, and it will doubtless be adopted by a few women of independent spirit.

The ways of putting the Spanish comb into the coiffure are various. With the mantilla it is placed squarely at the top of the head back of the crown, or slightly to one side. With other high coiffures, for a high dressing of the hair is necessary with the tall comb, it may be placed at the back of the coiffure, the square top barely showing at the front.

Conservative people will choose those only moderately high, and true Spanish influences are shown in the square tops, which, whether high or low, the majority of the newest combs display.

As to the methods by which the modish coiffure of the moment is achieved, they all tend to give the head a very enlarged appearance.

Frames made of wire the size of a single hair, covered to suit the wearer's glory, and still further disguised with a covering of hair net, are employed to raise the front pompadour, the side face puffs, and sometimes to bank the final chignon.

The waved locks which cover these at the front are artificially glossed to dazzling brightness, and wherever there is a vacant space in the back waves the hairdresser tucks in a soft, short curl, which it attached to a brown, blonde or black hairpin.

The false pieces used to eke out hair sufficient for these towering structures are without number. Few heads can be dressed without a switch of some degree of thickness for the back, and sometimes the entire front, whose lightly falling puff and side undulations look so divinely natural, are made entirely by one of the wired pieces called transformations.

For the rest, to accomplish the look of the low-growing hair at the temples—which makes the Frenchwoman's head the most enchanting in the world—there are delicate pieces on invisible net, with long ends to comb over the side hair, which are deliberately glued to the temples.

SUIT FOR THE AUTUMN.

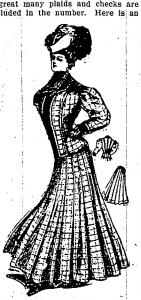
Materials for the early autumn are being shown, and it is noticeable that a great many plaids and checks are included in the number. Here is an attractive yet simple little suit that is made of novelty suiting in shades of tan and brown, with collar, cuffs and vest of brown velvet, edged with a handling of palest tan colored broadcloth, this same broadcloth being used as strapping for the coat.



Remarkable Fancy Work.

Some rather remarkable fancy work was recently exhibited in London, the work of a woman living in Cape Town, South Africa. Several screens and some exquisite panels were decorated with flowers and figures made entirely of fish scales. The scales were threaded on silver wire and dyed just the right tints, and the results were quite wonderful in both color and general effect.

UNCLE SAM "EASY."

OLD GENTLEMAN NEVER A HARD TASKMASTER.

According to Industrious "Knockers" of the Sunrise Club, His Employes Have a Hard Time Keeping Amused.

"Say, this government gets a lot for its money, sometimes," said one of the charter members of the Sunrise club, when the organization was handing around a few of its customary knocks in the dairy lunch room the other night. "Now, I don't like getting up in the morning a little bit," said the qualified hammer thrower, "but I work for my living, so I have to. But the other morning I was coming in with a bunch of fellow-commuters on an early car, and the fellow that was sitting next me had a day-before-yesterday accumulation of stubble under his chin.

"'Scored on you this time, Willie,' said I, with an air of virtue, for I was pretty nearly clean myself. I took my shave the night before and could sleep late next morning on the strength of it, but he gave me the superior smile and said: 'Oh, that's all right. I never shave at home. I'll take these off after I get down to the office.'

"He works for the government, of course.

"Then he went on to throw it into me. 'You see,' he said, 'there are very few of the fellows in my office who shave at home. I keep my razors and shaving tackle down at the office, and the government always has plenty of hot water and porcelain wash stands on hand. I shave down there. It's a great scheme and helps to pass the time.'"

The Sunrise club went into executive session behind several sections of iced cantaloupe and then one of the members took up the sledge.

"I don't know how it is now," said he, "but I used to work for the government myself, and I know we had then a regular sewing circle in the office. All the bachelor members and a good many who were not kept button boxes and spools of thread down at the office and in the course of the afternoon we used to get quite a lot of domestic work done. Our wives, those of us who were so furnished, said it was a good thing and it took a lot of work off their hands and saved a lot of clerks from working themselves out of a job."

"Oh, well, there are different ways of doing it, but the man who can put in all of his eight hours working for the government is a wonder," said the amiable member of the club who is always trying to make excuses for human nature. "Take my case. I dropped in to see one of the cabinet officers this week, and there was his secretary framed up with a large, choice collection of summer literature on his desk and in the midst of it an 'Advanced Treatise on Bridge.' Now bridge is a mighty intricate game. There are more ways of losing money on it than in tackling bacarat or a crooked faro bank. Some philanthropic author had gone to work and printed his experience, which must have cost him a lot of money, and put it all up in neat, attractive form where the hard working clerk could accumulate it all for 75 cents, no headaches and no remorse.

"It would be a hard-hearted man who would grudge an industrious government employe a few minutes to fortify himself by studying such an important volume. It might mean more saving to him than all the government time he puts in reading during office hours. This eight-hour day which really looks like eight and a half by the clock and which seems like nine and three-quarters when you are putting it in polishing the seat of a government arm chair, requires some ingenuity to kill. I think the man who evolved the idea of studying bridge rules in the office is a benefactor to his kind.

"Of course they cannot lay out golf courses in the office, though some of the departments down in the Mall might do it, and the employes have to do something. But if you want to really earn a competency, you ought to invent a variation of the 'Pigs in Clover' puzzle and sell it around among the clerks this weather, or perhaps a better scheme still would be to write out a course of ten easy lessons on how to build a perpetual motion machine and then supply the directions and materials on the installment plan so the clerks could experiment at their desks It would be a great scheme as a money-maker and an inestimable boon to the wearied government employes at the same time"

Privileged Employes.

In the building of one of the largest corporations in Washington there is a sign which can be taken in two ways. It reads:

"Notice! Employes only are allowed to loaf in and around this building."

Several persons who have had occasion to read the sign commented on the wording. They desired to know whether the company is willing to pay its own men for loafing around the building, to the exclusion of "unpaid" loafers.

Tired, Nervous Mothers

Make Unhappy Homes—Their Condition Irritates Both Husband and Children—How Thousands of Mothers Have Been Saved From Nervous Prostration and Made Strong and Well.

Mrs. Chester Curry
Mrs. Chas. F. Brown

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly.

The ills of women act like a firebrand upon the nerves, consequently nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," sleeplessness, and nervous irritability of women arise from some derangement of the female organism.

Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one minute you laugh, and the next minute you feel like crying?

Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound; pain in the abdominal region, and between the shoulders; bearing-down pains; nervous dyspepsia and almost continually cross and snappy?

If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition, and you are threatened with nervous prostration.

Proof is monumental that nothing in the world is better for nervous prostration than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; thousands and thousands of women can testify to this fact.

Mrs. Chester Curry, Leader of the Ladies' Symphony Orchestra, 42 Saratoga Street, East Boston, Mass., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For eight years I was troubled with extreme nervousness and hysteria, brought on by irregularities. I could neither enjoy life nor sleep nights; I was very irritable, nervous and despondent.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and proved to be the only remedy that helped me. I have daily improved in health until I am now strong and well, and all nervousness has disappeared."

Mrs. Charles F. Brown, Vice-President of the Mothers' Club, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I dragged through nine years of miserable existence, worn out with pain and nervousness, until it seemed as though I should fly. I then noticed a statement of a woman troubled as I was, and the wonderful results she derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I decided to try it. I did so, and at the end of three months I was a different woman. My nervousness was all gone, I was no longer irritable, and my husband fell in love with me all over again."

Women should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine that holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of female ills, and take no substitute.

Free Advice to Women.

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write to her for advice. Mrs. Pinkham's vast experience with female troubles enables her to advise you wisely, and she will charge you nothing for her advice.

Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—A Woman Best Understands a Woman's Ills.

Rubbing it In.

DO YOU KNOW

That man proposed but woman divorces.

That woman has no monopoly on curiosity.

That a stitch in time may save embarassment.

That lots of people have faint ideas—and that's all.

That no one ever realizes how little he does know.

That the pumpkincholy days have come. Bring on your pie!

That is vastly easier to pose as an optimist than it is to be one.

That some men act as tho they believed everything they said.

That it is better to marry for money than never to have any money at all.

That ressectability is often accounted for by a fear of being found out.

That a tombstone record alone will not gain you admission at the pearly gates.

That brevity may be the soul of wit but no one sees any fun in being short.

That interest looks bigger when you are paying it than when you are receiving it.

That the wind blew the dust in both the good and the bad men's eyes alike Monday.

That the chance to pick up an unearned dollar will lead most people from the s. and n. path.

That lots of women quarrel with their husbands just as tho it was a part of their domestic duties.

That if a man wants to turn your head he gets your ear; if it is a woman, she tries to catch your eye.

That it is astonishing how many foolish things our friends will do considering the advice we give them.

That John D. Rockefeller says newspaper men are a charming class personally. We are discoverd at last.

That a news item in an exchange says, "B. Freeze visited J. Freeze one day last week." There must have been a coolness between them.

That we deny the authorship of this one: some women carry their money so near their shoes that it would be a scandal for a pickpocket to steal it.

That some wise guy says that tho there is much criticism of the peek-a-boo waists and open-work stockings, yet it must be admitted that the stockings have their supporters.

That a Thief River Falls man was in St. Paul; "Is there much life in the small town you came from," he was asked; "well I guess" was his reply, "you ought to see the gatherings in our cemetery on Sunday."

That "some of these bathing dresses" said Marshall P. Wilder, "make me think of Princess Clementine, the mother of the prince of Bulgaria. The princess said one day to her sailor brother, the Duc De Joinville. 'Bring me on your next trip to the South Seas a complete costume of the king's wife.' 'I will gladly' the duke answered. He returned from the South Seas a year later and handed to his sister a string of glass beads. "These are very pretty" said the princess, 'but you promised me a complete costume.' 'This is a complete costume,' said the duke. 'I've never seen them wear any other.'

That when the sap is in the pumpkin and the geese start to migrate, we hear the gentle carol of the county candidate. Oh, he's a jolly fellow and full of vain conceits, and sees a bosom friend in every man he meets. He asks about your family, your horses and your hogs, and he shows a friendly interest in the children and the dogs. Oh, he's a jovial gentleman, as gamesome as a lamb, as blithesome as a lark, happy as a clam. His prospects are the brightest, his chances are sure; he spends his moey freely and helps the needy poor. He goes to church on Sunday and his pious traits appear: but when it's nesessary he will set them up the beer. Oh he's a buoyant sanguine duck, the jocund candidate; he starts out in the morning and stays out till it's late. His patient wife unlocks the door and says, "You need not lie to me, your leg's been pulled again."—Ex.

SKIN RAW AND FEVERISH-ITCHING INTENSE

Eczema is a tormenting, stubborn disease caused by an acid humor in the blood coming in contact with the skin and producing redness, inflammation and almost intolerable itching. An inactive state of the system and sluggish condition of the eliminative members leaves the waste and refuse matter of the body to collect and sour instead of passing them off through nature's channels of bodily waste. The blood in its efforts to purge the system of all foreign matter absorbs this acid and throws it off through the pores and glands of the skin. The acrid humor seems to ooze out and set the skin on fire, the straw colored, sticky fluid drying and forming crusts, and the itching is intense. When these pustules are scratched off the skin is left raw and feverish and often a solid sore is formed and kept up by the constant escape of acids from the blood. Local applications of salves, powders, lotions etc. are desirable and should be used because they allay the itching and give the sufferer temporary comfort, but are in no sense curative, because they cannot reach the seat of the trouble, which is in the blood.

S.S.S.

PURELY VEGETABLE.

S. S. S. goes down into the blood, cleanses the circulation of all acids and humors, builds up the thin, sour blood and by removing every vestige of the cause cures Eczema permanently. The irritating eruptions disappear, the itching and burning cease, and the acid-fired skin, being fed by a fresh, cooling stream of blood, becomes soft and smooth again. S. S. S. is made of healing, purifying roots, herbs and barks that will not damage any part of the system. Book on skin diseases and any medical advice free.

That marrying a wealthy widow is not the worst of get-rich quick games.

That it pays to be beautiful but it is not every woman who has the face to say so.

That there is little credit in being good if you have never suffered temptation.

That the Courier has a subscriber, who, every time he gets drunk, pays a year's subscription. He is now paid up to 1915. Of course a great family journal like the Courier wouldn't be guilty of encouraging the drinking habit but, verily, it seems almost a pity that several hundred other subscribers, who owe from two to eight years, don't drink themselves into a reminder that it will not injure their reputations to pay a subscription debt as promptly as any other.

That it is hard to understand why so many women have so little regard for their personal appearance around the house in the morning and, sadly enough, the picture is anything but attractive; hair half combed and straggly; a kimona, always sloppy looking and often dirty; shoes unfastened; a sagging skirt without a belt and there are other things. But we presume its their business and are willing to let it pass with the comment, from that kind of a woman good Lord deliver us.

THEY HAVE IT CINCHED

Thief River Falls People Have Elected County Ticket.

They held a public meeting at Thief River Falls Tuesday evening to discuss matters of vital importance to the city and at the conclusion they had already elected a set of county officials which was agreeable to their wishes. Anyhow if not elected it amounted to that. For did the good people of Thief River Falls get together? That was in itself sufficient to convince all the rest of the county that people outside of Thief River Falls had best get off the grass. Then after meeting in solemn conclave they decided that, without regard to political parties, they would support no one for county office unless he pledged his support to Thief River Falls in the county seat contest.

If a man wants to be elected to office in Red Lake county he must first get down on his knees and swear allegiance to Thief River Falls. It is Thief River Falls against all the rest of the county. Perhaps the rest of the county will bow to the dictation of Thief River Falls—perhaps not.

It arouses energy, developes and stimulates nervous life, arouses the courage of the youth. It makes you young again. That's what Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will do 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. A. L. Reichert.

JOHN LIND TO SPEAK IN RED LAKE FALLS

One of Democracy's Brainiest Men to Deliver Address the Last of the Month.

Governor Johnson Will Go to Thief River Falls—Neither Date Yet Announced.

Hon. John Lind will be in Red Lake Falls some time during the month of October for a political address from a democratic standpoint.

Mr. Lind is a recognized leader in the democratic ranks, one af the prominent men of the state and has a reputation as a public speaker that will attract a large audience. The date of his appearauce has not been announced out it will be some time in the latter part of the month.

It was hoped to get Gov. Johnson for an address but, in the itinerary that has been arranged in the best wisdom of the state central committee, it could not be done without the loss of considerable time. However he will make one speech in the county during the campaign. The schedule of dates he will follow will take him to Thief River Falls at some during the latter part of the month.

In this way both Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls will be assured of one big event apiece during the campaign.

WANTED MONEY QUICKLY

Railroad Would Have it Before Work Was Done.

Warren Sheaf: Those who have had experience in collecting claims for damages, or money of any kind from a railroad company will appreciate the history of a little tiff that occured between county auditor Malberg and one of those soulless individuals a short time ago.

The county commissioners had received one of the many viewers reports that have been made this summer, this one on a ditch which was to cross a railroad in the north part of the county. The ditch made it necessary that the railroad company put in a bridge, but not until the ditch was dug. For this bridge the viewers allowed the company damages in the amount of $640.

As soon as the railroad company found that the viewers report had been accepted by the board they wrote Auditor Malberg to please remit. The suddenness of the request for money made the auditor catch his breath, but he got his wind in a minute and replied that he could not remit except upon bills properly audited and allowed by the county board.

It seems that the railroad company wanted the money pretty badly for they came right back with the information that they were used to getting the money for these things as soon as the viewers' report was accepted. Auditor Malberg replied that he was not disputing their word but anyhow his county wasn't doing business that way. When the county board had allowed their bill, he would be pleased to remit, until then, they must contain themselves in patience.

By return mail came the request that the auditor call the board in extra session and have the 640 plunks o.k.'d and forwarded to headquarters. Then Malberg got mad and lost all respect for the mighty corporation and wrote them a real sassy letter. He just told them that this county would not send them that money till the ditch was dug, the bridge built, and surveyor's report accepted. That any other method was contrary to law, and that what other countier did in like instances was immaterial to him. Since then there has been no request for that money.

That a corporation has no conscience and no sense of justice can be known from the fact that they wanted this little $640 from the county before entitled to it; and in many cases they get it too; while if an ordinary individual sustains damages to his person or his property by or torough a corporation he has to fight for his rights every inch of the way and wait foa his money till his hair grow gray. The man who can find a way to make the railroad companies as prompt in matters of payment as they are in collecting is entitled to the gratitude of the law-abiding populace.

ST. HILAIRE MILL WILL CLOSE DOWN

Plant Has Outlived Its Usefulness to Owners and Will be Moved Elsewhere.

Rumored that Thief River Falls Lumber Mill Will Not Last Much Longer.

The saw mill as St. Hilaire is to be closed and it is given out that this month will see its finish. There have been rumors in former years of the mill's removal but now it is a reality.

A crew of men is engaged in bringing from Red Lake the last of the company's logs. When they arrive and are sawed the mill will be closed for all time, the buildings torn down and the machinery moved to other places. The reasons given by the company are that the plant is inaccessable as a shipping point and that lumber can be be manufactured more profitably than the one at St. Hilaire.

THIEF RIVER FALLS MILL

There are also rumors that the mill at Thief River Falls will be removed. Such rumors have been persistent and while a removal may not come this year, they are rapidly approaching the beginning of the end. At any rate it is only a question of time until Thief River Falls goes the way of the towns that have had sawmills and have seen them dismantled and moved away. It will be a hard blow to both St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls when it comes and it will take them years to recover, if they ever do.

HEARING ON NOVEMBER 30

County Seat Case to Be Tried in Supreme Court.

The state supreme court convened for its fall session in St. Paul on Tuesday and the case entitled L. A. Kaufer against James E. Ford as county auditor of Red Lake county, but which is better known as the county seat contest case, was set for trial for November 30. A decision may come as a Christmas present acceptable to either Red Lake Falls or Thief River Falls.

The action will be remembered as arising upon an injunction against the county auditor restraining him from calling a special election on the removal of the county seat. Judge Watts dissolved the injunction and his order was appealed from by Red Lake Falls.

F. A. Grady was in St. Paul representing the Red Lake Falls' side of the case on the call of the calendar.

FOOT BALL ON SATURDAY

Crookston Highs Will Come to Red Lake Falls.

Superintendent Chamberlain has made arrangements for a foot ball game to be played in this city next Saturday afternoon between the local high school team and Crookston.

The Red Lake Falls boys have had some excellent training and practice and can be looked to to give a good account of themselves. Nearly all of them are young and light of weight but under the new rules, in force this year, lightness and speed play an important part.

The team lined up Saturday against a picked up eleven composed of ex-graduates and gave the old timers a merry surprise losing by the small score of 11 to 6.

MARKET DAY WAS DISTINCT SUCCESS

Brings Many Farmers to Town Some of Whom Came from Long Distances.

Prizes Offered Go Begging in Rush for Bargains at the Different Stores.

The second attempt at holding a market day in Red Lake Falls was even more of a conspicuous success than the former. During the afternoon the city was well filled with farmers, many coming from considerable distances. They all seemed well satisfied with the many bargains that could be had at all the stores and if they were pleased, the merchants of the city surely were for at some of the stores the crowds were so great as to preclude the possibility of all being waited on.

A peculiar thing in connection with the day was the failure of those coming to town to call for prizes that were to be had for the asking. There was not a prize offered but was of real value and it is hard to account for their not being called for unless those coming to town do not stop to study the list. The prizes called for were as follows:

Farmer coming longest distance, J. C. Strande, 40 miles, pair Walk-over shoes, Berthon & Armstrong.

TAFT AT LAST DECIDES UPON INTERVENTION

PREPARATIONS FOR THE IMMEDIATE LANDING OF TROOPS ARE PUSHED.

PALMA REMAINS OBDURATE

REFUSAL TO WITHDRAW RESIGNATION PRECIPITATES INTERVENTION.

Havana, Sept. 30.—American intervention in Cuba will be an accomplished fact to-day.

President Roosevelt's commissioners, although clothed with the fullest authority from him to take such action whenever it became obvious that the effort of securing peace by harmonizing the warring Cubans would be unsuccessful, have patiently withheld their hands from this setting aside Cuban sovereignty until the last hope had disappeared. This state of hopelessness was reached at a late hour last night, when the great majority of all three of the political parties refused to attend the session of congress called to act upon the resignations of all the members of the government of Cuba.

Intervention Is Welcomed.

As has been expected, there has been considerable rabid denunciation of the course pursued by the American commissioners, who, it has been alleged, have acted unfairly toward the government party, but the great mass of the residents of Cuba, Cubans and Spaniards, Americans and all other foreigners, welcome intervention as something they have longed for during the long weeks of disorder and ill feeling.

No sooner was the failure of the adjourned session of congress and the declared intention of the government officers no longer to serve reported to Secretaries Taft and Bacon than the preparations for armed intervention were put into operation.

Marines Are Landed.

A telehone wire had been quietly laid from the American legation to the battleship Louisiana, and as soon as the order was received from Secretary Taft thirty marines were landed and proceeded quickly and quietly to the treasury building, where they went on guard. In the meanwhile Capt. Albert R. Coudon, commander of the naval force; Capt. Seaton Schroeder of the battleship Virginia; Brig. Gen. Funston and Maj. Ladd were in conference with Messrs. Taft and Bacon, completing plans for the guarding of the city and arranging for the occupation. Gen. Rodriguez, commander of all the Cuban forces, is acting in perfect harmony with the American commissioners, and the rural guards can be depended upon absolutely to assist the provisional government in every respect.

Understanding With Rebels.

The commissioners, through the American military attaches, have had satisfactory understandings with the rebels. This evening Maj. Ladd visited Pino Guerra, Loinas del Castillo and other rebel commanders, who tonight ate at La Lisa hotel, just beyond Marianao. These men dominate the rebel forces, and for the present at least there is no anticipation of trouble in that quarter. The proclamation will be issued to-day. It will appoint Secretary Taft provisional military secretary of Cuba. He will immediately assume full control of the government.

A Day of Waiting.

Up to the time congress took a recess, at 5 o'clock, yesterday was a day of waiting. After that hour various probabilities became certainties. By half past 5 President Palma definitely and firmly announced to his political followers that his resignation was absolutely irrevocable. Following this announcement the Moderates held a long consultation at the residence of Minister Dolz, president of the senate, at which it was decided that no Moderate should return to the session after the recess, thus precipitating a condition in which no provisional president could be elected.

Throw Up Their Hands.

This throwing up of their hands would practically give over the control of affairs to the American commissioners.

Up to that point the attitude of the commissioners also had been a waiting one. Secretary Taft himself, who up to the present time has taken the newspaper correspondents into his confidence, said on leaving last evening for dinner that he was then in a position where he could not say anything for publication.

Zayas Boosts Himself.

During the day Secretary Taft heard various kinds of propositions and counter propositions about available candidates for the presidency, including the extraordinary one from Zayas himself, that his own election as a provincial president might result in peace. None of these propositions proved anything like agreeable to all factions, and Secretary Taft, after the exchange of several cablegrams with President Roosevelt also assumed a waiting attitude.

Decide on Forlorn Hope.

It was in a spirit of utter apathy that a joint session of the senate and house received the resignations of the president, the vice president and the members of the cabinet yesterday afternoon. This attitude was due in a great measure to despair that any action on the part of congress could result in making American intervention less probable. After a brief but confused debate congress decided on the final and forlorn hope of an appeal to the president to reconsider his decision to retire from office.

On the motion of Manduley the house took a recess until 9 o'clock to permit the Moderate and the Liberal Nationalists to visit Palma.

Palma Is Immovable.

The latter proceeded forthwith in carriages to the palace, where they were at once received by the president. Palma was much affected by the appearance of practically all his leading allies on such a solemn occasion. He greeted them sorrowfully. After the subject of the errand had been explained President Palma replied dejectedly that it was impossible for him to continue as president of a nation whose people evidently had become out of accord and sympathy with him and his government. Neither could he continue at the head of a government when a portion of the people was disposed to remain in armed rebellion. President Palma voiced his deep regrets, but reiterated his decision was irrevocable.

Several Weep Freely.

Senator Dolz broke the ensuing silence by saying that the Moderates would not press the request, and ended that interview by embracing President Palma. The president and several others wept freely and the delegates grasped President Palma's hand and withdrew.

The night session was called for 9 o'clock, but at 10 o'clock only four members were present. At 10:30 the lights were extinguished and the small crowd present was invited to move on, thus practically terminating the activities of the present government.

ON A WAR BASIS.

Army and Navy Prepared for Any Emergency.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Both the war and navy departments were practically on a war basis yesterday, and last night many of the offices in the department were open and advices from Cuba are anxiously awaited. The cruiser Des Moines was ordered yesterday from Havana to Cienfuegos to assist in protecting property against the insurgents. This was the only naval order of importance. The general board of the navy was in session for several hours. In the war department there were conferences, but few orders of consequence were issued, as the army is practically ready for any emergency, and the hiring of transports is the only detail necessary to complete war preparations.

The departure of President Roosevelt from Oyster Bay for Provincetown caused many officers both in the army and navy to believe that the president does not expect any emergency in Cuba before Monday, when he will arrive in Washington and be in close touch with the situation.

ROBBED IN FIELD OF $1,185.

Farm Hand Lays Down Vest and Thief Goes Through Pockets.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Sept. 30.—Con Davis, a farm hand employed on the farm of Ray Goff, about a mile and a half west of Batavia, while at work in the field was robbed of $1,185. Davis carried the money, which represented the savings of a lifetime, in his inside vest pocket. Becoming warm from work, he removed the vest and laid it on the ground. Shortly afterward he looked at the vest and noticed that it had been disturbed, and on examination discovered the robbery. Sheriff Cremer was at once notified and went to the scene with bloodhounds, but there was no trace of the thief.

AWFUL HAVOC TO PROPERTY AND LIFE BY STORM

LOSS OF LIFE MAY REACH HUNDREDS — PROPERTY LOSS MANY MILLIONS.

MANY CITIES ARE LAID WASTE

MOBILE AND PENSACOLA REPORT GREATEST DAMAGE—PANIC PREVAILS.

SHORES STREWN WITHWRECKS

HUNDREDS OF VESSELS EITHER SUNK OR WRECKED ON THE SHORE.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 30.—Between 75 and 100 lives lost, fully two score vessels driven ashore or wrecked in various parts of the Gulf of Mexico, damage amounting to $4,500,000 in the city of Mobile and to the extent of millions or more at outside points is the record of the storm which swept over Mobile on Wednesday and Wednesday night. No accurate estimate of the number of casualties can be made, and it is doubtful if it will be known for a week or more.

Great apprehension exists regarding the situation at Gulfport and Biloxi, where it is believed that many lives have been lost.

Great Waves Sweep City.

While the storm was at its height in Mobile, the water from the bay was driven in in great force toward the city, the water coming in great waves six feet deep. Two blocks up, in the heart of the city, the flood was driven, filling every basement and store. At Commerce street, the first thoroughfare away from the docks, the water in the stores was five and one-half feet deep. The damage in the city of Mobile proper has been enormous. It has been contended by some that there is not a building in the city which has not been damaged.

Under Martial Law.

The city has been placed under the control of the militia. Nobody is permitted on the streets except newspaper men and persons wearing badges. Much apprehension is felt for the suburban towns, as it is feared they have been obliterated. The chances are that the loss of life on Dauphin island is great. Many fishermen live on Dauphin island and other outlying marshy districts from which no tidings have been received. The suffering in Mobile is severe. The interruption of transportation facilities has shut off supplies, and unless help arrives from the outside world soon great distress will result. Every church in Mobile is damaged.

Shipping Suffers Most.

Mobile's shipping suffered more than anything else. Many of the river boats are now beached or sunken, all complete wrecks The docks and those of private corporations are fearfully wrecked. The revenue cutter Alert has gone down in Mobile river. She was rammed by some unknown vessel and sank immediately. Her crew is believed to have escaped, but nothing has been seen of them.

Numerous sawmills located in the northern and marshy districts have been either washed away by the terrific waves or torn to splinters by the wind.

Much fear is entertained for Fort Morgan, where the government quarantine station is located and many soldiers live.

Awul Terrors of Storm.

Words cannot describe the terrors of the storm. During the hours between 6 p. m. Thursday and noon Friday trees fell and roofs were crushed by hundreds. Through the streets, carried by the terrific wind, was hurled thousands of piecess of slate and tin roofing, cornices, shingles and in fact all kinds of debris. Blinds were torn from their fastenings and windows smashed as though of tissue paper. Many people were seriously injured and cut by the flying slate and tin. The railroads have started wreckers out to clean up and repair tracks, but their task is herculean. The office of the Western Union Telegraph company was six feet under water. Its batteries were flooded with water and it will be some time before business can be resumed. The Postal Telegraph building, while not as low lying, also suffered severely.

All Is Confusion.

There is no way to arrive at a correct estimate of the losses owing to the disordered state of business. All is confusion. Hundreds of bales of cotton floated through the main streets of the city and were carried out to sea.

Towns along the Mobile & Bay Shore road suffered immensely, owing to their exposed condition. No word from the coast towns along the Louisville & Nashville road has reached the city. There is no doubt that many lives have been lost and severe damage experienced both to residence and business property.

Pensacola Is Wrecked.

Pensacola, Sept. 30.—The worst hurricane to visit this city in its history raged here furiously all Thursday night, with a gale still blowing. The city presents a wrecked appearance and the damage is estimated at $5,000,000. The loss of life is heavy among the mariners, but thus far only one body has been recovered. Other bodies are reported along the shore, but have not been recovered.

Makes Rivers of Streets.

Commencing at 7 o'clock Thursday night the wind blew at fifty miles for three hours, then increased to sixty-five miles. From that time until 5 o'clock yesterday morning it remained at about eight and ninety miles an hour. The tides from the bay backed into the city for blocks, destroying homes and making rivers out of streets. When the gale was at its height yesterday morning, men, women and children were running frantically about the streets in darkness, adding to the confusion. The fire started in the Pitt mill, near the business district, and horses of the fire department refused to go out in the weather.

Shore Strewn With Wreckage.

Yesterday afternoon the water rose until the business districts presented an almost indescribable scene. Of the fifty or sixty big steamers and sailing vessels lying in the harbor, only five or six are there now. They have been driven ashore, and along the water front is a mass of wreckage of steamers, towboats, launches and sailing craft of all descriptions. Thirty fishing vessels in port have been destroyed or damaged.

Every house along the water front for a distance of ten miles has been destroyed and the wonder is that the loss of life is not greater.

War Vessels Wrecked.

War vessels at the Pensacola navy yard undergoing repairs were the gunboats Vixen, Machias, Isle de Luzon and Gloucester, besides several smaller craft and the quartermaster's steamer Poe. They were in an exposed position, and it is feared they have been beached.

New Orleans Suffers.

New Orleans, Sept. 30.—The tropical hurricane which struck the gulf coast Wednesday night with a velocity reaching ninety miles an hour spent its force early Thursday morning and Thursday night was plowing its way up through Central Alabama towards the inland. The city was practically isolated from the outside world, all wires being down. All the telegraph companies lost eastern and northern connections.

The last train out on the Louisville & Nashville was Wednesday at 5:30 p. m.

Suffer Great Damage.

Lake Ponchertrain resorts suffered heavily. Milnberg felt the force of the storm and there was some loss and suffering during the early hours of Thursday night. In New Orleans the storm reached its height about 7 a. m., and before noon the gale began to subside. The greatest damage has been from the blowing down of fences, valuable tropical plants and shade trees and unroofing of a number of buildings.

CRADLE HOOD SAVES BABY.

Two Hundred Pounds of Plaster Falls and Fire Breaks Out.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 30.—Only the hood on its cradle saved the two-year-old son of J. J. Gaundroux from death last night, when 200 pounds of plaster fell upon it from the ceiling. The hood broke the fall and the child escaped injury.

At the same moment flames burst out of a nearby closet and enveloped the room in which the baby was sleeping. Its mother in an adjoining room heard the fall of the plaster and the roar of the flames and sprang to the rescue, succeeding in getting the little one out before it had been seriously burned.

FATAL POOL TWO INCHES DEEP.

Miner Is Found Dead in Shallow Water.

Eveleth, Minn., Sept. 30.—Constanzi Fortusnati, twenty-six years old, a miner at the Fayal mine, has been found dead, apparently having drowned in a pool of water not more than two inches deep.

How the man could have met his death in such a shallow pool is a mystery.

United States Sailors See Pope.

Rome, Sept. 30.—The pope yesterday received fifty American sailors from the warships now at Naples. The party, which was conducted to Rome by Chaplain McGinty of the armored cruiser West Virginia, each kissed the pope's hand and received a souvenir medal. When the pope left he was heartily cheered by the visiting Americans.

SUSSMAN MAKES FULL CONFESSION

SAYS MURDER OF WIFE WAS CULMINATION OF AN ALL-NIGHT QUARREL.

SAYS WOMAN DESERVED IT

HAD TAXED HER WITH INFIDELITY, WHICH, HE CLAIMS, SHE COULD NOT DENY.

Minnapolis, Sept. 30.—"I shot her! It was the culmination of a quarrel. We had been quarreling all night, and at last in a frenzy I drew my revolver and sent a bullet through her head.

"As near as I am able to determine, I shot her at 6:30 a. m. Wednesday. She was awake at the time and was sitting on the bed. As the bed was low, she was some distance below me. I stood over her when I fired the shot. She fell over onto the bed and I did not stop to see the result of my shot, but hurried out."

Makes Full Confession.

Henry Sussman, wife murderer, made the above statement in a full confession of his crime to the police and Assistant County Attorney John F. Bernhagen. He admits everything and made a detailed statement showing his movements since last Sunday and up to the time of his arrest.

Continuing, he said:

"I had been drinking considerably and so had she. After registering I went out and bought a bottle of whisky and one of gin. She drank the whisky and I the gin.

Went to La Crosse.

"As soon as I got out of the place I hurried to Hookwith's saloon, 308 Nicollet avenue, and bought a drink. Then I went to the studio of my brother across the street.

"I took lunch at Regan's restaurant and then took the 2:30 train to La Crosse to appear in the United States court. I couldn't find the United States district attorney and returned to the Twin Cities, arriving in St. Paul Thursday morning.

"I stayed in St. Paul all morning and had dinner there. I drank heavily all day. In the evening I came to Minneapolis on an interurban car, and after having some more to drink I finally drifted into the Nashville hotel and asked for a room. It was then after 11 o'clock.'

The Arrest of Sussman.

Sussman was found in a room in the Nashville hotel, 422 Hennepin avenue, at 1:30 o'clock in the morning by Police Captain Reviere and Detectives Lawrence and Lyons.

He had planned to take his life by inhaling gas, but the timely arrival of the officers prevented this.

Sussman was partially revived by the walk to police headquarters, but made no statement until later in the day, when he confessed.

"I was drunk, very drunk, and I did not know what I was doing. I understand that the police found me in the room with all the gas jets turned on full. I suppose that I turned them on myself. I'm not sure.

Says She Deserved It.

"I killed her all right, but she deserved it. She was untrue to me. I had evidence of this, and I taxed her with it. She could not deny it.

"I also wanted her to go with me to La Crosse to help me out as a witness in my behalf, but she merely laughed at me and told that if I had gotten myself into a 'jack pot' I had better get out of it as best I could. This angered me and I did the deed."

Murderer a Boy.

The self-confessed murderer is a mere boy. He told the police that he was nineteen years old last July. He was married, he said, in March, 1905.

After making his confession Sussman leaned back on his bunk and calmly asked for a cigar. It was given to him and he appeared to be contented.

The police say that for so young a man he displays wonderful nerve.

Sussman will be arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of murder in the first degree. This will be a mere formality, as he will undoubtedly waive examination and be held to the grand jury.

Bride 67; Groom 24.

Norway, Mich., Sept. 30.—Marriages in which the bride is nearly three times the age of the groom are exceedingly rare, yet a nuptial event marked by this remarkable discrepancy in ages is reported from Quinnesec. The bride was a Mrs. Day, who confessed to sixty-seven summers, and the groom, Joseph Shea, twenty-four years old. Justice A. E. Robbins of Iron Mountain tied the nuptial knot.

PICK HUGHES AND HEARST

CANDIDATES OF REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRATS FOR GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Expedition marked the second and final session of the Republican state convention. From the time early yesterday morning when it became known that Charles E. Hughes of New York would be nominated for governor by acclamation, the other proceedings practically became formal and were pushed to completion with speed. The selection of the remainder of the ticket and the choice of a new state chairman were accomplished before the convention assembled, and it only remained for the ocnvention to ratify all that had been arranged and to adjourn.

Brevity was an appreciated feature of the nominating speeches, while the principal speech, in which Job Hedges of New York placed in nomination Mr. Hughes for governor, was the most interesting event.

Hearst on First Ballot.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 28.—At a session which began at 7:45 last night and continued until 2:20 this morning the Democratic state convention nominated a state ticket, with William R. Hearst at the head of it. Mr. Hearst already was in the field as the gubernatorial nominee of the Indpendence league, which he was instrumental in organizing.

The Democrats also took from the Independence leage ticket Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler of Duchess for lieutenant governor, and John S. Whalen of Monroe for secretary of state.

Mr. Hearst was nominated with 309 votes, only 220 being necessary for a choice. Congressman William Sulzer received for governor 94 votes, and John A. Dix of Washington received the complimentary vote of 57 delegates, making 460 in all.

The nomination of Mr. Hearst was made in the face of the bitterest opposition ever waged in a Democratic convention in this state.

Jerome Will Bolt.

District Attorney William Travers Jerome of New York is going to bolt the Hearst convention and stump the state for the Republican candidate for governor.

When Mr. Jerome was informed of the nomination of Mr. Hughes he said: "That's good. I'm for him heart and soul.

QUIET AT ATLANTA.

Business Resumed and People Return to Work.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 28.—Perfect quiet prevailed here yesterday. All factories that had shut down reopened and throughout confidence has been restored on every side. The colored and white employes have returned to their regular tasks and normal industrial conditions have been resumed.

By a unanimous vote the city council has revoked the licenses of every saloon in Atlanta until Oct. 1, and until that time the city will be practically under prohibition.

FIRST CREEP IS FATAL.

Child Pulls Lamp Off Table and Is Fatally Burned.

La Porte, Iowa, Sept. 28.—While playing about the floor of the sitting room last evening the eight-month-old child of Mr. and Mrs. George George Smelser crept over to the table, and seizing hold of a tablecloth pulled off the lamp. As the lamp struck the floor it burst and the blazing oil flew over the little one, burning it so badly that it lived only a few hours. A strange thing about the accident was the fact that the child never before had attempted to creep.

SIX HURT ON PENNSYLVANIA.

Bridge Collapses Under Work Car and One Man Will Die.

Philadelphia, Sept. 28.—A bridge over the tracks of the New York division of the Pennsylvania road at Thirty-first street and Columbia avenue collapsed as a heavy work car carrying six men was passing over it. The car fell to the tracks below, and the men were hurt, one of them fatally. The bridge fell a few minutes before an express train from New York was due at the bridge, which is partly hidden by a curve. Traffic was delayed for more than an hour.

FOUR TOWNS DESTROYED.

Effect of the Recent Typhoon In the Philippine Islands.

Manila, Sept. 28.—The Cugayas valley, in the northern part of the island of Luzon, was devastated by a typhoon Sept. 18. Barrias, Gallaran, Anlung and Baggao were totally destroyed and four other towns were badly damaged. Cagayas is the principal tobacco section of the island and the crops were practically destroyed. The loss of life is known to have been slight.

Postoffice Robbed.

Osceola, Wis., Sept. 28.—The safe in the postoffice was burglarized about 3 o'clock yesterday morning. About $20 including some stamps, were stolen. Admittance was gained by getting tools out of a blacksmith shop and which was used to open the rear window.

Hongkong, Sept. 28.—The Chinese subscription for the benefit of sufferers by the recent typhoon has reached the sum of $80,000.

STOLES ADD STYLE TO GOWNS

The latest accessory to smart dress is the stole made of flowers. Hitherto stoles have been seen in fur, crepe de chine and taffeta chiffon, but now the flower stole is all the craze. It is fashioned of silk, muslin, chiffon, or fine silk, and it is very lightly put together in the form of roses, daisies, buttercups, snowdrops or poppies. Between the flowers is an intervening arrangement of lattice work, made of narrow satin ribbon of the same color as the flower. The edge is finished with a fringe of ribbon.

Prepared Figs.

To one pint of figs cut small add one cupful of water, two slices of lemon, a pinch of cinnamon and clove. Let it simmer until the water is absorbed, then take out the lemon. This fig preserve is good with rice, corn starch or sago.

PICK CANDIDATES FOR CONGRESS

Primary Elections Unusually Interesting in Five Districts—Buckman Fails to Land.

Primary elections for congressional candidates and for candidates for county officers were held Tuesday in Minnesota. Interest centered in the congressional nominations. In five of the districts the contests were unusually bitter.

The following are the candidates for congress:

Republican—

First—James A. Tawney, Winona.
Second—J. T. McCleary, Mankato.
Third—C. R. Davis, St. Peter.
Fourth—F. C. Stevens, St. Paul.
Fifth—F. M. Nye, Minneapolis.
Sixth—C. A. Lindbergh, Little Falls.
Seventh—A. J. Volstead, Granite Falls.
Eighth—J. Adam Bede, Pine City.
Ninth — Halvor Steenerson, Crookston.

Democratic—

First—Andrew French, Plainview.
Second—W. S. Hammond, St. James
Third—No candidate
Fourth—Gustave Scholle, St. Paul
Fifth—Frank Larrabee, Minneapolis.
Sixth—M. C. Tifft, Long Prairie.
Seventh, Eighth and Ninth—No candidates.

Tawney in the First, Davis in the Third, Volstead in the Seventh and Steenerson in the Ninth were unopposed.

Congressman C. B. Buckman conceded his defeat for the Republican nomination for congressman for the Sixth district and congratulated C. A. Lindbergh, who lands the nomination by about 1,250.

McCleary is renominated in the Second, but his majority is cut down to 1,200. Bede wins out nicely in the Eighth with a majority of nearly 4,000. Stevens wins out over Rogers by a vote of 9,142 to 3,606 in Ramsey county and about the same proportion in the other two counties. In Minneapolis the count is not completed, but Frank M. Nye has a safe lead. W. H. Eustis and A. R. Hall are running about even, and W. D. Washburn far behind.

Buckman carried only two counties in his district, Cass and Sherburne. Lindbergh carried the other ten counties, with majorities as high as 550, his lead in Meeker county. He also ran well in Wright, Todd and Stearns and wins out by small majorities in the other six counties. There are still a few scattering precincts to be heard from, but they will not change the result materially.

The majorities by counties give Lindbergh a majority of 1,180. Cass county has still a number of precincts to be heard from and some of the other counties a few, but the figures will not vary far from the following:

	Buckman.	Lindbrgh.
Benton	...	65
Cass	282	...

Gutterson's Good Run.

Gutterson Gave McCleary a closer run than many expected and beat the congressman in six of the eleven counties in the district. Blue Earth and Brown were McCleary's salvation. He carried his home county by 850 votes and Brown almost 2 to 1. In the other counties the vote was close, except in Rock, the home of H. J. Miller, who ran against McCleary two years ago. Here he is beaten almost 2 to 1. There are a few scattering precincts to be heard from, but those already in give the congressman a majority of 1,237.

The following table gives the vote by counties, omitting a few missing precincts:

	McCleary.	Gutterson.
Blue Earth	2,274	1,422
Brown	914	485

Easy for Bede.

J. Adam Bede's majority in the Eight district over E. L. Millar of Duluth was large enough to rob the contest of any particular interest after the first few precincts came in and showed which way the wind was blowing. His majority will be in the neighborhood of 4,000.

Bede carried Duluth by 765, carrying Millar's own precinct by one vote and carrying every precinct save eight. The vote in the city was 3,165 to 2,400. In St. Louis county, with thirty precincts to hear from. Bede had 5,047 and Millar 4,189 votes.

In Aitkin county six of forty-two precincts gave Bede 218 and Millar 324. In Anoka seventeen of eighteen precincts gave Bede 1,051 and Millar 302. In Carlton twelve out of twenty-two precincts gave Bede 938 and Millar 301. Eleven precincts in Pine county gave Bede 252 and Millar 225. Two Harbors and one additional precinct give Bede 289 and Millar 301. Cook has not been heard from. Itasca gives Bede 808 to 583. Koochiching in Itasca gives Bede 94 and Millar 89. Kanabec gives Bede a small majority and Lake gives Millar a small margin. Bede carries Milaca by 100 and Princeton by 87.

The majorities in the counties are estimated as follows, being based on nearly complete returns in all except Aitkin, Cook, Itasca and Lake counties:

	Bede.	Millar.
Aitkin	...	100

Stevens Easy Winner.

F. C. Stevens' majority in the Fourth will be close to 7,000. His total vote was about 12,250 and Rogers' vote 5,450. In Washington Stevens ran better than two to one, and in Chisago he was only a little more than 200 ahead. Stevens ran about five to one in Rogers' ward and better than eight to one in his own ward. The unofficial returns show only one precinct that Rogers carried.

The vote by counties, unofficial, is as follows:

	Rogers.	Stevens.
Ramsey	3,427	8,979
Washington	1,003	2,105
Chisago	925	1,150
Totals	5,455	12,234

TOT IN ARMS; DRESS ON FIRE.

Woman Rushes Outdoor for Help and Saves Life.

With her two-year-old baby in her arms and her clothing enveloped in flames, Mrs. R. H. Ackley rushed out of her house at Moorhead, screaming for help. Neighbors quickly responded and with great presence of mind snatched the burning clothing from the woman and took the child out of her arms. The flames were quickly extinguished, but not until Mrs. Ackley was severely burned.

Mrs. Akeley was preparing to clean some clothes and had placed a pan containing water and gasoline on the top of the stove to heat. After the pan had been on the stove awhile Mrs. Ackley lifted the stove lid to replenish the fire. Instantly there was an explosion and the woman's clothing was set on fire. The fire spread to the kitchen, and Mrs. Ackley, snatching up her child, which had been playing about on the floor, fled to the yard.

It is thought she will recover.

POUNDED BY PISTON.

Workman Is Caught in Engine Shafting and Nearly Killed.

Helmer Huseby, working at the Northern Pacific pumping station at Twin Valley, was caught in the shafting of a gasoline engine and nearly pounded to death before he could be released. In passing by the engine his foot slipped and he fell against it, his clothing catching in the shafting and gradually pulling him forward under the blows of the piston. He fought desperately for his life, but it was some little time before his cries brought any one to his assistance. Finally the engine was stopped and the unfortunate man was released. His right arm was broken, two ribs were broken and his head bruised, and it is thought that he sustained internal injuries. He was taken to Fargo for treatment.

CAN'T BUILD DITCH.

Judge Qvale Rules Against Lake Lillian Drain.

Judge Qvale has entered an order at Willmar refusing to establish the proposed Lake Lillian ditch, designated as Judicial Ditch No. 4, the order being filed with the clerk of the court Saturday.

When the petition for the establishment of the ditch came up for final hearing last June, objection was raised on the ground the court had no authority to establish the ditch, because it would lower the level of Lake Lillian, which is a meandered lake, and that the assessments of benefits and damages were not just and equitable. The order filed by Judge Qvale upholds the contention that the court had no authority to establish the drain.

What a relief it was to have the Stensland matter settled so quickly.

We will have an open winter. We will have a long hard winter. Pay your money and take your choice.

It will take a mighty lot of Beveridge to get all the people to agree with the Senator of the bibulous name.

Taft is in Cuba. There are some who don't care if he never comes back. He looks too much like Presidential timber.

A. L. Cole is not the friend of northern Minnesota he would have us believe, Instead of making him governor, he should be relegated to the Walker agency.

In his Minneapolis speech, Senator Beveridge says the people do not want to own the railways. They want to own nothing publicly which they do not have to own in self defense. When, pray, was Senator Beveridge appointed the mouth piece of the people. Also when is the plea of self-defense to be interposed, when we are no longer capable of defending ourselves?

Tariff schedules should be changed in the high tide of our prosperity and not in some period of approaching financial disaster, says Senator Beveridge. That looks fine and dandy even in print, how then must it have sounded to sympathetic listeners when poured forth in the beautiful rounded tones of the far-famed orator. But it is absolutely nothing but the rankest kind of a bluff. Republicans, and probably Senator Beveridge too, have told over and over again that the country was never so prosperous as now. If that is so and the tariff should be changed at such a time, why on earth haven't they changed it? The simple truth is they have no thot of changing it—no thot beyond how to best bluff the people with fine sounding phrases which are merely the decorations of promise's forgotten grave.

Time to Stop It.

There is no man in the state who has done northern Minnesota a greater injury than A. L. Cole. His everlasting harping upon drainage has done this country an almost irreparable injustice. The opinion has gone abroad that Northern Minnesota is a vast swamp and can be of no value whatever until a hostile legislature is placated by himself sufficiently to appropriate unending sums of money for drainage. He has advertised it far and wide that people are leaving this part of the state in large numbers, because forsooth, his ideas on drainage are not adopted.

These things are palpable errors and will require years of patient labor to convince intending settlers of the tact that northern Minnesota is as desirable for any pursuit that any other part of the state is and further that that the census shows an increase in population.

The delegates to the convention at Crookston recently, who formed the Red River Valley Immigration and Development league, without any political intent or purpose, gave the drainage agitation a deserved black eye. With practical unanimity they agreed that such agitation was highly detrimental to the welfare of their program of developement and decided to cease this further misadvertisement. There are swamps to be drained, perhaps, but northern Minnesota is not a quagmire that must cost untold treasure to place in tillable condition or fit for habitation.

The Crookston convention was right, let us work for this northern country but not spend our time advertising to the world its disadvantages. A. L. Cole has done us wrong, let us get away from the consequences as quickly as may be.

ST. PAUL LETTER.

St. Paul, Minn. Oct. 1—Candidate Cole made his first appearance, of the campaign in St. Paul before an audience of 350 or 300 people in the rooms of the Roosevelt Club on Monday evening last. His hearers did not enthuse over his speech, in fact, his reception was cold, which is not to be wondered at, considering the logic of the speaker. He enlarged on his state developement hobby, and explained that he had been making a census investigation an his own account, and satisfied himself the state had lost from six to ten thousand farmers during the past year. For this deplorable condition he has a remedy: The 1905 session of the legislature, he explained, appropriated $7500 to advertise the resources of the state and expedite the sale of of state lands. This sum insufficient as it was, had accomplished wonders, as the press has added its work to that of the state, and the state has realized from $100,000 to $150,000 in additional price it received in lands sold; also that private individuals had made many sales of property directly traceable to this advertising, and thus largely increased the population of the commonwealth.

His audience was wondering, of course, how the population could possibly have decreased when his panacea was at work, or what his talk was about anyway.. According to the 1905 census the population of the state showed a healthy iscrease from 1900 to 1905, and during that time the state expended no money to exploit its advantages. The farm population did not begin to fade away until Mr. Cole's panacea got in its deadly work. One shudders to think what the result might have been had that appropriation been doubled.

The break in the republican committee which has been expected for some time occurred on Tuesday of last week. Secretary Warner went down and out, and the committee is nothing but Cole now. Mr. Warner couldn't stand for the Cole brand of politics, and decided to get out before he was saddled with the odium of defeat in the campaign. He was largely instrumental in securing Mr. Cole's nomination at the Duluth convention, his generalship proving a decisive factor in the fight, but after nomination the candidate's brother cut in and Warner was regelated to the position of a chore boy. It was an intolerable situation, and he quit it in disgust. The reason given by Cole for the resignation is that Warner is compelled to attend private business but it is well known that the retiring secretary will accept a clerkship in Auditor Iverson's office. The next resignation will probably be that of Senator Thompson, chairman of the executive committee. He is also disgusted, and has not made his appearance at head quarters for the past two weeks. The organization has gone to pieces and party leaders admit Johnson's election.

* * *

Perhaps the fact that Candidate Cole owns thousands of acres of northern swamp land may influence him to some extent in his enthusiastic demand for "state developement." If the state drains these lands the candidate is that much the richer.

Patent Cheese Cutter.

A novel device for cutting cheese has recently been invented. The device comprises a simple computing mechanism whereby it is possible to gage the exact size of slice which should be cut for a certain amount. Perhaps in the future, we can go to the corner grocery, put a nickel in a cheese slot machine, see our five cents worth, cut, then wrapped, and have an automatic arm hand it to us, just as a metallic voice says "thank you." It has taken years to bring golden grain beer to its present state of purity and fine quality. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

CURED OF GRAVEL.

Not a Single Stone Has Formed Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills.

J. D. Daughtrey, music publisher, of Suffolk, Va., says: "During two or three years that I had kidney trouble I passed about 2½ pounds of gravel and sandy sediment in the urine. I haven't passed a stone since using Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and that was three years ago. I used to suffer the most acute agony during a gravel attack, and had the other usual symptoms of kidney trouble—lassitude, headache, pain in the back, urinary disorders, rheumatic pain, etc. I have a box containing 14 gravel stones that I passed, but that is not one-quarter of the whole number. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a fine kidney tonic."

"Certainly."

"I should like to be assured of this, madam, before I put myself under your treatment; and I hope, therefore, you will not object to my putting some cayenne pepper into your eye."

Doctor Recommends Postum from Personal Test.

No one is better able to realize the injurious action of caffeine—the drug in coffee—on the heart, than the doctor.

When the doctor himself has been relieved by simply leaving off coffee and using Postum, he can refer with full conviction to his own case.

A Mo. physician prescribes Postum for many of his patients because he was benefited by it. He says:

"I wish to add my testimony in regard to that excellent preparation—Postum. I have had functional or nervous heart trouble for over 15 years, and part of the time was unable to attend to my business.

"I was a moderate user of coffee and did not think drinking it hurt me. But on stopping it and using Postum instead, my heart has got all right, and I ascribe it to the change from coffee to Postum.

"I am prescribing it now in cases of sickness, especially when coffee does not agree, or affects the heart, nerves or stomach.

"When made right it has a much better flavor than coffee, and is a vital sustainer of the system. I shall continue to recommend it to our people, and I have my own case to refer to." THE Brangwyn Mystery

"It's never over," said Billery, "but I can stick it for a month."

"Very well," said Truscott. "We'll begin it that way, and we'll try the experiment of reducing the quantity by once a month. What do you say to that?"

"I'll try, Rags, I will try. I've never felt so miserable about it in my life as I feel now. I'll try, and I thank you from my heart for thinking out a way to help me."

"That's all right, then. Now this, with the one pound seventeen and six paid this afternoon, will make a fiver. You can let me have it back at the rate of a pound a week. Good afternoon. I shall see you at the office tomorrow."

"Yes; I'll be there," Billery answered, through his tears, and Truscott left him, in bitter lamentation and remorse. But he was of too weak a fiber to nurse any deep emotion long, and in less than an hour he had forgotten his humiliation and his self-disdain and his mind went back to the extraordinory scene of that afternoon. He took a doleful survey of himself in the glass and passed an uncompromising verdict on himself.

"I wouldn't have had that blackguard see me in this state for a thousand pounds," he said. "It's nasty to think that a brute like that should have a reason for despising me."

The task was a risky one, but he shaved himself at the cost of a pimple, and then he stripped to the waist and had a great wash. He was struggling with a refractory collar when there came a sound of rapid footsteps on the stair and an urgent summons at the door.

"Come in," said Billery, and in came Alexis, pale and out of breath. "Great Scot! Alexis, you here? If you'd been two hours earlier you'd have found that precious cousin of yours."

"I know," said Alexis. "It's not ten minutes since he left me. He came straight from here. He gave me the most joyful astonishment of my lifetime. You and I have been barking up the wrong tree, Billery."

"What on earth do you mean?"

"I mean that for the first time he has taken me into his confidence. He has the most absolute proof of the murderer's identity."

"I'll bet he has," said Billery.

"No, no," cried Alexis, half-hysterically. "We're all mistaken. Aloysius is no more guilty than you are. Of course, in a legal sense, he's an accessory after the fact, for he has known the criminal all along. He made me swear that I would never divulge the truth, and he has the strongest reason for it—a reason that you'd never guess if you spent a lifetime on it. Aloysius is innocent, Billery. His proofs are simply irrefragable, overwhelming. I tell you, Billery, he's a noble fellow. He has acted in a manner magnanimous beyond belief. It was simply impossible that he should clear himself to you. He could only have done that by revealing a secret that wild horses couldn't drag from him. I can't tell you how relieved I feel. He has forgiven me my suspicions of him. He admits that they were natural and reasonable in the circumstances. He says the same of you and Truscott and Grimaud. I wish to heaven it were possible for me to let you see how daylight-clear the case is. He has suffered under this monstrous cloud for years, but his endurance has broken down at last. And no wonder. You never heard of so complete a vindication."

"Upon my word," said Billery, "you take my breath away."

"You are no more astonished than I was. He could put the rope around the right neck by a word, but he won't speak it. He has promised himself never to speak it. He has gone off now to see Grimaud, to tell him to come to me to-morrow. I can rid him of whatever danger he's in in that direction—danger, I mean, of further scandal."

"You're not telling an heroic lie to shield him, Alex?"

"No, by heaven, I'm not," said Alexis. "He's innocent! Hurrah! The horror that was hanging over me is gone, Billery—gone forever!"

"Well," said Billery, "it certainly puts me in a most uncommon hole, but really I'm very glad to be in it, all things concerned. I'll write and beg his pardon this very night, and so far as in me lies, I'll undo the mischief of which I have been guilty."

"Will you?" cried Alexis. "Thank you, old chap. I knew you would. I knew I could convince you."

"Come down with me and tell Truscott. Will you? He has believed in Aloysius all along."

"Certainly I will," answered Alexis, gaily; "like a bird."

CHAPTER XV.

"What a high-strung fellow you are, Alexis!" said Billery, as he and the bearer of good news sped toward the south-eastern village in which Truscott had purchased the restored old manor and its grounds. They had secured a first-class smoking carriage to themselves. Alexis was in tremendous spirits. He chanted all manner of ditties, scraps of opera, German drinking songs, French chansons d'amour, fragments from the music halls. When he was not singing he was laughing and chatting, and once he broke into a burlesque Highland fling, with a vocal imitation of the bagpipes. "You'll have another breakdown after this if you don't take care. You're always in extremes—either agony or ecstacy. I should think you're the most mercurial beggar in the world."

"I dare say I am," said Alexis, with a sudden sobriety. "I don't think most men feel the sting of pain as I do, or feel such exuberant joy in pleasure. My cup brims over, always. I loathe suffering and I love joy."

He broke into a rather boisterous French student song, with a rollicking burden of "Vive Bacchus et vive l'amour," and Billery lay back and laughed at him until he could laugh no longer. The more Billery laughed, the absurder Alexis became, and at last his mirth was bordering on hysteria. But either succeeded in leashing himself, or the serious fit which so often follows on inordinate mirth had fallen on him. In any case, he went suddenly quiet as they neared the little rustic station for which they were bound. He had wired for a fly to be in readiness, and there it was awaiting them. A three-mile drive brought them to their destination, and there Truscott, who had just dined, was amazed to see them.

"It's at my suggestion that we came down here," said Billery. "Mr. Alexis Brangwyn has brought me very striking news, which proves to my satisfaction that you were right this afternoon and that I was wrong. I thought that, since it was I who carried the suspicions to you, it was my duty to withdraw them."

Alexis told his story, and Truscott listened with great interest. "That fits my reading like a glove," he said, when it was over. "Mr. Brangwyn, your cousin seems to me to have suffered an unmerited martyrdom, and I shall not lose a post in letting him know that I regret profoundly the share which Mr. Billery and I had in inflicting it. Most unfortunately, it's not a thing that can be talked about. There's no public vindication open to him."

"None!" said Alexis. "None! He has had knowledge of facts which it was his duty as a citizen to reveal, and in the eye of the law he is particeps criminis. But it sometimes happens in life that there are duties which transcend the law, and here there is one of them."

"In spite of the charge suggested against him," Truscott said, "I have felt a sort of curious attraction toward your cousin."

"As for me," said Billery, "I feel like a brute. He never liked me—poor old Aloysius—and, in my own mean mind, I nursed a bitter grudge against him. Why should he like me? It isn't a crime not to like me, I suppose? Seems to me I'm not a particularly likeable sort of person."

"Oh, you shut up!" said Truscott; "you're all right."

And there the interview came practically to an end. Truscott had guests to whom he was bound to return, and neither Billery nor Brangwyn cared to accept his invitation to join them. Alexis was very quiet on the return journey, and at the close of it the two shook hands and parted.

"I will send Grimaud to you to-morrow," said Alexis, as he got into a hansom at the terminus, and on the morrow, sure enough, Grimaud made his appearance in Billery's poor apartment. He was very jauntily attired, and very assured and even patronizing in his manner, so that Billery resented him.

"I received a visit from M. Aloysius yesterday," he began. "He was so condescending as to bestow upon me his confidence. Regarding me in my double capacity of old servant and humble friend, he related to me the story which M. Alexis has already outlined to monsieur. In coming here I am only obeying the instructions of M. Aloysius, but of M. Alexis, who is passionately desirous that the position of monsieur and his cousin should be made clear. It is my duty to inform monsieur that not the slightest doubt attaches to the question. The real criminal is now revealed. He is allowed to escape the penalty of his crime for reasons which are not to be over-estimated. That is the message I was instructed to deliver."

"Well," said Billery, "I knew all that before."

Grimaud bowed, looked superciliously at the meager furniture, announced that he had the honor to bid monsieur good day, and so withdrew, leaving his momentary host with a tingling inclination to kick him down the stairs.

It was like Billery all over, when he was once convinced that he had been guilty of an injustice, to make a complete volte-face with regard to Aloysius, who on a sudden became to him a person worthy of the devoutest worship. There was nothing he desired more earnestly than to prove his contrition and his sincerity in his present faith, and this mood led—as will be seen—to a rather curious result. He had written to Aloysius already a manly retraction which rather surprised its recipient by the delicacy and right feeling with which it was expressed. The letter was acknowledged in veiled and guarded terms, and when Billery's concerns next took him down to the riverside village he saw Aloysius in the street, raised his hat to him in passing, and had his salute returned.

He had always thought that Aloysius actually despised him, and the belief had rankled in his mind. When he recalled that fateful interview in his own room which had led to the partial violation of a secret carefully guarded from all men for so many years he would go hot and cold all over. He remembered his own aspect as he had seen it in the glass after Truscott's departure—the hair all tumbled and frowzy, the eyes bleared, the cheeks and lips unshaven and unwashed, the linen soiled and crumpled, the clothes all wrinkled and unbrushed after a night's sleep in them, because he had been too drunk when he had staggered to his bed to take them off.

Then he remembered his visitor, the refinement and distinction of his dress, his perfect manner and speech, the patient sorrow of his look, the dignity and self-control with which his charges had been received, the amazing reasonableness with which all the suspicions against him were accepted as being natural and inevitable, and he blushed with shame.

The contrast was too appalling—the squalid drunkard bellowing his unjust accusation, and the man who faced him. Of course Billery was unfair to himself. His grounds for belief had seemed so real that even the man against whom they told admitted their cogency. But it was not in him to be merely just to anybody or anything, and when he thought of all these things he writhed in the depths of his self-humiliation. In short, if there were a man in all the world in whose eyes Billery would have been glad to show to advantage, that man was Aloysius Brangwyn. And since he had not the remotest hope that he would ever do it he was very unhappy.

This novel feeling of his drew him oftener to the village than he had ever been before, though in Truscott's day he had been a somewhat frequent visitor. He knew, more or less, a goodly number of the residents, and whenever he could find time he would make opportunities for knowing them better. He scraped acquaintance with the parson and the organist. He developed a great interest in the antiquities of the church and took heelball rubbings of all the brasses. And since, when all was said and done, Billery was a ripe scholar, and most undeniably a gentleman so long as he kept sober, he became popular, and was welcome to spend an hour or two at a time in many of the local homes

WANTED INFORMATION.

Robert Desired Minister's Formula for Disguising His Breath.

A very aggressive and highly successful crusade in favor of temperance has recently been going on in a certain Scotch city, and a young minister, whose eloquence is marred only by the unfortunate remarks he sometimes makes, has been able to persuade several heavy drinkers to enter the temperance fold.

Meeting one of his converts one afternoon, he stopped him and inquired how he was getting along.

The man kept well back, and the minister's suspicions were aroused.

"Ah, Robert," said the reverend gentleman, sadly. "I'm afraid you've been drinking. I can smell it on your breath."

Robert didn't deny the impeachment—in fact, he couldn't—and just remained speechless, his eyes fixed on the ground in front of him.

"Now, Robert," continued the minister, "you never smell the odor of liquor in my breath."

"No, sir, I never did," was Robert's reply; then, in a most anxious tone of voice, he added:

"What d'ye dae for it?"

SMELLS OF ITALY.

They Are Loud, Numerous and Very Persistent.

"This thing of traveling in Europe is all well enough," began the man who had just returned from a trip abroad, "but, after this, deliver me from summer trips through Italy. We complain about mosquitoes here, but add to these little pests myriads of fleas, and vile odors, worse than any of our sewers or garbage camps, and you get somewhere near the ills and troubles that come in July to the traveler through sunny Italy. 'Spicy garlic' smells are bad enough—that one sometimes gets from Italian camps along railroads in this country—but for the real thing in the way of odors, allow me to recommend you to Italy, and in the month of July. Oh, yes, delightful enough country, interesting art and history, but there were too many side issues for me. After this I'll make my Mediterranean trips in the winter."

SMALLPOX CASES AT CAMBRIA.

Reported That There Are Ten Persons Suffering From Disease.

Smallpox has broken out at Cambria. The Rev. Moses Breese of the Presbyterian church in Cambria telephoned to Portage asking that the church conference which was to have been held there this week be held in Portage instead, owing to the breaking out of the disease. It is said that there are already ten cases of the disease.

Falling in love is easy, but climbing out again—aye, there's the rub.

WAS NOT PLASTER.

CONTRACTOR'S MEN HAD MADE SLIGHT MISTAKE.

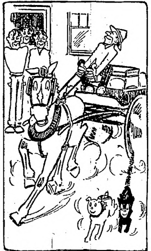
Origin of Pungent Odor Which Had Called Forth Sulphurous Remarks Explained When Farmer Called.

During the constructoin of a station on the line of one of the principal railroads of the Pine Tree state the building had progressed to the point where plastering was the next thing necessary, and the contractor in charge feared that, owing to the length of time required for drying, he would be unable to complete his work within the specified time.

An official of the road, who chanced to be in the vicinity, directed him to use adamant as a substitute, which, as all builders knows, dries very rapidly, and though none of the men were familiar with this material, he gladly complied with the suggestion, and on order was dispatched post haste for a generous supply.

The following morning two men and a team were detailed to meet the train at the freight station above. In a short time they returned in triumph with a score of large sacks filled with a grayish brown ingredient, and the foreman felt that the situation was saved.

The work of plastering was soon briskly under way, but during the forenoon a powerful and inexplicable odor seemed to fill the air, growing more and more dominant as the day advanced, until by afternoon the fumes were almost insufferable, and the language of the men became as pungent as the atmosphere. All sorts of theories had been advanced to account for its presence, but it was not until the plastering was finished and the men had gathered at the door for a little fresh air that one of them volunteered the opinion that the source of the trouble was in the wall.



Looking for His Fertilizer.

Just then an old farmer of the vicinity pulled in his steed in passing and accosted them:

"S-ay," he drawled, "hain't none of you fellers seen nothing of no bags of fertilizer up at the station, hev ye? 'Cause if ye hev—"

But his closing words were drowned in the roar of laughter that went up, and the origin of the mysterious odor was a mystery no longer.

Largest Tomato Plants.

The largest tomato plants in the world are found in California, says What to Eat. One grower has three plants which have reached a length of 30 feet.

In three months from the time the seeds were planted they had climbed to the top of a 20-foot trellis. When they reached this remarkable height they grew backward until they attained a length of 30 feet.

They have no special care or cultivation and have had no protection from the weather; yet in spite of every disadvantage they kept on growing and fruiting in the most astonishing fashion.

The trunks are one and a half inches in diameter, the foliage thick and luxuriant. Enormous quantities of tomatoes have been picked from these three plants and the fruit is of unusual size, possessing fine flavor.

New Guinea's "Bird of Death."

In New Guinea there is said to be a venomous bird called the "bird of death." It is about the size of a pigeon, with a tail of extraordinary length ending in a tip of brilliant scarlet. It has a sharp, hooked beak, and frequents marshes and stagnant pools. The venom with which it inoculates is distilled in a set of organs which lie in the upper mandible, just below the openings of the nostrils. Under them, in the roof of the mouth, is a small fleshy knob. When the bird sets its beak in the flesh of a victim this knob receives a pressure which liberates the venom and inoculates the wound.

Letters of Poetess Sold.

Twenty letters, written by Elizabeth Barrett Browning to Hugh Boyd, who, when blind, was her instructor in Greek, were recently sold in England for the sum of two hundred dollars. They were sold at an auction room in London, where interesting articles are frequently disposed of, valuable as relics of well-known persons; authors of note, and people distinguished in various ways, of the present and bygone generations.

Vain Appeal.

When President Hadley of Yale was professor of political science there a student once offered him a poor excuse for a bad examination paper.

Prof. Hadley listened to the excuse in silence. Then he said, with a grim smile:

"That excuse is about as poor as the one a criminal lawyer offered for his client in a case that had gone hard with him.

"'Gentlemen of the jury,' cried this lawyer, eloquently, 'remember that my client is hard of hearing, and that, therefore, the voice of conscience appeals to him in vain!'"

Scared Both of Them.

When Mr. Justice Maule was on the bench a bullying counsel was one day browbeating an elderly female witness in a case before him. Having badgered her into a state of utter speechlessness the lawyer appealed to the Judge to make her answer his questions.

"Why do you not answer, madam?" asked the judge. "Because, my Lord, he scares me so," replied the trembling woman. "So does he me, ma'am," said the judge.

A KENTUCKY WOMAN

How She Gained Fifteen Pounds in Weight and Became Well by Taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Women at forty, or thereabouts, have their future in their own hands. There will be a change for the better or worse, for the better if the system is purified by such a tonic as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. D. C. Wedding, of Hartford, Ky., writes as follows concerning the difficulties which afflicted her:

"I was seriously ill and was confined to my bed for six or eight mouths in all, during two years. I had chills, fever, rheumatism. My stomach seemed always too full, my kidneys did not act freely, my liver was inactive, my heart beat was very weak and I had dizziness or swimming in my head and nervous troubles.

"I was under the treatment of several different physicians but they all failed to do me any good. After suffering for two years I learned from an Arkansas friend about the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided that I would try them. The very first box I took made me feel better and when I had taken four boxes more I was entirely well, weighed fifteen pounds more than when I began, resumed my household duties, and have since continued in the best of health. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to many people on account of what they did for me, and I feel that I cannot praise them too strongly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills restored Mrs. Wedding to health because they actually make new blood and when the blood is in full vigor every function of the body is restored, because the blood carries to every organ, every muscle, every nerve, the necessary nourishment. Any woman who is interested in the cure of Mrs. Wedding will want our book, "Plain Talks to Women," which is free on request.

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or they will be sent by mail postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

Cure For The Blues

ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED

Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained.

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way:

She has been feeling "out of sorts"

Mrs. Rosa Adams

for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her periods she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: "Cheer up: you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon."

But she doesn't get "all right," and hope vanishes; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 12th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, 'the blues,' nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it not only cured my female derangement, but it has restored me to perfect health and strength. The buoyancy of my younger days has returned, and I do not suffer any longer with despondency, as I did before. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a boon to sick and suffering women."

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.

A Survivor.

"So you are still unmarried," said the girl friend.

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "And when I see the disappointments of the girls who are married I begin to believe there is, after all, something in this doctrine of the fittest."

MAIZYPOP IN ENGLAND.

It's Just Good Old Cony Island Pink and White Popcorn.

Maizypop in London is the product of the latest American invasion.

It is asserted, says What to Eat, that the record for such introductions has been broken in this case; for it took just one week to form a company, to register the trademark and to lease a building. In the second week the finished product was being turned out.

Maizypop is simply popcorn as we are familiar with it, in pink and white cakes wrapped in oiled paper. The name is a concession to the language of England, where corn is known as maize.

The two Americans who have started maizypop upon its career first bought the foreign rights for popcorn machinery, then arranged to control the export of shelled corn from the United States for ten years.

The Wife of a Statesman

BY ELLIOT WALKER

Andrew Ferguson had been permitted by "the powers" to be the most conspicuous figure in the campaign. He had long been a factor in the politics of the ward. His rise had been due to the friendship of the one recognized despot of down-town politics.

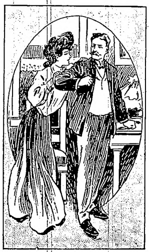
Such rapid progress as Ferguson's is certainly worth watching, and even women of the district had taken a deep interest in his career. But Ferguson had long ago settled his affections on Mary Slater, the adopted daughter of a childless widower, also a politician.

The day of the election Mary had prayed all day for her lover's victory, and when he came to her his shining eyes messaged the well-won fight.

"It's all over, Mary, and I'm elected by an overwhelming majority. It was a foregone conclusion that I would be elected; still, it is good to know that I'm no longer a nobody, but Hon. Andrew Ferguson, member of the legislature, who now asks Mary Slater most humbly to become his wife."

They were both prepared for this moment, and all that remained to do for old Slater on his return was to give his smiling consent.

For a girl who had spent all her life in an atmosphere in which all-pervading corruption did not even make the pretense of hiding itself, Mary was singularly innocent. From the time that she had been adopted by her uncle her life had been full of household duties, which were further increased by catering to the many whims of the aging politician.



"Oh, so I am a thief, am I?"

The training at her uncle's house had made Mary an exceedingly economical housekeeper, and she was not long in finding that her husband's extravagant ways were not at all justified by their resources. She knew the exact amount of her husband's salary and also knew that they were living beyond it. With the realization of their prodigality came Mary's determination to retrench expenditures, and she began by discharging their two servants.

Ferguson's first intimation of his wife's economical measures came to him one night at dinner. Instead of the servant he found his young wife, in snowy apron, attending to the table.

His wife's arrangement was not at all to Ferguson's liking.

"You foolish little girl, you! And you want to save, and so that I won't feel it But I tell you it can't be done. We don't have to economize, Mary. Even if we were living three times as expensive as we're living now, we would be a lot to the good. I'm making money hand over fist and—"

"You're doing nothing of the kind," interposed Mary, warmly. "I figured it all out to-day, and I know just exactly how much we can afford to spend on our home."

"But you figured with only my salary as basis,' explained Ferguson, laughing. "Don't you know that that isn't all I make?"

"It isn't—"

"Why, of course not. You see there is my mileage, and my—" for some unaccountable reason, Ferguson's speech came haltingly—"and my—Why, a man in my position has lots of opportunities for—for—investments and—other ways of increasing his income. Oh, you ought to know what I mean! And now, as punishment for my wife's miserly intentions, I shall prove to her right now that I have no desire of hoarding my money."

Bewildered, Mary took a small parcel from him and opened it with care. At the sight of the glittering gems she stood speechless.

'Well, don't the punishment fit the crime?" asked Ferguson, exultingly.

"Oh, Andrew, how could you? It is almost sinful to waste money like this," stammered the wife.

She waited on Ferguson, who ate a hurried dinner, as an extra session of the assembly required him to leave for the capital that night.

After the departure of her husband, Mary thought of her foster-father and went to him, who, certainly, knew every condition in the game of politics.

Mary's mind was not at all relieved by the interview with her uncle. Her husband was the one to enlighten her. He was due home shortly and she would go to him with her questions.

On the car, she could not avoid seeing glaring headlines in the paper eagerly read by the man sitting beside her.

BRIBERY SCANDAL.
Franchise Grab Exposed.
Assemblymen Threatened with Arrest.

Her husband was in the assembly!

The very next line had her husband's name in capital letters. She read on, but the type blurred before her eyes. No, she would get off, buy a paper and read it without prejudice or bias.

The account was given with great detail. The ring of contractors and promoters had thrown hundreds of thousands of dollars into the legislative house. The money was to have been distributed by their most able representative and champion, Andrew Ferguson, who, at the moment of victory had turned it into defeat by "fraudulent" disbursement of the bribe entrusted to him. Greed, it was claimed, had made him "shave" the individual allotments, thereby increasing his to the lion's share. The "defrauded" patriots had bolted, and, in the turmoil ensuing, the "deal" had been dragged into publicity—for which noble deed every newspaper and "undefrauded" statesman was claiming the credit. It was rumored that indictments were being prepared.

How Mary got home, and how she spent the interval until her husband's home-coming, no one, not even she could tell.

A late train brought the legislator to the city.

His wife, pale and silent, rose from her seat at the window as he came in, swaying between contempt and loyalty, not yet knowing whether to reproach or pity him.

"Andy, O Andy, tell me it's all a mistake, isn't it? You had nothing to do with it; you're not implicated in this—in this—oh, I can't even mention it!"

"For heaven's sake, what is the matter with you, Mary?" Ferguson was as self-possessed as ever. "What are you talking about? That garbled and sensational acount in this afternoon's paper? You ought to have more sense than that. It won't amount to anything—it's nothing. We fixed it tonight, as soon as I got back to town, and in a day or two the whole thing will be forgotten. These things will happen sometimes, but they always make more smoke than fire."

His wife remained silent, Ferguson permitted an expression of deep injury to creep over his features.

'But it's nice to find out what kind of a wife I got." He stepped close to her. "Say, do you know how you act? You act as if I were a thief and—"

"What are you, if not that?" cried Mary, and Ferguson realized that his "fool wife" had changed to a wise woman.

"Oh, so I am a thief, am I?" he sneered. "Well, if I stole, for whom did I steal? I stole for you, because I loved you and want to make you the "lady of the ward." I wanted to make money, lots of it, because I wanted you to be envied by the others. What do you think I go to the assembly for? Men don't go into politics for their health. That's where the "investments" are. And you, as to you—do you think you can make anybody believe that you were so soft you did not know where the money was coming from? I might believe it, but they won't. They know you handled most of the money and got diamonds bought with it, and—ah, don't be foolish, Mary! Have a little sense. I'm no worse than the others and—"

Ferguson had been so intense in his harangue that the collapse of his wife had been unnoticed by him, and he barely had the time to catch her in his arms. It was the beginning of a long illness.

Weeks passed, and the relations of wife and husband were still undefined. Mary never asked for him and would not see him, unless the nurse or Mrs. Landish were present.

The liking of Mrs. Landish for Mary was of many years' standing. Her husband, too, was a legislator. The older woman had had her experience and could sympathize.

"Yes, dear, it's bad and wicked. I used to feel the same way about it, just the same, but—"

"Oh, how could you stand it?" Mary would interpose. "It is unbearable to know that—"

"I know, I know," consoled the friend, "but what can we do? And, at last, one gets used to it, because—and that is the saddest part of it all—there is no choice."

Restored to health, it seemed as if Mary had learned her lesson from Mrs. Landish. Whenever husband and wife appeared on public occasions it would have been difficult to find any difference in their intercourse. The servants were installed again and were given carte blanche, as Mary interfered very rarely in household matters. Her social duties were not neglected; and they kept increasing, as term after term her husband was sent to the assembly or other important legislative bodies, where his services were of such incalculable value to his constituents. At the many "affairs" which were honored by the presence of Hon. Andrew Ferguson and his wife, Mary's diamonds and gowns were the admiration and envy of the other women.

As to the love and the inner life of Andrew Ferguson and his wife—who cares for the lot of the wives of our statesmen!

SOURCE OF TORTOISE SHELL.

Our Consul at Colon Reports on the Extent of the Industry.

While there are immense quantities of tortoise shell used annually in civilization there is not much generally known about the real methods of gathering it. A large amount of it comes from the Caribbean sea and an interesting report on the industry has recently been made by Consul Kellogg of Colon.

He says that last year the total amount of shell shipped from his consular district was 16,000 pounds and that of this 8,000 pounds, valued at $37,000, came from Colon direct, 5,000 pounds of it going to New York and the rest to Europe. The hawk's bill turtle, from which the shell is obtained, feeds on crabs, fish and the like and its meat is not valued as is that of the herbivorous turtles. The turtles run from 1 1-2 feet to 4 feet long and weigh as much as 150 pounds. The average weight of the shell is 6 to 7 pounds and the price it brings is from 3 to $6 a pound, the market fluctuating. Some of the shell is sent to Colon, but much of it is traded by the Indians to coasting schooners and shipped to New York.

The civilized method of preparing the shell is to kill and clean the turtle after it is caught either on the beach or in nets in the water. The Indians do not kill them at once, but boil them alive and then throw them back into the sea. This is hard on the turtle, but it is said to make the shell come off easily.

BABY'S TORTURING HUMOR.

Ears Looked as If They Would Drop Off—Face Mass of Sores—Cured by Cuticura in Two Weeks for 75c.

"I feel it my duty to parents of other poor suffering babies to tell you what Cuticura has done for my little daughter. She broke out all over her body with a humor, and we used everything recommended, but without results. I called in three doctors, they all claimed they could help her, but she continued to grow worse. Her body was a mass of sores, and her little face was being eaten away; her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighbors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and before I had used half of the cake of Soap and box of ointment the sores had all healed and my little one's face and body were as clear as a new-born babe's. I would not be without it again if it cost five dollars instead of seventy-five cents. Mrs. George J. Steese, 701 Colburn St., Akron, Ohio."

Glittering Advertisements.

To Whom It May Concern:

Through advertising matter I was induced to come to Fargo to enroll at one of the business colleges. After about two months' trial I found that the school fell far short of its glittering advertisements, so I investigated Aaker's Business College and found that it would pay me to sacrifice tuition paid at the other school in order to get the advantages offered by the A. B. C. After a two months' trial I am pleased to say that I have found it a school in the real sense of that word. In building, in equipment, in quality of instruction, and in helpful textbooks, the A. B. C. excels, and the school seems to carry out every promise. Respectfully,

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies; those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the

manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., and in order to buy the genuine article and to get its beneficial effects, one has only to note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package. ADVENTURES IN BRIDGEBUILDING

The riveting up of the Zambesi bridge proved to be a more formidable undertaking than had been anticipated. Several of the riveters we brought from England were unable to stand the climate, and we had to depend largely on the men in the country. We found that an average day's work in England and in Africa were two very different things. Although we had good hydrauiinc and pneumatic equipment, the rate of progress was rather slow.

An interesting incident occurred during the riveting. A leopard, which had previously devastated the henroosts of every one in the the locality, besides taking sundry dogs and cats, was run over by an engine one night. He had apparently been dazzled by the headlight and had lain on the track. He was seen by the driver, who pulled up. The skin was found to be scarcely damaged.

The deep pools among the islands in the river were the haunt of numerous hippopotami, which, although peaceable most of the year, if left alone, at certain times became dangerous. We were chased on one or two occasions when in Canadian canoes, but never came to grief. Others were not so fortunate. Three canoes were overturned in one week. In one case one of the civil commissioners' native paddlers was drowned. In another, the man overturned lost his rifle and other gear and had to swim to one of the islands, where he remained all night.

Another adventure that befell two of our riveters, is, perhaps, worth recording. They went a little way along the gorge and there found the remains of a red buck. They started to cut out the horns. Suddenly they heard a growd behind them. Turning, they saw a lioness with two cubs, who was evidently annoyed at this interference with her dinner. The two men did not stop to argue, but made a bee line for the gorge, down which they jumped—about as dangerous a proceeding, one would think, as facing the lion. Luckily they stopped sliding a good way down, and returned very much bruised and excited. The lioness was followed next day for some distance, but the party was unable to come up with her.—World's Work.

AS IN THE MELODRAMA.

Police Chief's Story of Two Disguises and an Arrest.

"A man and a woman," said the police chief, "occupied a compartment of a Pullman. In a desolate place, the train speeding like lightning, the man said to the woman:

"'Madam, I will ask you to look out of the window a few minutes. I am going to make some changes in my apparel.'

"'Certainly, sir,' said the woman politely.

"Two or three minutes, filled with odd, rustling noises, passed. The man said:

"'Now, madam, I am finished.'

"She looked at him and, behold, he had transformed himself into a dashing girl, heavily veiled, fashionably dressed and with rich and beautiful blond hair.

"Some moments later, in her turn, the lady said:

"'Now, sir, or madam, whichever you are, I'll ask you also to look out of the window. I have some changes to make in my own dress.'

"The other complied and, when he was permitted to withdraw his gaze from the passing landscape, what was his surprise to find the lady changed into a man. He gave a loud laugh.

"'It seems,' he said, 'that we are both fugitives. Hence we should be pals. I am a bank robber. What are you?'

"'I,' said the other, 'am Detective Hawke of San Francisco, and for three days, in female attire, I have been shadowing you. Wrists together, please, so that I may now slip the nippers on.'

"Thus," concluded the police chief, "did my friend Hawke arrest the notorious Jack Graeme in '79. It was the neatest arrest, from the melodramatic standpoint, of the year."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Old Bullion's Arrogance.

"Benton was a most remarkable man," said the late Col. Switzler. "In some respects the most remarkable I have ever known, but he could not begin a careet at this time. The people would not tolerate him. He would impress even a stranger by his appearance. He walked as if he owned the earth. With head raised at an angle of 45 degrees and hands behind his back he would stalk with measured tread down the street, looking neither to the right nor to the left, recognizing no one.

"If he had an appointment to speak at 2 o'clock, promptly at 2 o'clock he would arrive. He would come in his carriage unattended. He would permit no one to introduce him. But, passing through the crowd, he would make his way to the rostrum and begin, 'Citizens.' Never did he say 'Fellow citizens.' Those before him were no fellows of his. And when he had concluded he would make his way back to the hotel, without personally addressing a soul in his audience. No one dared interrupt him in his speech. He refused to recognize the right of any constituent to ask him how he stood on any subject."—Columbia Herald.

S.S.S. FOR THE BLOOD

The purifying action and curative properties of this great remedy have made "S. S. S. For The Blood" a household saying, and thousands who are today enjoying perfect health owe their recovery from blood or skin diseases to this universally used blood medicine. S. S. S. is made entirely from roots, herbs and barks which possess not only cleansing and healing ingredients, but building-up and strengthening properties to keep the blood in perfect order. No one can be well when the blood is impure; they lack the energy and strength that is natural with health, the complexion becomes pale and sallow, the vitality is weakened and they suffer from a general broken down condition. When the waste or refuse matter, which nature intends shall be thrown off, is left in the system because of a sluggish, torpid condition of the expelling members, it is absorbed into the blood, making this vital stream weak, sour and acrid, and its condition is manifested by boils, pimples, rashes, blotches and other eruptions of the skin. S. S. S. goes into the circulation and removes every particle of blood taint or poison of every character, makes the blood fresh and strong and gives energy to the entire body. When the blood has been cleansed by S. S. S. all skin diseases and eruptions pass away and the smooth, clear skin, glowing with health, shows that the body is being nourished by rich, pure blood. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders, and for their cure nothing equals S. S. S. It does not injuriously affect the most delicate parts of the body and can be taken with perfect safety by old or young. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON IN RED LAKE FALLS

Minnesota's Executive Will Deliver Short Address Next Monday Afternoon.

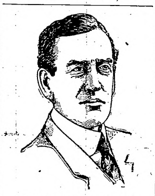
Speaking from Rear End of the G. N. Train Which Will arrive at 5:15 p. m.

Governor John A. Johnson, Minnesota's chief executive and popular candidate for reelection, will be in Red Lake Falls for a short speech next Monday afternoon, October 15.

It will probably be arranged to have the Great Northern train, upon which he will come, due at 5:20, arrive five or ten minutes earlier and held the same amount of time after its scheaule of departure in order to give Governor Johnson at least 15 or 20 minutes in which to make an address.

There will undoubtedly be a large concourse of citizens, augmented by many from the surrounding country, gathered at the depot as Governor Johnson's record as governor, his personal popularity and his fame as a public speaker will easily attract all classes. The Red Lake Falls band will assist in the greeting to be given.

It is to be regretted that Governor Johnson cannot be had here for a much longer address but his itinerary is made up to have him visit the the most places in the shortest possible time. Monday morning he will speak at Thief River Falls, in the afternoon at Greenbush, arriving in Red Lake Falls as before stated at 5:15, and will hold an evening meeting at Crookston.



GOV. JOHN A. JOHNSON

It was an error on the part of the chairman of the county committee which caused the announcement to be made that Gov. Johnson would be here last Monday. There is no mistake now in this date, Monday afternoon October 15.

HE ANSWERS HIS CRITICS

County Attorney Germo Gives the Authority of His Actions.

For the benefit of those who are laboring under the impression that I wantonly [caused the so-called redistricting case to be continued over to the April term of the Supreme court, I herewith append written instructions from the board of county commissioners, covering the question:

Thos. Germo, Co. Atty.,

Dear Sir:—We, as County Commissioners of the county of Red Lake, hereby request you to enter into a stipulation with the plaintiff's attorney in the case of Borchers vs. Wm. C. L. Demann, et. als., as board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, to the effect that the appeal in said action now pending in Supreme Court be tried and heard at the April, 1907 term thereof.

Dated Sept. 4, 1906.

Signed:
—Wm. C. L. Demann
—Louis Falardeau
—O. J. Johnson.

Here, then, we have a direct written request by a majority of the Board of County Commissioners, which in the eyes of all justice loving and fairminded people should absolve me from any blame, if blame there is, in the premises.

The position taken by those who cavil, criticise and abuse me; who distort the facts, or have had the facts distorted to them, is singularly unjust and unreasonable. It is, indeed, equivalent to holding that I should be held responsible for the action of the Board, which is as rash as it is impossible. The functions of the two offices are so entirely different. I have no more right to encroach upon their office than they have a right to encroach upon mine. It is my plain duty to act as the legal adviser to the county officials, and to prosecute cases in behalf of the county and in the name of the state. In short, I am by virtue of my office the attorney for the county and the attorney for the county officials, and, corollary, the county and the county afficials are my clients. We now come to the meat in the nut, and it is this: Every lawyer knows and every layman should know that an attorney is governed by the wishes his of client as to when to begin prosecution, and after having begun, is further governed by the wishes of his client in the matter of prosecuting the same as expeditiously as possible, as well as in the matter of consenting to a continuance. This is no new doctrine, and an attorney who would refuse to be so governed would find himself without a client.

Yours for fair play, as well as a square deal all around.

—Thomas Germo.

RED LAKE FALLS LOSES

High School Drops First Foot Ball Game to Crookston.

The Red Lake Falls high school football team lost its first game to Crookston on the home grounds last Saturday by a score of 17 to 0.

It was anything but a bad defeat in the comparison of the teams, Crookston outweighing Red Lake Falls fully 15 pounds to the man and only two in the latter's team had ever played before. The star of the contest was the Red Lake Falls fullback, Paul Brunnelle, and it was his splendid work, on the defensive, that kept the Crookston score as low as it was. His ablest assistant was Ernest Toupin, halfback. The first touchdown in Saturday's game was the result of Stewart Roemer getting the ball on a fumble and making a magnificent run of 70 yards for a touchdown. This was converted into a goal by Monroe who made a fine kick and the score stood6 to 0 in favor of Crookston. The second touchdown came as the result of good straight football. Crookston worked the ball up the field and got it thru the Red Lake Falls one yard line. On the next down they carried it over for a touchdown. Monroe failed at kicking goal because of the fierce wind and the score stood 11 to 0 on favor of Crookston. The last touchdown came as the result of Ray Ross getting the ball and making a long run for a touchdown. Mouroe kicked goal and the final score of 17 to 0 was made. Superintendent Chamberlain of Red Lake Falls umpired the game and Coach Thoreson. of Crookston was the referee.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN HAS BEEN STARTED

Red River Valley Immigration and Developement League Starts Its Work.

Red Lake Falls Commercial Club Is Visited by Secretary Thos. R. Brown.

The Red River Valley Immigration and Developement league began its publicity campaign in this city Monday evening, when Thos. R. Brown Jr. of Crookston, secretary of the league, and W. D. Williams, representing the Minneapolis Journal, made their appearance before the Red Lake Falls Commercial club.

The league had its birth in Crookston recently and was the result of the meeting of delegates from a large number of towns interested in the developement of the Red River Valley. A permanent organization was formed with the purpose of beginning a campaign of publicity. Mr. Brown, then secretary of the 25,000 club of Crookston, was made secretary of the new organization. It was in that capacity that he appeared before the commercial club and explained to a large number present the plans and projects of the campaign and the necessity for advertising the resources of the valley to attract immigration and counteract the effect of the sectional advertising that was taking the central west farmers to Canada and other parts of the United States. Mr. Brown was given the closest attention and easily succeeded in winning those present to a belief that the movement should be forwarded.

Mr. Williams spoke at some length and told of the plan to gain publicity. He represented a syndicate of papers, the Minneapolis Journal, Chicago Interocean, Indianapolis Star, Cleveland Plaindealer and Des Moines Capital, and it was the intent to print in each of the papers, having a combined circulation of over a million copies, a weekly writeup of some part of the valley not less than a column a week, every week for a year, the work to be done by experienced writers with the aid and suggestion of the local clubs. The expense of this work is to be born by the commercial organizations of the towns in the valley. Red Lake Falls' share was figured at$30 a month. The question was would the city join in the general movement.

At the comclusion of the two addresses there was a general discussion by the members of the club and the sentiment seemed clearly in favor of the club undertaking to raise its proportionate share. Mayor Duffy offered to contribute $100 of the amount himself. However in the wisdom of the club, the whole matter was given a reference to the board of directors which will report at a special meeting to be held next Monday evening.

ASSOCIATION'S MEETING

Red River Valley Dairymen Will Get Together at Crookston.

The Red River Valley Dairymen's Association will hold its fourth annual convention in the city of Crookston on Wednesday and Thursday Nov. 14th and 15th. The organzation was startea three years ago with less than a dozen persons and each succeeding convention has had a larger attendance than the previous one and at the last convention there were about 200 dairymen in attendence and from the interest shown in it this year there will be a much larger attendance. Previous meetings have shown that a one day's session is too short and the two days session, even, is crowded with the interesting subjects which the program is made from. The aim has been to make the program as much as possible of interest to both patrons and buttermakers and will be carried along on the most interesting questions of the present time and the discussions will be lead by some of the most progressive dairymen in the state and the Red River Valley. Special attention will be given to silos and practical feeding of dairy cows. A full program will be printed in a short time. Northern Minnesota is already taking rapid strides towards becoming the most important dairy section of the state. We have farmers that drew checks of over $200.00 from their cows in one month last winter and this coming season checks of over $300 will be drawn from the same source. This is not from farmers who have started with [illegible] lined pockets but who have [illegible] their own mind to the busines[illegible] dairy papers and attended [illegible] meetings and exchanged ideas [illegible] their mutual benefit. Another [illegible] that shows the progressive[illegible] the dairymen in the north[illegible] nice score we got for our [illegible] at the state fair this fall. Here are some: Calvin Moores Jr., Ada, 96½ Lauritzen, Plummer, 95; L. H. Flagel, Erskine, 95; C. M. Davidson, Climax, 95; P. Nielson, Winger, 90; H. L. Flagel, McIntosh, 94½; George Houghton, Fisher, 94½; Lars Leffler, Hendrum, 94; A. L. Gunderson, Beltrami, 93½. These are fine scores and by coming together and compare notes we can shove up a notch and carry away honor that have been held by Southern Minnesota.

Yours Truly,
Joel G. Winkjer.

FRAUD! FRAUD! FRAUD!

Bold Attempt to Defraud the People in Their Choice for Governor.

On Saturday, October 6, (the last day for filing for state offices) a petition was presented to the Secretary of State, for the placing upon the official ballot an unknown John W. Johnson, as a so-called Socialist-Labor candidate for Governor.

Thousands of dollars were spent in securing signatures and affidavits on this petition and the cheap lodging-house districts in the big cities were scoured in an effort to secure the requisite number of names.

Who is John W. Johnson? Who is responsible for this dastardly work? Everything points to a prominent republican ward-healer of Minneapolis, now connected with the Republican State Committee. The facts will soon become public.

Fair-play loving people of the state are righteously indignant at this bold attempt to prevent an honest expression of opinion on the governorship. They are asking and will ask pertinent questions.

Who furnished the money to secure over two thousand names on the petition, and for the purported "acknowledgements" thereto?

Why was a name selected almost identical with that of the democratic nominee, only a W. being substituted for an A?

Why was the petition held until five minutes before the office of the secretary of state was to close, on the last day tor filing?

Why did the Republican State Committee, within ten minutes after the filing became public, have a denial of any complicity ready to spread broadcast over the state?

Will any one claim that the so-called socialist-labor "Johnson" can have any chance of election? Is he known or identified with any socialist-labor movement? Is not the name "Johnson" his one and only asset?

The Democratic State Committee calls upon every honest man who believes in fair play and a government by the people to resent this infamous attempt to steal a high office and to so thoroughly advertise this outrage that it will fail of its purpose.

Chairman Democratic State Com.
—Ed. A. Stevens, Secretary.

Carbonic Acid Pump.

The city of Hanover has its fire service a carbonic acid pump working in connection with a steam pump. While the acid pump is actuated by a by battery of storage cells the steam pump, which is on an automobile, is conducted to the locality of the fire by means of carbonic acid compressed in tanks. The charcoal briquettes are placed on the grate and watered with alcohol from a receptacle, where it is kept under pressure by carbonic acid. The water in the boiler is always kept at the temperature of 212 degrees F. by means of a small gas burner. The daily use of golden grain belt beer will nourish and strengthen the entire body. HAS NO THOUGHT OF ANNEXATION

PRESIDENT SAYS CUBA IS TO BE GIVEN CHANCE TO RESTORE GOVERNMENT.

MAGOON IS TO BE GOVERNOR

FORMER GOVERNOR OF PANAMA TO SUCCEED TAFT—PALMA LEAVES HAVANA.

Washington, Oct. 4.—President Roosevelt discussed freely yesterday with his cabinet and with individual callers, among whom were Senators Knox and Foraker, the present situation in Cuba and its temporary occupation by the American forces. The matter was talked over at the cabinet meeting, but no definite announcement of the result of the deliberations were given out. The president related to the cabinet and to the other callers with whom he had talked that the action taken by the American government was desired.

Solely for the Benefit of the people of the island, with a view to the complete restoration of order there and the protection of all interests. He declared that he had no such motive in view as the possible annexation of the island by the United States. What he wanted now was that the Cubans should be given another chance at self-government.

Magoon to Be Governor.

It seems to be well settled that Former Governor Charles E. Magoon of the Panama canal zone, who has just returned from Panama, will be appointed provisional governor, in succession to Secretary Taft.

Gov. Magoon is anxious to go to Cuba. The president expects Mr. Taft to return to Washington in a fortnight or less.

Decides on Intervention.

Havana, Sept. 30.—American intervention in Cuba will be an accomplished fact to-day.

President Roosevelt's commissioners, although clothed with the fullest authority from him to take such action whenever it became obvious that the effort of securing peace by harmonizing the warring Cubans would be unsuccessful, have patiently withheld their hands from this setting aside Cuban sovereignty until the last hope had disappeared.

No sooner was the failure of the adjourned session of congress and the declared intention of the government officers no longer to serve reported to Secretaries Taft and Bacon than the preparations for armed intervention were put into operation.

Marines Are Landed.

A telephone wire had been quietly laid from the American legation to the battleship Louisiana, and as soon as the order was received from Secretary Taft thirty marines were landed and proceeded quickly and quietly to the treasury building, where they went on guard. In the meanwhile Capt. Albert R. Coudon, commander of the naval force; Capt. Seaton Schroeder of the battleship Virginia; Brig. Gen. Funston and Maj. Ladd were in conference with Messrs. Taft and Bacon, completing plans for the guarding of the city and arranging for the occupation. Gen. Rodriguez, commander of all the Cuban forces, is acting in perfect harmony with the American commissioners, and the rural guards can be depended upon absolutely to assist the provisional government in every respect.

Ceremony Is Absent.

Havana, Oct. 2.—With far less ostentation than accompanies the accession of a new municipal administration the government of Cuba was formally taken over by William H. Taft, secretary of war of the United States, who, in a proclamation couched in a kindly and diplomatic tone, indicative of the policy he would pursue, declared himself provisional governor of the island.

The fact that the government changed hands from a position of absolute independence to the restraint of a temporary protectorate was received by the masses with absolute indifference.

Funston Takes Rebels' Arms.

The work of disposing peacefully of the revolutionary forces in arms against the Cuban government is already practically under way. Brig. Gen. Frederick Funston, chairman of the disarmament commission, had two amicable conferences yesterday with Generals Pino Guerra and Del Castillo and arranged a program perfectly satisfactory to all concerned.

In fact, Gen. Funston said last evening that the windup will be so smooth and rapid that it will take much less time than had been anticipated.

450 Marines Landed.

The first landing of any considerable number of Americans took place last night, when 450 marines came ashore. This force proceeded to Cienfuegos last evening. It was explained that this movement was not made on account of any actual trouble in Cienfuegos, but for the purpose of exerting a calming influence on the local situation, which contains some possibility of a conflict by reason of the tense feeling existing between the government volunteers and the insurgents.

Taft's Acts Please Cubans.

Havana, Oct. 3.—Gov. Taft's acts yesterday have gone far to win him a warm place in the hearts of the people whose destinies have been placed in his hands.

Presiding yesterday morning at the opening exercises of the University of Havana he declared his mission here was solely for the purpose of uplifting the fallen republic and restoring it to the path of prosperity, an announcement which was received with demonstrations of delight by an audience representative of the highest society in Havana.

Still another act of Gov. Taft's is warmly commended as illustrative of his thoughtful consideration of the humbler classes. Learning that many poor families occupying the temporarily disused barracks at Camp Columbia were about to be by order of the Cuban authorities, in preparation of the occupation of the quarters by the brigade of marines, Gov. Taft directed that these people remain undisturbed in their homes for a period of fifteen days. In the meanwhile a porton of the marines will remain under canvas. The order of eviction had been issued in the name of the provisional government. Upon hearing of the plight of the present tenants of the barracks Gov. Taft went to Camp Columbia in an automobile, explained that he had not been aware of the conditions and rescinded the order. He left the camp amid cheers and warm expressions of gratitude from the people.

Moderates Blame Taft.

The executive committee of the Moderate party has issued a manifesto strongly inferring that the American commission is to blame for the intervention. It summarizes the attitude of the party, eulogizes Former President Palma, his actions and his resignation, reiterates the legality of the last elections and denies all responsibility for the revolution and the results thereof. The manifesto asserts that the bases presented by President Roosevelt's commissioners were practically the same as those submitted by the Liberals. In justification of their action in deserting congress the Moderate leaders say intervention was then already an accomplished fact.

An Ounce of Prevention.

Havana, Oct. 4.—The attitude of the authorities of the United States in Cuba regarding the possibilities of the present situation seemed fairly expressed yesterday afternoon when Col. Waller, commanding the marines, remarked to the Associated Press that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

The remark was called forth by preparations that were going on at Camp Columbia to transport 450 marines from the encampment westward for the purpose of having them in adjacent towns when the first installments of Gen. Guerra's disbanded men reach those places to-day.

Offer Taft Assistance.

Gens. Guerra and Del Castillo are actively co-operating to this end. Together with Guzman, the commander-in-chief of the rebels in Santa Clara province, they called at the American legation yesterday and renewed their promises of courtesies and discussed the projected amnesty proclamation.

The fact that Gen. Guzman is in sincere co-operation is regarded to preclude trouble of any consequence in the work of disarming the rebels in Santa Clara province, and no fears of disorders in other sections are entertained.

Palma Quietly Departs.

While the departure yesterday from Havana of ex-President Palma was the most important event of the last twenty-four hours, the former president left the capital so quietly that the public did not realize he had gone until the news was given in the afternoon papers. Only his cabinet ministers and a few intimate friends accompanied the former president and his family to the railroad station.

On the way from Havana to Matanzas Senor Palma's special train stopped at two stations where the government volunteers were preparing to disarm and disband.

Sure to Re-elect Palma.

He said also that the Cuban people were sure to re-elect Palma to the presidency at the first opportunity.

Senor Palma said to Col. Lima that he had full confidence in the good faith of the United States and that he believed the American government intended to restore Cuban independence. He advised all to be patient and await the outcome, which he felt sure would be entirely acceptable.

Des Moines in Nick of Time.

Santiago, Cuba, Oct. 3.—The arrival here yesterday afternoon of the American cruiser Des Moines relieved a serious situation. Fully 4,000 armed revolutionists were encircling the city within three miles. They were undisciplined, badly organized, without shelter and hungry. There has been constant rains and discontent was rife and they were threatening to raid the city. The government forces concentrated inside Santiago were not sufficient to drive the besiegers away.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—The First and Second battalions of the Twenty-eighth infantry, accompanied by headquarters staff, band and a detachment from the hospital corps, under command of Col. Owen J. Sweet, left shortly after 6 o'clock last evening for Newport News, where they will embark on transports as part of the invading force in Cuba.

The command was accompanied by escort wagons, ambulances and in fact all the equipment necessary for a protracted campaign.

WEAPONS ARE SURRENDERED

CUBAN REBELS SUBMIT TO BEING DISARMED—VERY LITTLE FRICTION.

TAFT FLIES THE CUBAN FLAG

SAYS HE IS WORKING FOR CUBAN REPUBLIC AND FLAG WILL STAY UP.

Havana, Oct. 7.—While the disarmament of the rebels will not be completed until Saturday night, it is now confidently expected that the entire operation will be finished by Monday, with the exception of Puerto Principe province, which has been less affected than any other province by the rebellion, but which is now a favorite region for marauding bands which should more correctly be called bandits than rebels.

Although the surrender of guns has not been made compulsory either by the provisional government or the disarming commission, rebel commanders have all given their followers to understand that it was expected and that the laying down of their arms was a matter of duty.

Many Guns Turned In.

The result of this has been that the number of rifles surrendered is larger, in proportion to the number of men disbanded, than the government expected. For instance 800 rebels disbanded in Pinar del Rio province up to yesterday have turned in 600 guns. Gov. Taft regards this proportion rather better than the average, but reports from Santa Clara indicate that nearly all the guns of Gen. Guzman's command have been surrendered. A great majority of the rebel rifles are old and poor, and many dilapidated weapons have been turned in.

Cattle-lifting Going On.

In Pinar del Rio practically all the rebels have been disarmed and have returned to their homes.

Gov. Taft said he believed the only region where there was a possibility of trouble to be Camaguey. Cattle-lifting and depredations to other property is going on in this section.

The disarming operation conducted in Western Havana by Maj. Eugene F. Ladd of the disarmament commission was not all smooth sailing. After the disarming of Gen. Del Castillo's personal escort, which produced fifty guns, Maj. Ladd proceeded to disarm the men of Del Castillo's brigade commanders. On meeting Gen. Arencie at Santiago de la Vegas Maj. Ladd was told that his force of 500 had already dispersed, but that 150 guns would be turned over at once.

Hold Out on Ladd.

When Maj. Ladd returned, however, only forty guns were forthcoming. Maj. Ladd suspected the subordinates of concealing weapons and threatened to take the matter up with Gov. Taft. The subordinates at once promised to produce the rest of the guns to-day.

The force under Gen. Guaz was disarmed to Maj. Lall last evening at San Antonio de los Banos. Gen Guas wept over the fact that he had to default in his promise to his followers that they could keep their guns. He said, however, that he was willing to do this to show his confidence in the intentions of the American government.

Many Claims for Losses.

American Minister Morgan has received many claims from Americans for losses of animals and other damages. These he will present to the provisional government.

Gen. Pino Guerra, accompanied by his staff, rode through Havana yesterday and attracted much attention and applause.

In response to the criticism made by Americans that the Cuban flag was flying over the palace while that building is being occupied by an American governor, Gov. Taft said yesterday:

"I am here working for the Cuban republic; therefore, the Cuban flag will fly as long as I am here in that capacity."

TRAGIC END OF QUARREL.

While Fighting, Two Men Fall From Fourth-story Window and Are Killed.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 7.—Clutched in each other's arms, two young men fell from the fourth story of the Lake Shore railroad office building and were hurled to their death on the pavement below at 5 o'clock last evening.

The young men had some trouble previously and a renewal of this late yesterday afternoon led to an altercation between them. It was a result of this that they fell from the window, which was open directly in front of them.

FINDS FATHER'S HEAD SEVERED.

Horrible Discovery by New York Central Employe on the Tracks.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 7.—James Mahoney, a New York Central fireman's helper, found the dead body of a man between the tracks near Depew last night. Half a mile away the mutilated head was picked up by yardmen.

At the morgue the dead man was identified as Mahoney's father, Edward Mahoney, fifty-five years old, a boilermaker. It is believed he fell from a passenger train.

FIFTEEN MINERS ENTOMBED

EXPLOSION WRECKS MINE IN NEW MEXICO—FIRE DAMP CUTS OFF ESCAPE.

Denver, Oct. 7.—According to a special to the News, fifteen men are believed to have been entombed in the Dutchman mine at Blessburg, N. M., early yesterday morning by an explosion which wrecked the walls and roof of the tunnel in which they were working. However, only six men are positively known to have been in the tunnel at the time of the explosion, but the usual night shift numbers fifteen, and none of them has been located outside.

Rescuing parties have taken out four dead bodies. Fire damp has settled in the tunnel, making rescue work difficult. It is not thought that any of the entombed men can live. As yet no fire has been reported.

The cause of the explosion is not known.

FALLS INTO THRESHER.

Farm Hand Drops Upon Cylinder While Machine Is in Motion.

St. Peter, Minn., Oct. 7.—Algot Lundberg, a farm hand employed by Swen Anderson of New Sweden township, had a miraculous escape from death yesterday afternoon. He was drawn into the cylinder of a threshing machine, but the injuries he received were comparatively slight.

When the accident occurred Lundberg was standing on a footboard directly over the cylinder, the board broke under his weight and dropped him squarely into the mass of revolving teeth. His fellow workmen fully expected to see Lundberg ground to atoms; but by the merest chance the machine had been slowed down for a moment and the engineer was able to stop it promptly.

Both of Lindberg's shoes were stripped from his feet, and the teeth on the cylinder caught and crushed one of his heels. Had the separator been running at the usual rate nothing could have prevented the man from being torn and mangled beyond recognition.

FIVE HURT AT FIRE.

Midnight Blaze in Minneapolis Causes $30,000 Damage.

Minneapolis, Oct. 7.—Five men were hurt during a fire at midnight which destroyed the Hennepin laundry, 120 First avenue north. None of the injured will die.

The fire started from an unknown cause, in the rear of the first floor of the building. The loss is placed at $30,000 and is partly covered by insurance.

In and About the State

FARM VALUES ARE TOO LOW.

State Board of Equalization Will Raise Them.

The state board of equalization may make several boosts in the values of farm lands and farm buildings. The real estate committee submitted its report and the board spent some time discussing it and began framing up a schedule of changes. The schedule has not yet been adopted, but it includes some good-sized increases. The state board two years ago fixed farm land and structures thereon at $430,830,000. This year the county boards have returned $428,000,000, and this probably will be raised $10,000,000 or $20,000,000.

The board is considering some large increases in the column of structures on farm lands. Marshall county is due for a 100 per cent increase, Clay 65, Morrison and Otter Tail 50, Roseau 40, Lyon 33 1-3, Wabasha and Douglas 20 and some other counties smaller increases, while Kittson may be decreased 20 per cent.

Some increases will also be made in the column of farm lands, exclusive of structures. The following are proposed: Aitkin, 45; Anoka, 15; Blue Earth, 5; Brown, 5; Carlton, 10; Chippewa, 10; Cottonwood, 20; Douglas, 15; Kanabec, 10; Kandiyohi, 25; Kittson, 20; Lincoln, 20; Marshall, 33 1-3; Martin, 20; Mille Lacs, 10; Morrison, 10; Otter Tail, 50; Pine, 25; Pipestone, 20; Polk, 25; Pope, 20; Red Lake, 10; Renville, 12 1-2; Scott, 15; Sherburne, 15; Sibley, 10; Stearns, 33 1-3; Swift, 5; Todd, 10; Wabasha, 20; Waseca, 10; Grant, Murray, Steele and Wilkin are marked for 10 per cent decreases.

TREASURER IS FLUSH.

Statement Shows Balance of $1,518,374.13 at End of September.

The revenue fund of the state treasury is nearly a million richer than it was a year ago—$928,875.81, to be exact. A year ago the statement of the state treasurer at the close of business on Sept. 30 showed a deficit in the revenue fund amounting to $873,138.70. The report made out yesterday, showing the condition at the close of the month of September, shows a cash balance of $54,737.11.

The total cash balance for all the funds in the treasury is almost a half million better than last year. Then it was $1,083,446.76, and this year it is $1,518,374.13. The cash in some of the trust funds is less than it has been at some previous dates on account of the large amount of money that has been loaned out to school districts, towns, cities and villages.

Revenue	$54,737.11

BECKER A CORN COUNTY.

Experiment by State Expert Said to Prove It.

The experiments made with corn by the state experimental farm expert, Mr. Titrud, on the I. J. Collins farm near Frazee, have proved very interesting and profitable for Northwest farmers. Mr. Titrud was here to see cut the different kinds of corn which were planted under his supervision last spring. The yield was more than an average, as compared with other southern corn-growing districts. Seven varieties were sown, besides the local improved white dent, with which Mr. Collins won the first prize at the St. Louis exposition. This corn ripened first, being partly acclimated; the next was improved yellow dent, marked 13. Mr. Titrud was agreeably surprised with the experiment and went from Frazee north to Erskine, where some more corn had been sown.

The corn at Frazee was planted on May 23 by Mr. Collins and was ripe and ready to cut in three months and twenty-two days. Frazee and Becker county have sown much corn, and now that the exact time of growth has been determined and a corn discovered adapted to the time and climate a large acreage of corn will be sown next year. Corn maturing in this Northwest climate and giving such a big yield means thousands of dollars to the farmers and may change the whole aspect of farming in the Northwest.

He Couldn't Tell.

"What do you consider the six best books of the year, Mr. Ego?" asked the young woman.

"Well—er—really," replied Mr. Ego, the novelist, "I've written two books this year, you know."

Question of Methods.

Daysie—Oh, dear! What on earth shall I say to Mr. Jinks when he calls to-night?

Graycle—Why, has he proposed?

Daysie—No, the mean thing—that's just it.

DAMAGES ASKED FOR DELAY.

Suit of Mrs. Beaulieu Against Great Northern Raises New Points.

Mrs. Jennie Beaulieu of Cass Lake has brought suit against the Great Northern railway for $3,000 for damages alleged to have resulted from unnecessary delay in the transportation of the dead body of her four-year-old daughter, who died in Cass Lake in July and was sent to White Earth. The body was carried through to Crookston by mistake.

Walseth & Tauges, attorneys of Thief River Falls, have been engaged to fight the case. The points raised are different from any known to have been set forth before a court in this state.

MAY MEET IN DULUTH.

Range Teachers May Change Name to Northern Minnesota Association.

The executive committee of the Range Teachers' association, composed of President Noah Young of Soudan, O. L. Newberry of Ely and A. V. Jones of Sparta, met at Ely for the purpose of formulating plans for the next annual meeting.

The action taken by the committee was not definite in regard to time and place for the next meeting, but Duluth was named provisionally, and Nov. 1 as the most auspicious time.

Last year the meeting was held in Eveleth and, in connection with the new Eveleth high school, was a pronounced success. At that meeting the range teachers were joined by those remaining in the old Superior association, and in view of the extended membership of the range association it is likely the name will be changed to the Northern Minnesota Teachers' association.

Ins and Outs.

Bronzed by foreign suns, he entered the office of his colleague. But the cashier's chair was vacant.

"Is Mr. Smith out?" he asked anxiously. "I'm an old friend of his."

"No, sir," returned the clerk. "Mr. Smith is not out. He won't be out for sixteen years."

Here the clerk smiled grimly.

Lindbegh's Majority in Sixth Congressional District.

Tifft of Long Prairie gets the nomination on the Democratic ticket in the Sixth district by a majority of 1,625 over C. D. Auyer of Little Falls.

Defeated by One Vote.

One change in the legislative results is made by the official canvass. Walter L. Case, who was reported as nominated by the Republicans in the Fifty-second district, is defeated by one vote by L. M. Ferguson. The district has two representatives, and G. W. Knox is nominated as one of them by a large vote. Case was nominated on the face of the early returns, but the official canvass by the state board shows him defeated. The other two candidates were C. B. Maben and C. P. De Laittle. De Laittre withdrew from the race, but not in time to get his name off the ballot.

TO WORK FOR GOOD ROADS.

Winona County to Form Permanent Association.

Theodore Leeb, chairman of the county board and president of the temporary good roads organization, has appointed a committee on arrangements for a big good roads convention to be held at Winona the latter part of next month. This committee is composed of W. J. Landon, John Valentine, F. E. Higgins, Thomas B. Hill and George Hirsch. Vice presidents, one for each town in the county, also have been named. George W. Cooley, the state engineer, and other members of the state highway commission will be present at the convention, when a permanent good roads association will be organized.

The city of Breckenridge is very much disturbed on account of its polluted water supply. The city secures its water from the river into which the entire sewerage of this city is poured, and the result is that typhoid fever is epidemic from time to time.

A man by the name of Mayers of Quincy, Ill., was killed while stealing a ride on the rods of a car of an eastbound freight near Dassel. He was drunk, and was killed before he had gone a mile on his journey. His body was cut in two.

"A SMALL THING."

Do you believe in progress? Do you believe that all the wonderful achievements of the nineteenth century—the railroad, the telegraph, the telephone, electric light, kerosene, sewing machine, agricultural machinery, steamships, trolley cars, etc.—have made life easier and better worth living? I do. I believe that a man who lives 40 years under modern conditions has experienced more life and better life than Methusalem, though he had lived 20 centuries of his time.

The triumphs of the nineteenth century were triumphs of human service—the placing of knowledge and the fruits of knowledge within the reach of the common man. Every man's life is better, happier, more secure because of them. We live more comfortable, more sociable lives in better and more comfortable houses because of them. Even the hopeless dweller in the worst city slums is more comfortable in his physical conditions than the middle-class citizen of the days of George Washington.

In little things as in great, comfort and convenience have been the legacy of the "Century of Improvement." Paint, in a certain sense, is a minor matter, yet it gives beauty, healthfulness and durability to our dwellings. Fifty years ago painting was a serious proposition, a luxury for the owners of stately mansions who could afford the expense of frequent renewals. Today ready mixed paint is so cheap, so good, and so universal that no house owner has an excuse for not keeping his property well painted.

A small thing, indeed; yet several hundred large factories, employing thousands of chemists and skilled workmen, are running every day in the year to keep our houses fresh, clean and wholesome.

A small thing, yet a can of good ready mixed paint, such as one may buy from any reputable dealer, embodies the study of generations of skilled chemists, the toil of a thousand workmen in mill, laboratory and factory, and the product of a long series of special machinery invented and designed just to make that can of paint and to furnish us an infinite variety of tints, colors and shades.

It was a wonderful century, that nineteenth of our era, and not the least of its wonderful gifts was that same commonplace can of paint.

King Alfonso's Prophecy.

"Was it ever foretold by a fortune teller that you would marry a king?" was asked the queen of Spain.

"Only by a friend of mine, who was doing my hand and looking in a teacup. She said that I would be on a throne; though I didn't think anything about it until after my betrothal. But it was quite odd about the king. When he went to Grenada some time ago and visited the Sacre Marte they wanted him to kiss a stone in one of the underground caves, which is supposed to insure your marriage within a year. He refused at first, because he said he wouldn't be able to choose a wife because of being in love, so he would prefer not to lose his liberty so soon. But finally he consented to please them, and not long afterward we met. Now he says he is very glad he kissed the stone."

The Meat of It.

"There was more meat in that last article of Spacerate's than I thought there was."

"That so?"

"Yes, indeed! He bought three pounds of steak with the money he got for it!"

LOOSE TEETH

Made Sound by Eating Grape-Nuts.

Proper food nourishes every part of the body, because Nature selects the different materials from the food we eat, to build bone, nerve, brain, muscle, teeth, etc.

All we need is to eat the right kind of food slowly, chewing it well—our digestive organs take it up into the blood and the blood carries it all through the body, to every little nook and corner.

If some one would ask you, "Is Grape-Nuts good for loose teeth?" you'd probably say, "No, I don't see how it could be." But a woman in Ontario writes:

"For the past two years I have used Grape-Nuts Food with most excellent results. It seems to take the place of medicine in many ways, builds up the nerves and restores the health generally.

"A little Grape-Nuts taken before retiring soothes my nerves and gives sound sleep." (Because it relieve irritability of the stomach nerves, being a predigested food.)

"Before I used Grape-Nuts my teeth were loose in the gums. They were so bad I was afraid they would some day all fall out. Since I have used Grape-Nuts I have not been bothered any more with loose teeth.

"All desire for pastry has disappeared and I have gained in health, weight and happiness since I began to use Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Get the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

SOO LINE TO EXTEND TO SEATTLE

POSITIVE ANNOUNCEMENT OF EXTENSION IS MADE IN NEW YORK.

New York, Oct. 4.—Announcement is made in New York that the Soo line will build to Seattle. Former Congressman Jefferson M. Levy, acknowledged head of the Canadian Pacific pool, said to a group of newspaper men:

"You can state definitely that the Canadian Pacific management intends to extend the Soo road to Seattle.

"This is the reply to James J. Hill's proposed extensions in Canada and bears out Sir William Van Horne's recent statement in New York to the effect that for every mile of railroad Mr. Hill builds in Canada the Canadian Pacific will build two in the United States."

Fifth Line to Coast.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—Next spring through arrangement between the Soo line, the Canadian Pacific and the Spokane & International, the Twin Cities will have the shortest route to Spokane, by at least sixty miles and by several hours time. An extension of this line to the coast would give St. Paul a fifth transcontinental and a route to Seattle that would make other lines take notice. This is undoubtedly the plan of the Canadian Pacific directors, although extension of one of the North Dakota lines between the Great Northern and the international border has been suggested as a fine route with a rich and undeveloped territory from which to build up traffic.

Blow to Hill Lines.

Decision by the Soo line to have its own rails from St. Paul to the coast, thus adding another Twin City-Pacific coast route, is expected to create dismay in the Hill camp, it is said by railroad men. Already the Soo has given the Great Northern a body blow in bisecting all of the feeders which the Hill road had stretched northward in North Dakota like a lot of tentacles to scoop in the wheat and other products for haul over its lines to the Minneapolis and St. Paul market. The Soo came along and shoved a cross-country line between the Great Northern and Canada, clear from Thief River Falls to Kenmare, N. D., with a line planned to Duluth and an extension farther westward.

The Soo crosses no less than eleven of these feeders in its new route across North Dakota. Its Garrison line farther south, cuts off four of these feeders by making the same stations or by crossing the lines.

Serve Fine Territory.

Continued to the coast, either the Garrison or the Thief River Falls lines would serve some of the finest territory in the Northwest. It would pass through grazing, agricultural, coal, mineral and timber lands and would effectually shut out the Great Northern by dividing the territory in two which the Hill lines has left between the rails of their own systems and the boundary. By building an extension half way between the Canadian Pacific's Canadian route and the Great Northern's American route the Soo would cut in half the distance which the shippers as far north as the boundary now have to make overland to reach the Great Northern road. Inasmuch as the Soo would have an even chance for business from the country which will lie between its own lines and the Great Northern and it will control absolutely the territory lying northward to the Canadian Pacific route, the Soo and its parent company, the Canadian Pacific, will practically cinch the traffic from a wide belt of country by the completion of the new line.

JAMES E. FORD

In these days of the strenuous house cleaning, when, more than ever, there has been a wide-spread demand for honest men in public office, it is agreeable to turn to the office of county auditor of Red Lake county and find such a man as James E. Ford. There have been carping critics with selfish motive who have said he should not be returned to the auditorship this fall and it was because he could not be cajoled, browbeaten or threatened from an exact responsibility to all the people of the county. No man comes forward to say that the affairs of this important office are not rightly administered, carefully, conscientiously, economically. Do the people of this county want their books kept in this manner? When a business man has a capable and honorable emyloye, does he make a change for an unknown quantity? No, he keeps him just as long as he will stay.

It is not possible, hunting Red Lake county from end to end, to find a more competent and capable man than Mr. Ford. His ability has a wide recognition thruout the state as one of its best auditors. Does Red Lake county want more or is it that the people are anxious to cast aside a good man just for the mere fun of experimenting. It wouldn't be business-like, reasonable or sensible.

Better known perhaps as "Jim" Ford, everyone who has visited at the auditor's office during his incumbency, has found him gracious and courteous in his treatment of all, and ever attentive to his duties. The man who votes against him stutifies himself and lessens the chances of a correct administration of the office.

Red Lake county may congratulate itself in having Jim Ford as auditor and should move as one man for his re-election.

The heat of the campaign should temper the weather and give us a fine fall.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

And it would were it not for that continuous frost, A. L. Cole.

Thief River Falls democrats and republicans have banded to vote only for candidates who are pledged to keep their town in the county seat fight. They are working for O'Brien. The inference is easy and certain.

When McCleary learned that W. S. Hammond was only too anxious to meet him in joint debate, he sidestepped even quicker than he would vote himself another European trip at the government's expense and that's going some.

Thief River Falls has organized against all the rest of the county. The rest of the county should remember it when it when it sees a Thief River Falls tag on the candidate. The tag will have the imprint of the News' and Press' approval.

They had a public meeting in Thief River Falls last week and organized regardless of party lines to vote only for those who would wear a Thief River Falls collar. Neither democrat or republican, no matter what part of the county he comes from, can expect anything there unless he first pledges himself to do as that town wants him to.

John B. O'Brien makes but one pledge to the voters of Red Lake county and is that if he is elected county auditor he will do his duty as an official —Thief River Falls News.

O'Brien couldn't get the indorsement of the News unless John Eastman had been told that O'Brien was a Thief River Falls man with all that implies. He must have given some pledge to Thief River Falls.

The Thief River Press and News, both republican papers, are not allowed to print the political announcements of Thomas Germo and Fred Richards both republicans, because they come from Red Lake Falls. Say, you fellows up there how do you like to be chained down and will your guardians remove your chains after election and allow you to play around in your own yards occasionally?

HE HAD CONTRIBUTED.

The editor of the Corcordia, Kan., Empire, having been solicited to make a contribution of $1 to the republican congressional campaign, made the followowing reply in his paper:

"We have recently completed the building a house at a cost of something over $4,000, and for every foot of lumber, every pane of glass, every sack of cement, every pound of nails and, in fact, for every bit of material that went into it we made a good, liberal contribution, thru the trusts that control them, and we guess we've done our share."

TWO VIEWS OF HEARST.

Arthur Brisbane in the New York Times: Hearst has made dishonest wealth disreputable throughout the nation. He has convinced the people that the rule of organized capital is not American government or honorable government. He has been the greatest creator of intelligent dissatisfaction, the basis of improvement, this country has ever seen.

Hearst has made innumerable fights in the interest of the people at his own expense, with great expenditure of money and of personal energy. Various trusts have been fought by him through the courts and up to the supreme court. He certainly has the honor of being hated more deeply by the public enemies of this country than any other man in it. A mere enumeration of the law suits that he has begun and prosecuted on behalf of the public welfare fills out a considerable pamphlet.

Mr. Hearst is already the greatest awakener and director of public opinion and of public anger against injustice that the country has seen in many years.

In the way of actual good, Hearst has accomplished much by his influence in increasing the distribution of money.

He has sided with workmen in just fights against corporation employers and has helped them to win. This means that additional money has been divided among the families of working people instead of being added to dividends on watered stocks.

Tens of millions a year are added to the incomes of wives and mothers in this country because of Hearst's activity in promoting the ligitimate distribution of wealth.

New York Times, (Dem.): It is fitting and, indeed, a manifest duty, in connection with the publication of Mr. Brisbane's eulogy, to sit down calmly and dispassionately the simple facts respecting, Hearst, the force. They are substantially as follows: As a journalist, though keen, enterprising and resourceful, he is a burning disgrace to the craft; as a politician, though shrewd and at times even sagacious, he is no more scrupulous than the basest of those whom he has stigmatized as criminals; as a partisan, though earnest and efficient in appealing to the masses, he is a traitor; as an officeholder he is pre-eminent in a shameful neglect of his duties; as an agitator, his delight consists in reveling in the indictment of evil passions; as a dual personality, though possessed of many engaging qualities, he is utterly devoid of character, so unsteady in even his own recklessness, so faithfully disregardful of moral responsibility, so addicted to detestable practices in efforts to gratify his ambitions, so sinfully persistent in stirring the caldron of discontent, envy and hatred as to be a living and glaring reproach to American civilization.

HAD HER WISH; GOT THE FISH.

Rescued from a Huckster Bad, This Was a Lucky, Lucky Shad.

She was a woman fair to see, of tender heart; he was a husky huckster man whose stock in trade was shad. He swung a six-pound fish aloft and begged that she would buy; she felt a thrill run down her back; a tear was in her eye. "That shad's alive," the woman cried; "it makes my blood run chill. I'll buy it from you here and now. Accept the dollar bill."

The monger took the bill, of course; the lady got her fish; but never she at any time thought of a chafing dish. "Poor shad," she said in soothing tones, "I know you're living yet." And straightway to the pier she went and threw it in the wet.

All of which, according to a veracious reporter, occurred at Thirty-ninth street, near Broadway, yesterda. The lady is a member of the S. P. C. A., and when she saw a cruel man peddling a live shad she demanded that he desist. He refused, whereupon she bought the fish, and, wrapping it in a piece of paper, took it to the North river and returned it to its native element.—New York Times.

This Girl Is a Baseball "Sharp."

Because many women who attend baseball games are credited with silly remarks about plays it does not follow that all the freshly laundered summer girls who sit in the grandstand are ignorant of the sport, says the New York Press. On the contrary, some of them have a good knowledge of the intricacies. What's more, there are girls who can play ball, despite a popular impression. Miss Marion Reynolds often has been asked to play baseball with youths in Belfast, Me. In the Eastern college she attended she threw a ball 181 feet. When the story was doubted by her friends at home she confounded them by hurling the regulation horsehide sphere 182 1-2 feet. And there is nothing about her to suggest the "emancipated" being.

LYCEUM ENTERTAINNENTS

Retz-Nehrbas Combination Comes on October 30.

The dates for the Midland Lyceum Bureau's entertainments to be given in this city during the winter, have been fixed as follows: Retz-Nehrbas Combination, Oct. 30; J. Lorenzo Zwickey, Nov. 21; Emily Waterman Concert company, Dec. 18; Hon. G. A. Gearbard, Jan. 4; Colonial Saxaphome Quartette, Feb. 11.

Of the first entertainment the Bureau makes the following statement:

When two are the "whole show" why more? Miss Retz has given much time to evenings alone. She sings and reads beautifully, playing her own accompanyments. Her reputation all over the west and south, where she has been, is one of absolute satisfaction. Miss Dorothy Nehrbas sings and plays the violin beautifully, and also plays accompanyments. She has toured the country generally for six years, always pleasing immensely. The combination then is exactly as if four people came to you instead of two, and to you is given the saving in cost. One unique part of their program is a vocal duet, Miss Retz playing the accompanyment and Miss Nehrbas playing violin obligato. A complete program of theirs will show all the variety and combination of a four-member music company, which would include a reader, a violinist, two sopranos and an accompanist. We bespeak for this company, which is offered in lieu of the usual entertainer, a hearty reception. Friends of both these ladies will be pleased to hear of their combination. Both are ladies of charming personality, vivacious, winning, magnetic.—Midland Lyceum Bureau

Since Truscott had undertaken to superintend those mournful monthly bursts of his, he had found himself able to conduct them with discretion. At any rate, they brought no open shame upon him. Truscott's wife was discretion itself, and if the poor man were always rather bleared about the eyes and puffy in the under eyelid when he came down to luncheon, she never showed that she had an inkling of its meaning. There was a polite fiction by virtue of which Billery was supposed to be engaged in writing in the morning, and he was excused from breakfast on that ground. It was, perhaps, the best way of dealing with him at the present phase of his disease, and, at all events, it had a great practical effect for the better upon his life and conduct. Billery never drank at all save once a month, and then always in the room allotted to him in Truscott's house. His host measured out for him on these monthly visits what he had himself described as "a moderate skinfull," though to tell the truth, the average man would have thought it a somewhat inordinate dose. But Billery, having consumed it, slept it off, was allowed to refresh himself with a whisky and soda in the morning, and then entered upon another month of combat.

Before he and Truscott started to motor up to town together the two men shook hands, and the host would say, "Another month, Hamilton?" and Billery would answer, "Yes. Word of honor." And the result of this regime was that Billery became another man to look at, and was gradually growing to be another man within. He earned, by light labor, enough for his simple needs, and, since his spare hours hung heavy on his hands, he began to read again and work a little at his long-neglected essays. His nose lost its too aggressive pink, his eyes regained their proper luster, and his pimples faded.

By the time midsummer had gone these signs were noticed by one susceptible heart. It had become a settles habit with him to run down by train for afternoon service at Lisle's church, and afterward to take tea with one of the score or so of friends he had down there. The pew he sat in commanded a view of the pew in which Belle Molloy had been sitting, and to that young lady's mind there was something rather particular in the way in which Billery raised his hat and bowed to her as she passed along the churchyard. Occasionally the lady would catch the gentleman's eye in the course of the service, and Miss Molloy would look demurely down in the direction of her own toes on the hassock or would gaze up at the Reverend Mr. Lisle with an aspect of devotion. The pulpit was one of the old three-deckers, and the parson, of course, preached from the upper deck. Miss Molloy sat rather near the pulpit, and the visual angle from her eye to the preacher's face was acute. The lady would have given almost anything she possessed to have known exactly what the expression looked like when she cast her own Irish eyes upward in that fashion, but, unhappily, it is not possible to look elsewhere and to scrutinize your own aspect in a mirror at the same time. Miss Molloy had tried hard, and on that one fact in optics she had an experimental certainty.

Miss Molloy was technically on the shelf, but though she had looked forward with courage and resignation to a single life—and who shall laugh at a woman's courage and resignation in such a case?—she felt no vocation for it: and, really, when one came to think of it, it was a little odd, to say the least, if a gentleman like Mr. Billery came down with regularity to that sleepy little place Sunday after Sunday afternoon the summer through with no ulterior purpose in his mind. And is some of Miss Molloy's friends thought Miss Molloy mature, it was certain that Mr. Billery was no chicken, and in respect to age the match could not be regarded as unsuitable.

On these and kindred subjects Miss Molloy pondered deeply, and the result of her ponderings was that she and Billery met a great deal oftener than they would have done by mere accident. And the result was that they became great friends, and that Billery oftener took "tay" with Miss Molloy than with any other person in the parish, the mild festivity being always presided over by a judicious sheep dog, who gave Billery ample opportunity for the utterance of many tender speeches, which the obtuse and blundering creature never made. Nevertheless, there went abroad an impression that Billery was paying his addresses to Miss Molloy, and was laying siege in form before demanding the surrender of the fortress; and there was no person in the parish who was more fully inspired with that belief than Miss Molloy, and no person in the parish more profoundly unconscious that such a belief existed than Mr. Billery.

CHAPTER XVI.

Truscott's affairs prospered exceedingly, and he now became a personage. Could he have found time for such a life there was no form of pleasant and little harmful social dissipation which was not open to him, and even as things went he was companioned on occasion by the men who ruled the world in his days—cabinet ministers, thinkers, painters, musicians, politicians of all shades and grades. His Saturday was still his only real holiday, though he had a tribe of led-captains and lieutenants to whom he might safely enough have entrusted his fortunes from time to time. But just as the perfect general must think for all, and plan for all, so must the perfect editor, and if ever there was to be a time of rest and ease for Truscott he knew that it was not yet.

He was strolling in his own grounds with an after-dinner cigar, and his wife, who was still but half-emerged from the courtship stage, was walking beside him with both hands resting lightly on his arm. The full moon was riding slowly up the sky, and they stood still to watch the patterns woven on its luminous face by the boughs and climbing plants it passed, and, in its passage, revealed like so many silhouettes. It was a week later than Alexis Brangwyn's visit, full spring, and there was a nightingale who had taken up his quarters somewhere in the neighborhood. They had gone out in the tranquil, perfumed night to hear him, if haply he should sing. The moon rose slowly, showing up pattern after pattern of dark tracery, and suddenly the figure of the bird was seen, crowning the design. They caught sight of it at the same instant, and warned each other to silence. At the moment at which the mounting moon had silhouetted the bird's figure at its very center, the beak opened, the throat swelled, and a triumph of song flowed out upon the quiet night. There was a garden seat close by, and they sought it in silence, their footsteps falling quietly on the soft turf. And there they sat just breathing, with the wife's head resting on the husband's shoulder, and the woman yearned and thrilled as women will until the bird's song was over and the husband smoked his cigar and forgot the music in the first three minutes. There was a big political question on the board just then, and vigorous action would be called for in a day or two. But this was not the hour for decision, and Truscott, lulled by the sense of leisure he had cultivated all day long by the effects of an excellent dinner and by the half-heard music, fell into a doze. His wife's reverie tended in that direction too, and suddenly they were startled by angry voices near at hand. They had neither of them heard the footsteps of the speakers as they approached, and the first sound which reached their ears was a snarling phrase in French. The village road was immediately beneath them as they sat.

"Animal!" said the voice, "go back."

"But, see you," said another voice, "I will not go back until I have what I come for. You would not be of any use in the town. Very well. I follow you to the country."

"I told thee, turtle that thou art," said the first voice, "that I had business here, and that I had no time to attend to thee before midnight. Go back, and wait me there."

"Mais vos-tu," the second began, but the first snapped across it.

"Insolent scoundrel, do you dare address me in that manner?"

"Yes," said the other, "I dare address you as you address me. There are you rolling in gold, and here am I with scarce a covering to my nakedness. And I know as much as you do."

"Bah!" said the other.

"Do I not? Eh bien, but I know enough to hang him; and you can do no more. And he is your milch cow, and you draw from him your gold and your wine and your fine clothes and your fine apartments. And where am I? I—I!—I!—who know enough to hang him and to send you to the galleys."

"You have been drinking," was the answer. "Go back and wait for me."

"I will not go back. I have nothing to go back with. I had in my pouch when I saw you at the railway station but one-half crown of the money of this benighted country. I have spent that on the journey."

"The greater fool you," was the scornful response. "Understand now. Remark me well; I will not have you pursuing me—I will not have you demanding things of me. You may find your way back how you like. You will have no help from me. Come to me at the hour I dictate, and at the place I dictate, and I will do something for you if I choose, and nothing for you if I choose. And if you are not satisfied with that, then go to him, my friend, and see how you will fare. You—with one-half the record of your life in jail. You will do well to threaten him. You do pretty well to threaten me, my faith! But him! It is of insolence the most audacious."

"Give me enough to take me back to London."

"Not a centime. I warned you and you would not listen."

"Come. Enough to take me to London. Then I will wait."

"You will wait, my friend! It is true. You will wait, and you will wait long. You come to me and you think I shall be afraid. That amuses me. Well, you shall stretch your legs."

"Prends garde!" said the other. "Prends garde! I may be dangerous."

"Dangerous? Go! Canaille! Go!"

The listeners to this extraordinary dialogue heard a crunching sound as if a man had swung round upon his heel, and almost at the same moment there rose on the night air an appalling shriek, and the sound of a heavy fall followed. Then came the sound of three or four blows, each accompanied by a husky panting expulsion of the breath.

The tragic conclusion of the drama befell with such an astonishing and unexpected swiftness that Truscott had no time to cry out before the thing was done, but now he raised his voice in a stentorian call of "Murder! Help here! Help!" Almost at his first cry voices sounded in answer, and the noise of racing feet came from either end of the lane. Truscott, crying to his wife, "Run home dear," and racing as if for dear life toward the gate at the foot of the grounds, groped in his waistcoat pocket for a police whistle he commonly carried there and sounded a shrill peal again and again. The moon was high above the treetops by this time, and the May night was nigh as clear as day.

There was a man's body lying in the road with the face staring up at the sky and the hands cast abroad. There was no sign about the body, neither breath nor pulse. The village was but a little place, and in a few moments nearly all the inhabitants were on the scene—private residents, parson, doctor, coachmen, gardeners, laborers, with a small crowd of frightened women huddling behind them.

The doctor's verdict was given after a moment's examination. "All over here!"

Sane men unshipped a gate, lifted the body on to it, and bore it to the local inn. The figure was that of a well-nurtured, bulky man of middle age. He was well dressed; he carried a gold watch and wore several finger rings which looked as if they might be of value. There was a pocket-book containing a small wad of banknotes, which from their condition appeared to have been handled on the racecourse. There were a few loose gold and silver coins in the trousers pocket, but there was no scrap of writing by which the stranger might have been identified.

Truscott, who had been the first to raise the alarm, came under the examination of the local constable. He had hear voices of two men quarreling. They spoke in French, a language he read familiarly, but did not easily understand when spoken rapidly. One man had demanded of the other, with menaces, money enough to carry him back to London. The other refused contemptuously, and the deed followed.

Men with dogs and carrying lanterns with which to exploit the obscurer shadows, spread themselves in all directions, halloaing to each other. The whole country was alive. The neighboring police were warned by telephone. The railway people were advised, and kept a keen look-out. The search went on for half the night, but nothing came of it. The searchers returned by twos and threes, and lingered in groups to talk the thing over. There was no possibility of the escape of the assailant. That was a point upon which everybody was agreed. But the Sunday went by, and the Monday and the Tuesday, and there was no news. The inquest was held in due course on the body of a man unknown, and a verdict of wilful murder was returned against some person unknown, and there the matter ended in a blank darkness which was never pierced.

GOV. UPHAM IS PRESIDENT.

Heads Wisconsin Immigration and Development Association.

At the annual meeting of the members of the Wisconsin Immigration and Development association, held at the Plankinton house club room, former Gov. W. H. Upham was chosen president by a unanimous vote of the board of directors. E. A. Benson of Milwaukee was re-elected vice president, G. W. Levis of Madison treasurer, and E. T. Wheelock of Milwaukee was continued in the office of secretary for another year. The board of directors as now constituted is made up of the following members: E. A. Benson, Milwaukee: G. D. Jones, Wausau; George W. Levis, Madison: James L. Gates, Milwaukee; George E. Kuntz, Ashland; Elmer Grimmer, Marinette; W. H. Upham, Marshfield; C. Ellingson, Hawkins; E. T. Wheelock, Milwaukee.

The association determined by resolution to raise a fund for the payment of the expenses for the coming year and appointed a committee for that purpose, of which B. F. McMillan is chairman.

A committee was also appointed to attempt to secure from the platform conventions of the parties soon to meet at Madison some recognition of the importance of the development movement begun by this association, the purpose being also to appeal to the legislature next winter to establish a bureau of industries and immigration like those maintained by other states that still have undeveloped resources.—W.

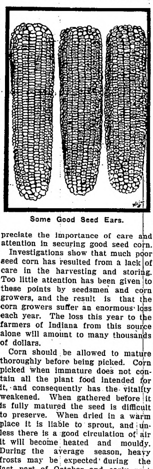
SEED CORN—ITS HARVESTING AND STORING

Careful Selection Will Insure Increased Yield Next Year—By G. I. Christie, B. S. A., Indiana Experiment Station.

In the seven states classed as the central west, more than 46,000,000 acres of land are planted to corn annually. Allowing one bushel of seed for each seven acres, about 6,630,000 bushels of seed corn are required to plant this area. Now when we realize that the stand, yield and quality of corn depends in a large measure on the seed used, we can readily appreciate the importance of care and attention in securing good seed corn.



Some Good Seed Ears.

Investigations show that much poor seed corn has resulted from a lack of care in the harvesting and storing. Too little attention has been given to these points by seedsmen and corn growers, and the result is that the corn growers suffer an enormous loss each year. The loss this year to the farmers of Indiana from this source alone will amount to many thousands of dollars.

Corn should be allowed to mature thoroughly before being picked. Corn picked when immature does not contain all the plant food intended for it, and consequently has the vitality weakened. When gathered before it is fully matured the seed is difficult to preserve. When dried in a warm place it is liable to sprout, and unless there is a good circulation of air it will become heated and mouldy. During the average season, heavy frosts may be expected during the last part of October and early part of November. At this time the corn on the stalk contains a high per cent. of moisture and a few degrees of frost will injure the vitality. Therefore the best time to gather seed corn is when it is thoroughly matured and before the heavy frosts.

A plan to be recommended and a feasible one is that of going through the field or "seed corn patch" after the corn has matured and before the general harvest, and selecting the seed from the stalk. The plan of selecting seed at the time of general harvest is objectionable because of the fact that many times the work is done late in the season, and at this time, in the hurry, the care of the seed corn is apt to be neglected.

When seed corn is selected in the field the parent stalk can be studied. Experiments have shown this to be a very important part in the production of high grade corn. The stalks from which seed ears are selected should be of medium size, strong at the base, tapering gradually to the tassel, and should have a large leaf development, as the leaf is the laboratory of the plant. The stalk should also stand erect and be free from smut or insect attack. Stalks with suckers are objectionable. Always select ears of good size and quality, which have straight rows of regular sized kernels and which most nearly represent the type desired. These ears should be at a convenient height of four and one-half to five feet on the stalks and should be attached to the stalk by a shank medium in length and strength. The ear when matured should break over and hang with the tip downward.

Ears in an upright position are objectionable owing to the fact that they are more or less subjected to the rains and hot sun, which injures the vitality. Experiments carried on at the Illinois station show that seed from ears high on the stalk and in an upright position yielded almost ten bushels less corn per acre than did seed from ears hanging in the natural position. Experiments also proved that the ears growing high on the stalk and in an upright position, when planted, gave stalks a very high per cent, of which bore ears in a similar manner.

For the reasons that ears so located are inconvenient to harvest, have low vitality and low producing power, they should never be selected for seed.

Perhaps there is no way in which corn is injured more than through improper storing. Corn as it comes from the field contains a high per cent. of moisture, and if subjected to a high or low temperature will be materially injured. Too many people overlook this fact, and the result is that we have large quantities of seed corn with low vitality.

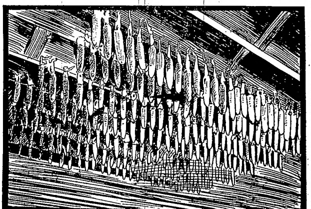
The above table gives the results of germination tests made at the Purdue experiment station. A test of five kernels from each individual ear was made.

The most critical time in the handling of seed corn is the first month after it has been picked. Owing to the large amount of moisture contained by the corn at the time of harvest it is necessary to store it in a dry, well ventilated place and in such a way that each ear will be exposed to a free circulation of air. Seed corn should always be stored in the ear, but never in barrels, boxes or sacks or above large quantities of grain.



A Good Way to Dry Seed Corn.

A satisfactory method and one adopted by many farmers is to tie eight or ten ears in a string with binding twine, and hang them in an open shed where the sun will not shine on them, but where the air can circulate freely about them. Another plan is to tie the ears together in pairs and hang them over a wire. By these methods the ears will be allowed to dry out rapidly and they will be free of the danger of heavy frosts in November and early December.

A method used by a large number of seedsmen is that shown in our illustration. These racks may be built in any room, and are convenient and very satisfactory.

NO REST NIGHT OR DAY.

With Irritating Skin Humor—Hair Began to Fall Out—Wonderful Result From Cuticura Remedies.

"About the latter part of July my whole body began to itch. I did not take much notice of it at first, but it began to get worse all the time, and then I began to get uneasy and tried all kinds of baths and other remedies that were recommended for skin humors; but I became worse all the time. My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to my whole body; and I kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured, and my hair stopped falling out. WHO SHE WAS

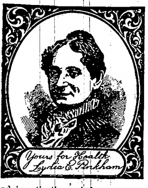
SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM

And a True Story of How the Vegetable Compound Had Its Birth and How the "Panic of '73" Caused it to be Offered for Public Sale in Drug Stores.

This remarkable woman, whose maiden name was Estes, was born in Lynn, Mass., February 9th, 1819, coming from a good old Quaker family. For some years she taught school, and became known as a woman of an alert and investigating mind, an earnest seeker after knowledge, and above all, possessed of a wonderfully sympathetic nature.



In 1843 she married Isaac Pinkham, a builder and real estate operator, and their early married life was marked by prosperity and happiness. They had four children, three sons and a daughter

In those good old fashioned days it was common for mothers to make their own home medicines from roots and herbs, nature's own remedies—calling in a physician only in specially urgent cases. By tradition and experience many of them gained a wonderful knowledge of the curative properties of the various roots and herbs.

Mrs. Pinkham took a great interest in the study of roots and herbs, their characteristics and power over disease. She maintained that just as nature so bountifully provides in the harvest-fields and orchards vegetable foods of all kinds; so, if we but take the pains to find them, in the roots and herbs of the field there are remedies expressly designed to cure the various ills and weaknesses of the body, and it was her pleasure to search these out, and prepare simple and effective medicines for her own family and friends.

Chief of these was a rare combination of the choicest medicinal roots and herbs found best adapted for the cure of the ills and weaknesses peculiar to the female sex, and Lydia E. Pinkham's friends and neighbors learned that her compound relieved and cured and it became quite popular among them.

All this so far was done freely, without money and without price, as a labor of love.

But in 1873 the financial crisis struck Lynn. Its length and severity were too much for the large real estate interests of the Pinkham family, as this class of business suffered most from fearful depression, so when the Centennial year dawned it found their property swept away. Some other source of income had to be found.

At this point Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made known to the world.

The three sons and the daughter, with their mother, combined forces to restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their woman friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a gross of bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkham sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until to-day Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in its manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but not till she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received careful study, and the details, including symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of information regarding the treatment of woman's ills, which for authenticity and accuracy can hardly be equaled in any library in the world.

With Lydia E. Pinkham worked her daughter-in-law, the present Mrs. Pinkham. She was carefully instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence.

To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when its originator passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued it, and nothing in the work shows when the first Lydia E. Pinkham dropped her pen, and the present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, took it up. With women assistants, some as capable as herself, the present Mrs. Pinkham continues this great work, and probably from the office of no other person have so many women been advised how to regain health. Sick women, this advice is "Yours for Health" freely given if you only write to ask for it.

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for women's ailments, and the fitting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

Aunt Alicia's Prize Fighter

By George Fred Lawson

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The two boxers led, feinted and sparred. The dull thud of the gloves as they struck, and the patter and scraping of the men's feet mingled with their deep breathing and produced the effect of a gigantic struggle. It wasn't. It was only a friendly match at young Fitz's training quarters. Finally they stopped, both panting. Then Clancey spoke.

"I guess I kin train a bit even 'f I can't fight no more," he said.

He had been one of the best middle-weights of his time, but when he got to making a little money he went the way of many other good fighters; he let whisky get the better of him. As he relieved his mind he turned suddenly, almost knocking over a ten-year-old bit of masculinity in knee pants, flannel blouse and 'sneakers."

Teddy scrambled hastily out of the way. Clancey glared. Kids weren't allowed around the training camp.

"Hey, youse," he growled, "wot yer doin' 'round 'ere?"

And he reached out a rough hand in a vain endeavor to grasp the nimble Teddy by the back of his neck. Teddy slid into a corner and Clancey stumbling over a pail, sprawled his length on the floor and bumped his chin. Teddy laughed. Clancey swore and started for him again, this time with fire in his eye. Clancey's partner threw his gloves into a corner and spoke sharply.

"Hold on a moment, Clancey," he said, "I think I know that kid."

The kid looked grateful.

"Now, here, what's your name, my boy?"

"Teddy Baldwin, sir."

"Oh, well, they don't allow little boys around here. I'm afraid you'll have to get out. Perhaps some other time you can come, but not now."

Teddy whimpered, Clancey grinned, then swore. His partner frowned.

"What's the matter, kid?" he asked.

"I—I wanted to see young Fitz."

"Well," muttered Clancey, "if that's all yer want, yer've seen 'im, so yer'd better run off home."

Teddy brightened and gazed round-eyed at the other man.

"Is—is that him?" he said.

"It sure is," grinned Clancey, "now run along wid yer."

Teddy backed out of the door, his eye still on the object of his admiration, and started slowly up the road. "Young Fitz" turned to Clancey with a quizzical smile.

"Clancey," he said, "you're the limit."

Teddy was wildly excited and tore along the road in the direction of his aunt's house, where he was staying for the summer. His enthusiasm was undiminished when he reached the door and he burst into his aunt's presence like a colt into a clover pasture, nearly frightening that young lady into hysterics.

"Good gracious, Teddy!" she exclaimed, as soon as she could gather her scattered wits. "Whatever is the matter?"

"I've seen him, Aunty! I've seen him! And he waved his hand at me."

Teddy jumped for the very joy of it. Now, Alicia Baldwin, despite her 22 years of life and her three years' service as a contributor to the Monthly Record, did not understand children. At least she did not understand Teddy. Therefore, she failed to share his enthusiasm when he announced, in shrill tones, that he had seen young Fitz, the prize fighter. Instead, she frowned.

"Teddy," she said, "didn't I tell you to keep away from that place? Good little boys shouldn't associate with prize fighters. They—they're brutes."

"This one ain't," emphasized Teddy, in defense of his hero. "He's all right. He ain't no bum. He's as good as Mr. Van Hausen, an'—"

"Teddy!"

"Well, he is, aunty, an'—an' he's better looking, too."

"Teddy Baldwin," she said, "come here. If I ever hear of you being with that man again I'll send you straight home to your mother. Do you understand?"

Teddy was humbled and hurt. Besides, he didn't want to be sent home, so he promised. The next day he was exploring among the rocks on the beach when he saw young Fitz running easily along the sand, clad only in a jersey and a pair of funny little white pants.

"What's the matter, Teddy?" asked the fighter, seeing that something was wrong.

"Gee!" exclaimed Teddy with more force than elegance. "If my Aunty Alice sees me with you, she won't do a thing to me. She'll send me home."

"What do you mean?"

"She said she'd send me home if I went 'round with you. She said prize fighters were brutes and that you wasn't fit to associate with."

"Oh!" exclaimed young Fitz. Then he smiled peculiarly. "Well, Teddy, perhaps she's right. Perhaps they are brutes."

"But I don't care," hastened Teddy. "I s'pose she got mad 'cause I said you wasn't no bum, 'n' that you was as good as Mr. Van Hausen."

Young Fitz did not reply immediately. He was trickling the warm sand between his toes and thinking.

"Teddy," he said, finally, "you're a bad boy to disobey your aunt."

Teddy's lips quivered. The fighter weakened.

"I didn't mean that," he said, quickly. "I didn't mean that, my boy. You're a brick and I like you. We'll be friends. We'll—What's the matter, Teddy?" noticing the look of alarm that had appeared on the lad's face.

"Gee! there she is now," mournfully replied Teddy. "It's all up with me." And he gazed at the very pretty young woman who was standing a hundred yards away looking haughtily and accusingly at the pair on the rocks.

"Is—is that your aunt?" asked young Fitz.

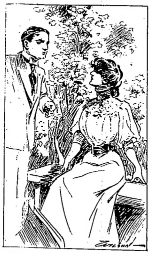
"Yes, that's her, all right," replied Teddy, sadly.

"Never mind, my boy. Brace up. I guess we can fix it all right. Now run along. She's waiting for you." And with a pat on the shoulder he sent the lad scurrying up the beach.

"Holy Moses!" he chuckled, as he trotted slowly back to the quarters. "I pictured her to be 40 and scrawny. Instead she's as pretty as a picture."

"Teddy," she said, "you needn't pack your things. If you'll promise to keep away from the beach I'll give you another trial."

Teddy, with a whoop of delight, rushed out into the garden. An hour later Alicia discovered him there, deeply engrossed in labored efforts to decipher the sporting news of the morning's copy of the Universe. He tried to hide it as she approached, but she secured it and gently reprimanded him. As she seated herself in the grape arbor the paper fell open upon her lap. She started slightly at the bold, black headlines staring her in the face. She read and allowed her eyes to follow the closely printed lines below, and, in an instant she was absorbed in the story of the preparations of young Fitz for the battle for the lightweight championship of the world and a purse of $20,000. She was about to turn the pages when a rustle behind her caused her to start guiltily.



She Was Frigid and Embarrassed.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Baldwin, Teddy must have lost this the other day."

The speaker proffered a small gold pin which Alicia knew well, as she had given it to Teddy herself on his birthday. But she made no reply. She was frigid and embarrassed. Her face was hot and her hands cold. She saw him glance at the fallen paper and smile, and for it could have struck him to the ground. Young Fitz laid the pin upon the bench, lifted his cap and disappeared. Then she collapsed. Teddy's words rang in her ears:

The mail next day brought a note that made Alice curl her lip. It read:

"My Dear Miss Baldwin: Please don't blame Teddy. It was not his fault. I went to him. In future I shall respect your wishes regarding him. Sincerely,

"YOUNG FITZ."

Alicia bit her lip and glanced at Teddy sitting wet-eyed opposite her at the breakfast table.

"He's as good as Mr. Van Hausen and he's better lookin'."

The words would not leave her and Alicia, the censor of Teddy, flew to her little den and had a good cry, for which, afterward, she hated herself.

That afternoon Alicia donned one of her prettiest gowns and determined on a long walk on the shore. She was lecturing the redoubtable Teddy upon the use of carefulness with his possessions when the bell rang and a note was handed her. She opened it and read:

"Dear Miss Baldwin: This will introduce to you Mr. Morgan Wright, one of our special staff writers. He is at present at the training quarters of young Fitz, who is soon to fight for the world's championship. He is preparing a special article for us and we wish you to work in collaboration with him and give us about 5,000 words on the training of a great pugilist from a woman's point of view. Sincerely,

"THE EDITORS."

It was from the Record. Her cheeks were red as she glanced up from the note, but they turned suddenly white as she saw young Fitz standing before her. She felt giddy. Teddy glanced apprehensively from one to the other. He noticed it and smiled.

"You won't be sent home this time, Teddy," he said, "and perhaps you may come with us this afternoon and see the real young Fitz."

"But you—"

"No, I'm not. Clancey is such a joker," he continued, turning to Alicia.

Teddy sulked.

Alicia dropped limply into a chair.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

Nervous debility is the common name for what the doctors term neurasthenia. It is characterized by mental depression, fits of the "blues," or melancholy, loss of energy and spirits. The patient's eyes become dull, the pink fades from the cheeks, the memory becomes defective so that it is difficult to recall dates and names at will. Some of these symptoms only may be present or all of them. The remedy lies in toning up the nervous system and there is no medicine better adapted for this purpose than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Jane J. Davies, of No. 314 Warren street, Scranton, Pa., says: "Some years ago I became greatly reduced in health and strength and my nervous system became so debilitated that I felt wretched. I could not rest or sleep well at night and woke up as weary and languid in the morning as I was when I went to bed. My head ached in the morning and often there was a pain in my right side which was worse when I sat down. My nerves were on edge all the time, every little noise bothered me and I was generally miserable. Then I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, as my husband had taken them with good results, and they did wonders for me. Now I have no more pain in my side, no more headaches, I sleep well and feel strong and able to do my work."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured Mrs. Davies and they can do just as much for other weak, pale, ailing men or women who are slipping into a hopeless decline. They strike straight at the root of all common diseases caused by poor and impoverished blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

RHEUMATISM
TROUBLESOME PAINS AND ACHES

While Rheumatism is usually worse in Winter because of the cold and dampness of a changing atmosphere, it is by no means a Winter disease entirely. Persons in whose blood the uric acid, which produces the disease, has collected, feel its troublesome pains and aches all the year round. The cause of Rheumatism is a sour, acid condition of the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter, which the natural avenues of bodily waste have failed to carry off. This refuse matter coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed by the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. Rheumatic persons are almost constant sufferers; the nagging pains in joints and muscles, are ever present under the most favorable climatic conditions, while exposure to dampness or an attack of indigestion will often bring on the severer symptoms even in warm, pleasant weather. Liniments, plasters, lotions, etc., relieve the pain and give the sufferer temporary comfort, but are in no sense curative; because Rheumatism is not a disease that can be rubbed away or drawn out with a plaster. S. S. S. is the best treatment for Rheumatism; it goes down into the blood and attacks the disease at its head, and by neutralizing the acid and driving it out, and building up the thin, sour blood, cures Rheumatism permanently. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, S. S. S. will not injure the system in the least. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice without charge.

CANDIDATES ARE OFF FOR THE SECOND HEAT

A Fierce Fight Will Be Waged Until Election Day Tuesday November Sixth.

Several Primary Candidates Fail to File But It Doesn't Simplify Matters.

Tuesday was the last day for the second filing and the lists are now made up. Until election day, but little more than two weeks away, November 6, a fierce fight will be waged, with party lines a far away secondary consideration.

The democrats and republicans of Thief River Falls have publicly and openly joined together to elect, regardless of political affiliation, only such candidates as will do their bidding in their county seat fight. Their chief fight is against County Auditor Ford and they will resort to every use of money and trickery to accomplish his defeat. The man they have agreed upon to do their bidding is John B. O'Brien of St. Hilaire. They care not that James E. Ford is the equal of any man in the county and with his experience, ability and integrity is in every way the man best suited to fill the office; they care nothing for the interests of the county at large; they do not care whether O'Brien has any fitness whatever for the office; all they want is any person who will do as they are commanded in the county seat fight. John B. O'Brien is that man. Openly have they said, democrats and republicans alike in Thief River Falls, that will support no man who is not pledged to them. They are supporting John B. O'Brien for county auditor. The conclusion is irresistable—John B. O'Brien is pledged to them, pledged to give them every assistance in his power or within the limits of his office if elected.

With intensity only second to their senseless hatred of James E. Ford, this beautiful combination of democrats and republicans have declared war against such democrats as Joe Perrault Dan Linnihan and Frank Jeffers: against such Republicans as Thomas Germ, Fred Richards, O. T. Tandberg and Charles Ecklund. They would force their own private candidates down the throats of democrats and republicans alike throughout the county.

Among the primary candidats who failed to file was Emil Zeh, democratic candidate for register of deeds. This leaves the fight between Frank Jeffers (vote for Jeffers) and E. L. Quist the Thief River Falls candidate. Also Mrs. J. J. Doe democratic candidate for superintendent of schools. This contest will be fought out by the regular republican nominee Fred Richards and H. T. McAnulty, independent.

Following is the Thief River Falls line up as declared for in their public meetings of combined democrats and circulated on cards about the county: John B. O'Brien, Karl M. Hanson, Earnest Quist, E. M. Stanton, Lewis L. Nelson, H. T. McAnulty, N. W. Tarrant and C. W. Johnson,

THE SEED GRAIN CONTEST

Will Be Held in Red Lake Falls November 30.

The seed grain contest, for which the children of Red Lake county have been preparing during the summer, will be decided November 30, at which time all contestants for the prizes are expected to bring in their samples to Red Lake Falls. There will be judges here from the state agricultural college at Minneapolis. The requirements of the contest call for the exhibition of a peck of wheat or oats and ten heads of the same and for corn 12 heads. The first prize is $200 for each of the three grains, $150 for the second and $50 for the third. A complimentary round trip to Minneapolis will be given to the winners. There are also prizes given by merchants aggregating $250. The contest will be open for two days, November 30 and December 1.

THE GOVERNOR WAS UNABLE TO SPEAK

Governor Johnson Visits Red Lake Falls but Had to Abandon His Speech.

Large Crowd Greets Him at the Depot —Reception Confined to Hand Shaking.

It was a matter of considerable regret that Governor Johnson was unable, for physical reasons, to deliver a speech on his brief visit to Red Lake Falls Monday afternoon but as he explained, he had delivered more than fifty speeches, many of them in the open air, and his voice had all but failed him.

The large crowd gathered to see, to hear and shake hands with Minnesota's chief executive, was entirely complimentary. Many of the stores of the city were closed and a fair share of the populace and quite a few from the surrounding country were present as the train arrived. The band also added to the enthusiasm.

Governor Johnson was introduced from the rear platform of the train and briefly acknowledged his pleasure at the kindness of the greeting. He humorously referred to having delivered a Fourth of July oration in Red Lake Falls some years ago and said he was surprised that any one should care to hear him again. He then begged the indulgence of his auditors for that he was unable to speak as his voice had suffered with constant use and he was fearful of the effect of the open air talking in view of the fact he had to deliver an extended address at Crookston the same evening. It was disappointing to those present as the governor was remembered as a most pleasing speaker and every body wanted to hear him again. During the balance of the trains stay, Governor Johnson met as many as possible, shaking hands with all who could reach him even to the school children.

Accompanying the governor were State Oil Inspector McDermott and and State Librarian John E. King and as the train pulled out the party was given a parting three cheers,

RURAL SCHOOL ADVANCE

Interesting Facts from Superintendent's Annual Report.

County superintendent McAnulty has forwarded his annual report to State Superintendent Olson and from it are gleaned some statistics that are interesting in their comparison with former years. In 1904 the total enrollment was 3928 and in 1906 it was 4458. In the number of scholars entitled to apportionment was 3338 and 3925; the number not entitled to apportionment, 590 and 373; number of districts having school eight months or more, 20 and 37; number of scholars drawing special state aid, 3 and 20; number of school libraries 6 and 35; number of districts in the county, 79 and 98. During the past two years eighteen districts have been organized in eleven towns, six of them have built school houses and the others will nearly all build this fall. During the past year twice as many first grade certificates have been issued as were issued last year. Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls have both built new buildings that are already filled with pupils.

AN INCREASE IN DAIRYING

Northern Minnesota Shows a Big Advance Over Last Year.

It may be said that dairying is making rapid progress in the northern part of the state for the output of the creameries the past season is fully 30 per cent larger than for the same season last year. While this increase is large it is none too large for every farmer could turn, profitably, his attention to dairying and make it the leading part of his farming and if such had been the case this year the increase would have been hundreds of percent over last year. While it is the fact that dairying can profitably be made the leading line of farming it is also true that it will not do to rush headlong into the industry without the proper foresight and precaution. Look around for information among the most successful dairymen in your own locality and follow along lines on which they have made a success; subscribe for three or four good dairy papers and get information from the most successful dairymen in the country. Successful dairymen will make more successful ones and those unsuccessful will retard the dairy business to the great loss of the farmers. If this is true regarding the dairymen it is doubly true when applied to the creameries. An unsuccessful creamery has such a bad influence that it takes years to recover from it. The successful one gives an impetus to the industry that leads forward to greater success. There have been creameries that have failed and the reason can be easily seen and it is not necessary to follow the same course when there are so many creameries that have made the business successful. Do not be in a hurry to sign a contract to any one who comes around to build you a creamery but go to the most successful creameries that you can find and follow along lines on which they have made their success. Remember that the better you organize the better your success and the best is not too good for us. Get all the information you can from all sources, organize the company yourself and elect the most efficient and trustworthy men you have to manage the business. The state state Dairy and Food Department stands ready at all times to help and questions will be answered by the experiment station or any of its branches in the state.

Joel G. Winkjer,
State Creamery Inspector.

RED LAKE FALLS TO JOIN THE LEAGUE

Commercial Club Votes to Enter Red River Valley Development Association.

Will Exploit the Valley in the Hope of Heading Immigration This Way.

Red Lake Falls will join hands with the other cities of the sixteen counties which go to make up the celebrated Red River valley and seek again to disclose to the world the wonderful fertility and resources of as splendid a section of farming, dairying and manufacturing country as exists in all the great northwest.

The scheme of publicity as outlined in the organization of the Red River Valley Immigration and Development league has been given in these columns in recent issues. Red Lake Falls was invited to join and the matter was taken up by the Commercial club after an address by Thos. R. Brown, secretary of the league. It was referred to the board of directors and, at a meeting held by the board last Friday night, it was unanimously voted to report favorably. That report was made to the club Monday evening and as unanimously approved. Thereupon Temporary Chairman Borchers appointed a committee, consisting of W. A. Schreiter, Dr. N. M. Watson and F. L. Farley, to solicit the amount necessary to carry on the campaign of publicity. The amount apportioned to Red Lake Falls was the sum of $30 a month for one year, or a total of $360. Of this amount Mayor J. A. Duffy has already offered to contribute $100, leaving $260 to be raised by the committee having the soliciting in charge. It should be an easy matter to raise the amount as the campaign as outlined, if properly carried out, should prove of immense value to the Red River valley and to Red Lake county and Red Lake Falls as an important part of the valley.

A WYLIE ELEVATOR CASE

Great Northern Would Injoin the Company From Building.

The Great Northern Railway company has begun an action in the district court of Red Lake county to restrain the Wylie Farmers Elevator and Mercantile company from erecting any buildings on its right of way at Wylie.

The complaint, which, with the summons, was served Tuesday, alleges that the Elevator company began the erection, October 8, of an elevator on the railroads right of way without authority of law, thereby committing a trespass that would cause the railroad company irreparable damage. It demands damages to the amount of $1000 and a perpetual injunction.

Accompanying the complaint was an order to show cause before Judge Watts next Monday why a temporary injunction should not issue during the pendency of the action. In the meantime all work by the elevator company is stayed.

THEY DREW ONE DOLLAR

Thieves Enter Red Lake Falls Postoffice Friday Night.

The Red Lake Falls postoffice was entered last Friday night and the big sum of one dollar was stolen.

The missing dollar was the only evidence left of the nocturnal intrusion, and the work is supposed to have been done by local parties. By some inadvertence a window at the rear of the postoffice had not been bolted and there was nothing to stand in the way of an easy entrance. The stolen dollar was in the till where the money was kept from the sale of stamps, On a shelf beneath was a tin box containing several dollars in change and in another place was a small sum of "chicken feed" the personal property of Mrs. Marshall, the postmistress. Neither of these two sums were molested, It it believed that professional thieves would not have overlooked these matters.

In view of the number of postoffice robberies which have been committed in various nearby towns recently, Mrs. Marshall has the postoffice safe decorated with a notice to the effect it is not locked as there is never more than a little loose change kept at the office over night.

There is absolutely no clue to the thieves and, unless they tell of it themselves, it will probably never be known who has offered himself as a candidate for the penitentiary.

FOR A PUBLIC LIBRARY

Movement Started to Have One in Red Lake Falls,

A plan is being formulated whereby Red Lake Falls may have a public library thus supplying an urgent need of the city.

In the furtherance of the project, Miss Baldwin, organizer for the State Commission on public libraries, was in the city last Friday in conference with the study club, to which organization the credit is due for the initiative in the matter. Miss Baldwin explained in what manner assistance could be obtained from the state and promised any help she was able to give. The club will endeavor to secure suitable rooms for library purposes and begin the collection of books.

Superintendent Chamberlain was of the opinion that perhaps an hundred books, which were unsuited to the school library, might be withdrawn and placed in a public library as a nucleus.

It is sincerely to be hoped the Study club may make a success of its undertaking and it should be assisted as far as possible by everyone in the city.

Vegetable pottery.

The use of dried fruits of trees, such as the gourd and the cocoanut, for holding water and liquid substances is familiar, but it is not generally known that cups, saucers, and jars to take the place of ordinary earthenware are made in the Orient of glutinous and plastic material entirely of the vegetable origin, which is molded and dried, says the literary Digest. Do you know that golden grain belt beer is without an equal as a family beverage? It is a liquid bread—pure and nourishing. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

GRANTS AMNESTY TO ALL OFFENDERS

GOV. TAFT ALSO OUTLINES DUTIES OF AMERICAN FORCES IN CUBA.

MAGOON ARRIVES IN HAVANA

CUBANS FAVORABLY IMPRESSED WITH PERSONALITY OF NEW GOVERNOR.

Havana, Oct. 11.—Charles E. Magoon, the newly appointed provisional governor of Cuba, arrived here yesterday. Coincident with his coming Gov. Taft gave out a general decree, proclaiming amnesty not only to the rebels but to all persons charged with political offenses or crimes in any way connected with the revolution.

The amnesty proclamation is of the most sweeping character possible, pardoning every serious crime arising from the revolution and its causes.

Grants Complete Pardon.

Complete pardon is granted to all persons involved in the killing of Congressman Villuendas at Cienfuegos, in September, 1905, as well as to everybody implicated in the killing of several rural guardsmen at Guanabacoa last February.

The proclamation serves notice that armed bands breaking the law after to-day will be proceeded against and denied amnesty.

The proclamation declares that the insurrectionary forces have been disbanded; that active and organized hostilities have ceased, and that it is the purpose of the provisional government to promote the restoration of normal conditions of peace favorable to the early re-establishment of Cuban self-government.

Duties of Soldiers Laid Down.

Gov. Taft also issued orders covering the attitude of the American marines and soldiers towards the people.

The officers of marines are advised that they are not expected to take part in an active way in the suppression of disorder, unless extreme emergency arises in which it is absolutely necessary for them to protect life and property. The duties of the marines are generally limited to tendering

Their Good Offices

Between the conflicting elements and the prevention of friction which, in the high state of tension between the political parties, is inevitable during the present crisis. The order says it is expected that the presence of the marines in the community would create such a sense of security that the rural guards and the police will be able to suppress any disorder which manifests itself. The order concludes as follows:

Avoid Hurting Cubans.

"The president of the United States deems it of the utmost importance that the American forces do not engage in conflicts with Cubans, but that disorders by Cubans be suppressed by Cubans. It is also expected that the officers and men, both of the army and the marine corps, will exert every effort to show all courtesies possible to Cubans of all parties and avoid in any way injuring their sensibilities."

The order makes it plain that the marines will remain in the island for the present, as an adjunct to the infantry.

Marines Are Removed.

The appearance of yellow fever at Cienfuegos yesterday caused the immediate issuance of an order by Col. Barnett, directing that the American marines be removed from that city. The men were marched aboard the ships.

The steamer Mascotte, with Mr. Magoon, Gen. J. Franklin Bell, Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Bacon, entered Havana harbor at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In the wake of the Mascotte came the battleship Texas, with a detachment of 300 marines, from Norfolk.

Greet Gov. Magoon.

A launch carrying Gov. Taft, Assistant Secretary Bacon and Capt. McCoy and Marti, aides to Gov. Taft, hurried out to the Mascotte. There followed another launch with Gen. Funston and his aide, and a third with a committee of Cuban newspaper men, who carried huge bouquets of flowers to present to the ladies.

Upon arriving at the palace Gov. Taft, Mr. Bacon and Mr. Magoon had a long conference.

Following this conference Mr. Magoon received the members of the press. He declined to discuss his plans for the future. While the arrival of the new governor was not attended by any marked demonstration, the Cubans appear to be favorably impressed by his personality.

STANDARD'S TITLE IS SHOWN

SOURCES OF OIL SUPPLY AND METHODS OF BUYING ALSO BROUGHT OUT.

Findlay, Ohio, Oct. 14.—After a two-hour session yesterday the trial of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, charged with conspiracy against trade, was adjourned until Monday. The adjournment was agreed upon between counsel out of respect to the memory of Former Judge Burkett, whose funeral took place here yesterday afternoon.

The proceedings yesterday consisted of the taking of testimony of three witnesses summoned by the prosecution. By evidence of the county recorder title was established in the Standard to a certain lot in the city of Findlay, on which is located their local oil distributing station for the local trade. Oil Inspector Shafer testified that the oil sold at retail in this locality was obtained from the Solar Refining company at Lima. At Upper Sandusky, also in his inspection territory, they received the oil from the Standard refinery at Cleveland.

H. H. Scott, local agent for Joseph Seep purchasing agency, occupied the greater part of the session, showing the method of purchasing crude oil from producers. He said that the oil he purchased and paid for by Seep's checks was transferred to the order of P. S. Trainer of Oil City, Pa.

TELLS MISDEEDS OF STANDARD OIL

OHIO'S SUIT AGAINST THE TRUST PROGRESSES RAPIDLY AT FINDLAY.

BRANDED ANCIENT HISTORY

ROCKEFELLER ATTORNEY SAYS STANDARD OIL IS IN NO TRUST.

Findlay, Ohio, Oct. 11.—The suit of the State of Ohio against the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, in which the company is charged with conspiracy against trade, began here yesterday and progressed at a rapid pace. A jury was secured in less than two hours: County Prosecutor W. L. David presented his case; Virgil P. Kline, attorney for the defense, made answer; Attorney C. H. Phelps of the prosecution then read documentary evidence until the court adjourned, twenty minutes before 5 o'clock. He promised to continue the reading during the greater part of to-day.

Became Trust in 1882.

In brief Mr. David stated to the jury that the Standard Oil company became a trust in 1882, and, although it had several times since changed the form of its organization, had not ceased to commit the offense of a trust. Replying, Mr. Kline characterized as mere matters of ancient history the relation of the original formation of the trust. The Standard Oil company, he said, was a corporation controlled entirely by its stockholders; it was in no trust. The company, he said, sold some oil at retail in the country; might own some real estate here, but the statement that it was in any combination in restraint of trade was entirely unsupported by the facts.

Rockefeller's Trial Later.

The Standard is charged with conspiracy against trade in violation of the state anti-trust laws. The penalty prescribed is a fine of from $50 to $5,000, or from six to twelve months imprisonment.

John D. Rockefeller was originally a party to the suit, but was granted a separate trial, the date of which will depend on the outcome of the present proceedings. It is said Mr. Rockfeller will not be a witness and will not attend the trial.

The Buckeye Pipe Line company and Manhattan Oil company, both state corporations, are also defendants, but have secured separate trials.

The trial is before Judge G. G. Banker and a jury.

BURIED ALIVE WITH IRVING.

Actor Named Siddons May Have Immolated Himself in Tomb.

London, Oct. 11.—A suggestion is made by Robert Ross that perhaps another person has been buried with Sir Henry Irving in Westminster abbey. Ross whites:

"A young actor of my acquaintance who bore the honored name of Siddons was invited to take part in the Irving funeral services. His stepfather was connected by marriage with the great actress, Mrs. Siddons, and he was proud of his physical resemblance to her as shown in her portrait by Reynolds.

Missing Since Funeral.

"Since the burial of Irving Siddons never has been seen, though I saw him in the funeral cortege. All his friends remember the curious exaltation of his manner for a few days before the ceremony.

"I cannot help thinking that in a moment of enthusiasm, realizing that it would be his only chance of burial in the abbey, he took advantage of the bowed, unobservant heads, during the prayer of committal, and crept beneath the pall into the great actor's tomb. I have been asssured by the vergers that mysterious sounds were heard for some days after this great historical occasion.

"Distressed by the loss of my friend, I applied to the dean of Westminster, and finally to the police authorities at Scotland Yard. I need not say that I met sacerdotal indifference on one hand and acllous officialism on the hand and callous officialism on the other."

LIVING YELLOW CARGO SEIZED

YACHT CAPTURED IN ACT OF SMUGGLING CHINESE INTO THIS COUNTRY.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 12.—Eighteen Chinese arrested yesterday after the capture by the United States immigration authorities of the schooner yacht Frolic, for which revenue cutters have been searching along the New England coast for the last two weeks, were held last night by United States Commissioner Cross in $1,000 bail each for examination next Wednesday. All declared they had been in the United States before but their certificates of residence had been lost, some in New York and others in the fire in San Francisco. This declaration contradicted a statement alleged to have been made by John C. Lernemann of Boston, one of the men arrested for complicity in the smuggling operations, that the Chinese brought by the Frolic from Newfoundland came to this country direct from China.

Twenty-four other Chinese were passengers on the Frolic and are believed to be in hiding in the Chinese quarters in this city, but immigration inspectors have been unable to locate them.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—In the second game of the world's championship series yesterday, the Chicago National league team took revenge for Tuesday's defeat when they vanquished the American league team on the latter's grounds, 7 to 1.

The weather was bitterly cold, the mercury hovering at or below the freezing point all afternoon. The score:

		R.	H.	E.

NEWS OF THE Northwest.

NEWSPAPER MAN IS KILLED

W. A. DOWELL, CITY EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE, IS KILLED ON STREET.

Minneapolis, Oct. 9.—William A. Dowell, one of the veteran newspapermen of the Twin Cities and recently appointed city editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, was killed shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon by John P. Quirk, a retired saloonkeeper. Dowell was shot through the right temple, the ball penetrating the brain and causing death a few hours later.

The shooting occurred at 901 Chicago avenue, Quirk's residence, and was the result of a long-standing quarrel between the two men over Dowell's attentions to Quirk's stepdaughter, Bessie Squires, an attractive girl of twenty-three years.

Objected to Dowell.

Owing to Quirk's extreme disapproval of Dowell's attentions to Miss Squire's the girl had left his residence and was boarding with friends. Accompanied by Dowell, she went to the Quirk home yesterday afternoon to call upon her mother. Quirk was home and flew into a rage on seeing Dowell, demanding of his stepdaughter who had invited him. She replied that she had. Quirk refused to let the matter drop and a violent quarrel followed.

Dowell finally left the house, accompanied by Miss Squires. Quirk rushed up stairs as the couple went out and a moment later returned and followed them to the porch. Dowell started down the sidewalk when Quirk addressed him and more words followed Mortally Wounded.

Dowell, determined to put a stop to the scene, started on, but immediately Quirk drew a revolver and fired. Dowell sank to the sidewalk mortally wounded. Quirk walked into the house and went upstairs to his room, where he remained until the police arrived.

Dowell lost consciousness as he dropped to the sidewalk, and slowly sank until 6 o'clock in the evening, when he died at the city hospital.

Quirk was hurried to police headquarters, where he was taken before Chief of Police Doyle and County Attorney Al Smith. He did not deny shooting Dowell, but said he did so in self-defense; that Dowell had drawn a knife and was about to attack him. Further than this he refused to talk.

Ask Police Protection.

Bessie Squires bears an excellent reputation, and it known as a capable and womanly girl. Miss Squires knew that Quirk had threatened to kill Dowell, but believed it to be a mere threat. Dowell evidently was afraid of Quirk, as about two weeks ago he reported the matter to the police and asked protection.

William A. Dowell was fifty years old, and had been engaged in newspaper work fifteen years. His home was at Vinton, Iowa, where his father resides. Dowell was married and is survived by a widow and a fourteen-year-old girl, who are living at Vinton.

LUNATIC ASSAULTS A CHILD.

Sheriff With Automobile Prevents Lynching in South Dakota.

Howard, S. D., Oct. 9.—This town and the neighborhood north of here were much wrought up yesterday on account of an assault upon a fourteen-year-old girl named Skyberg, and for a time there threatened to be a lynching.

The little girl was returning home alone, driving a team hitched to a farm wagon. On the road she overtook a man about fifty-five years old, who asked for a ride.

At a lonely spot in the road the man attacked the girl, choking her. She fought hard to escape and when she reached home her clothing was torn to shreds, and she was bruised and scratched.

Her young brothers armed themselves with pitchforks and immediately started in pursuit of the man, who when he saw them coming took refuge in a cornfield.

The neighborhood was aroused and a regular manhunt ensued. Sheriff Clark heard of the trouble and started for the scene in an automobile. When he reached the scene he found that the man had been surrounded in a cornfield. Clark plunged into the field and soon had his man under arrest.

There was an immediate rush to gain possession of the prisoner. Clark, however, succeeded in making his way through the crowd to his automobile, where he placed the prisoner, and was soon beyond reach of the mob.

Upon arrival at Howard an investigation showed that the man was an escaped inmate of the Yankton insane asylum.

DOWELL IS SHOT FROM IN FRONT

Autopsy Shows Slain Man Was Facing His Assassin.

Minneapolis, Oct. 10.—W. A. Dowell, a newspaper reporter, who was killed on Sunday afternoon by John P. Quirk, was facing his slayer when the fatal bullet was fired. This much was proved almost beyond doubt by an autopsy held yesterday.

Coroner Kistler has decided that the evidence in the case is so clear as to obviate all necessity of an inquest, and it is expected that the first examination of the witnesses will be before the grand jury.

Miss Bessie Squires, John Quirk's stepdaughter, whose association with Mr. Dowell was the primary cause of the trouble between the two men, has been in a state of highest excitement ever since the tragedy, and at times has acted so irrationally as to cause fear that her mind may give way. Repeatedly while at police headquarters after the shooting she threatened to take her own life, and on Sunday night she was detained at the city jail under the care of the matron, Mrs. Schaefer, and a special nurse, for protection against herself.

It is supposed that the dead man had started to walk to his home, a short distance away, and, taking a short cut, had walked too close to the edge of the shaft, the ground about which had been disintegrated by a steam exhaust pipe. The ground caved in and the man was precipitated to the bottom of the shaft and instantly killed.

LIMPING SPIRIT DIES.

Noted Sioux Chief Who Killed Many Whites.

Wa-can-da-du-ta (Limping Spirit), chief of the Sioux Indians, living on the Sisseton reservation, adjoining Browns Valley, died at his home Saturday of old age. He was nearly ninety years old and took a prominent part in the Indian outbreak in 1862.

He was noted for having more white people's scalps dangling at his belt than any other Indian on the reserve, and many have had the privilege of seeing them by calling at his tepee, four miles west of here.

During the outbreak, in a struggle with a white man whom he was trying to scalp, the white man stabbed him in the leg with a knife, crippling him for life, hence originated the name Limping Spirit. But in the struggle he succeeded in taking the white man's scalp.

Wa-can-da-du-ta was always a conspicuous figure on the streets in Browns Valley, and during any celebration, as on the Fourth of July, he led his band of Indians through the street, painted in their war colors, dancing the war dance and other sports they indulged in. Although at one time a savage and a foe to the white man, he has been law-abiding as far as he knew how to be the last years of his life, and his face will be missed by many an old settler.

He leaves five natural law wives and many children.

BENA IS BOOMING.

New Town in Woods Has 300 Residents and More Moving in Daily.

Bena is making preparations to organize as a village, elect officers and have a full-fledged municipal organization.

A petition to the board of county commissioners to order an election to vote on the question of organization has been granted. There are nearly 300 actual residents on the townsite to be embraced in the village, many more than the required number for legal organization, and there are more coming to the place daily.

The proposition of Sam Simpson for the purchase of the pine on the townsite, with the proviso that the timber be manufactured in Bena, was accepted, Simpson paying $4,000 for the standing trees. He also made another proposition, offering $5,000 for the timber to be disposed of as he saw fit. Simpson sold the timber to George Cochran, formerly of Chippewa Falls, who has a contract to cut timber on the ceded Chippewa reservation for the J. Neils Lumber company. Cochran agreed to the sawmill proposition and will purchase one or two mill plants on which he has an option and move them to this place. One of the plants has a capacity of 20,000 feet a day, the other 25,000 feet. Cochran will have the mill on the ground and ready for sawing lumber early next spring, and it will be erected on Lake Winnibigoshish.

Sixty lots have been sold since the allowance of the townsite by the government, a month ago, and several business houses are now in course of construction. W. J. Johnson and Thomas Sheehy of Cass Lake are putting up two substantial blocks. Henry Logan of Grand Rapids and Sam Simpson have recently completed places of business.

Alex Maki, a miner thirty-four years of age and married, met death in the end of a drift from No. 5 shaft at the Adams mine at Eveleth. He was buried under tons of dirt and broken timbers as a result of a cave-in that occurred so suddenly that he had no time to escape. Maki is survived by a widow and three children.

MORE PUPILS IN MINNESOTA.

Increase of 3,080 Shown in School Apportionment.

An increase of 3,080 in the number of pupils entitled to apportionment is noted in the summary of the returns by the county superintendents to the state superintendent. For the school year closing July, 31, 1906, there were in this state 378,246 children attending school at least forty days, and the previous year there were 375,166.

The department of public instruction was busy making out the October apportionment recently. The districts will receive $2.29 for each pupil, against $2.30 at the October apportionment a year ago. The total amount distributed this year is $866,320.23, against $862.881.80 last October. The department also sent out $1.70 for each of eighty-one pupils who were not returned in time for the apportionment last March.

BELTRAMI SEED CONTEST.

County Shown to Have Great Agricultural Features.

That Beltrami county is not solely dependent upon her lumber interests as a source of wealth was plainly shown by the rural school seed contest held in Bemidji. The contest was originated by Prof. Mayne of the state agricultural school. The idea was to encourage the children in growing excellent varieties of corn, oats and wheat by offering substantial prizes in the fall for the five best samples grown in the county. The grains receiving awards are eligible to competition in the state contest, where $1,200 in prize money is to be distributed.

At Bemidji a very presentable showing of corn, oats and wheat was made, the exhibits equaling in number and quality those shown in the more southern countries, which depend entierly upon their agricultural resources. The quality of the grains would indicate that Beltrami county has wonderful possibilities in agriculturel and stock raising lines.

The business interests of Bemidji responded most generously in the offering of cash prizes, and over $200 was offered. The mayor of the city offered, in addition, a town lot, valued to exceed $200, for the first prize in corn.

Great credit is due to Prof. Regan in his organization of the contest. He systematically covered every portion of the county, visiting the school officers, teachers and children. Through a Twin City seed house the necessary seed was furnished the children, together with a bulletin containing instructions for the planting and care of the grains.

The citizens pride themselves on the fact that the first contest is a success.

CUT SCHOOL LEVY.

That they might keep the tax rate in St. Peter under 3 per cent the members of the board of education, at a special meeting, reduced the levy for school purposes from 14 to 12.72 mills. With the money thus derived and that received from the state they expect to meet all the ordinary expenses of the schools and to pay off $4,000 in outstanding bonds which mature next year.

Members of the school board have decided to erect a new high school structure, 66x80 feet. The school itself will have a basement and two stories, half of the basement being given over to a gymnasium and the remainder divided into three rooms to be used for domestic science and manual training.

The Great Northern passenger train ran into a section crew on a handcar as it was nearing St. Hilaire and severely injured Thomas T. Sletten. The train came upon the crew in a bend in the road, and they all jumped but Sletten. The engineer put on the brakes, but the distance was too short to stop the train.

Some people think they are all right if they don't steal. But there are many other things you must do if you want to stand well with your neighbors.

IN MINNESOTA.

State News of the Week Briefly Told.

The postoffice at Neving was broken into recently and about $300 taken.

The summer hotel at Walhall was destroyed by fire. Loss, $5,000; insurance, $2,000.

A son of Jacob Mikkelson died at Madelia from lockjaw, caused by stepping on a rusty nail about a week ago.

The county commissioners voted bonds in the sum of $3,500 for the construction of the ditch near Shevlin.

Seventeen thousand men are wanted for work in the woods this winter by firms operating in and near Bemidji.

Tom Halvorsen, sixty years old, a patient at the hospital at Walker, cut his throat. Death resulted instantaneously. He was suffering from rheumatism.

The eleventh annual Watonwan county fair was the most successful in point of attendance and number and variety of exhibits ever held by the association.

Charles Deutsch, seventeen years old, was shot in the heart and killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun on a farm a mile east of Le Sueur Center.

Al Wildman, formerly wheat buyer for the Cargill Elevator company at Long Prairie, committed suicide in his elevator by shooting himself through the temple.

Mrs. Charles Betcher of Red Wing has tendered the cemetery board a donation of $10,000 with which to erect a memorial chapel in Oakwood cemetery in memory of her late husband.

Carl Jackson, a young man working with a threshing crew near Campbell probably was fatally injured by an explosion of the boiler of the engine which was running the threshing machine.

Joseph Zigmund of Pequot, while hunting, was accidentally shot in the back by ex-County Commissioner W. H. Luffman of Cass county. Eighty shot were removed from his back, left hand and arm. He will recover.

August Dahlberg, a farmer living two and a half miles south of Clarkfield, shot himself with a shotgun. He went into grove, placed the muzzle of the gun against the side of his head, literally blowing off his head. He was melancholy over being sick.

A change was made in the officers of the banks in Pelican Rapids on Oct. 1. F. J. Fleischer, cashier of the Wallace State bank, resigned to go to Idaho, and S. J. Rodman of Barnesville takes his place. In the First National bank N. E. Haugen resigned to go to Iowa, and M. T. Werkle of Marshall takes his place.

Instant death was the fate of Ernest Buesch, eighteen years old, in Rutland township, Martin county. Young Buesch was at work at Ernest Meyer's farm and was drawing a tank full of water from the farm of Theodore Malo. In driving over a steep place the tank tipped over and fell squarely across the young man's body.

Millie Anstitt, ten-year-old daughter of Philip Anstitt, had a narrow escape from being drowned in a well at East Grand Forks. The water in the well was so deep that the little girl was barely able to keep her nose above it by standing on her tiptoes. Neighbors heard her cries for help and, with members of the family, rescued the girl.

The fact has just developed that J. B. Baker, a bachelor who lives on a farm on the north end of Big Whitefish lake, near Pine River, has the past year picked up a comfortable fortune in sapphires. He now has at least a dozen of the precious gems and the last one which he found is valued approximately at $1,500. He is not saying much about his good fortune, but is looking for some good reliable jeweler to put the finishing touches on the stones.

The residents of several school districts in the vicinity of Virginia are not a little surprised and vexed to find that the state has refused them small loans for necessary improvements, though they are aware that it was through lack of knowledge of the conditions that the loans were refused. District No. 13, east of Virginia, with an assessed valuation of over $1,000,000, was refused a loan of $5,500 that was wanted for a needed school building at Stephens. District No. 53, at Ashawa, applied for a loan of $2,500 to assist in making proper provisions for 150 pupils, but without success. District No. 51 has also applied for a loan, but nothing yet has been heard regarding it.

The most disastrous fire that has occurred in Perham in several years broke out recently in the Northern Pacific freight station. The building and contents were consumed, together with Amos Marckel's implement warehouse, which adjoined it. Marckel's lumber yards were partially burned before the fire was brought under control.

A man supposed to be O. J. Hubbert was killed on the Duluth & Iron Range tracks at Allen Junction, near Eveleth. When Conductor Hugh Glass came in early the next morning he found the body on the track badly mangled.

WHAT SMOKING REALLY IS.

Carrying a Furnace Fed by Noxious Gases in the Mouth.

Men are so habituated to the outcry against smoking that there are few who do not ignore it.

Smokers who have some regard for the anxieties of their friends say that they smoke tobacco from which nicotine has been eliminated. Tobacco so prepared can be found near at hand, but few smoke it, because the process which eliminates nicotine, if it does not destroy, materially modifies the savor of the smoke. The outcry is always the same—nicotine! But many other of the principles of tobacco are as pernicious as nicotine, and when it comes to that it would be equally pernicious to smoke rye straw or any other simply, because (for one of several reasons) there is a continuous production of oxide of carbon wherever there is imperfect combustion.

The smoker carries in his mouth a little furnace, whose fires are fed with oxide of carbon; the fire smolders under the ashes, and the smoker fans it by means of the stem of his pipe or the vent of his cigar or cigarette. Year after year, and all the year, the furnace is in place, burning oxide of carbon and the smoker is working the bellows with a part of the force of his respiratory organs.

The composition of tobacco smoke is complex. Analysis gives nicotine, pyridic bases, formaic aldehyde, ammonia, methylamin, pyrrol, sulphurated hydrogen, prussic acid, butyric acid, oxide of carbon, the steam of water, an etherized empyreumatic oil and tarry or resinous products, among which we detect small quantities of phenol. Of all the products of tobacco, the most venomous are nicotine, pyridic and methylamin basis, prussic acid, sulphuretted hydrogen, oxide of carbon and empyreumatic oil, and all that we draw into our lungs with more or less satisfaction.—Harper's Weekly.

INTERESTING CONTEST.

Heavy Cost of Unpaid Postage.

One of the most curious contests ever before the public was conducted by many thousand persons under the offer of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., of Battle Creek, Mich., for prizes of 31 boxes of gold and 300 greenbacks to those making the most words out of the letters Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts.

The contest was started in February, 1906, and it was arranged to have the prizes awarded on Apr. 30, 1906.

When the public announcement appeared many persons began to form the words from these letters, sometimes the whole family being occupied evenings, a combination of amusement and education.

After a while the lists began to come in to the Postum Office and before long the volume grew until it required wagons to carry the mail. Many of the contestants were thoughtless enough to send their lists with insufficient postage and for a period it cost the Company from twenty-five to fifty-eight and sixty dollars a day to pay the unpaid postage.

Young ladies, generally those who had graduated from the high school, were employed to examine these lists and count the correct words. Webster's Dictionary was the standard and each list was very carefully corrected except those which fell below 8000 for it soon became clear that nothing below that could win. Some of the lists required the work of a young lady for a solid week on each individual list. The work was done very carefully and accurately but the Company had no idea, at the time the offer was made, that the people would respond so generally and they were compelled to fill every available space in the offices with these young lady examiners, and notwithstanding they worked steadily, it was impossible to complete the examination until Sept. 29, over six months after the prizes should have been awarded.

This delay caused a great many inquiries and naturally created some dissatisfaction. It has been thought best to make this report in practically all of the newspapers in the United States and many of the magazines in order to make clear to the people the conditions of the contest.

Many lists contained enormous numbers of words which, under the rules, had to be eliminated "Pegger" would count "Peggers" would not. Some lists contained over 50,000 words, the great majority of which were cut out. The largest lists were checked over two and in some cases three times to insure accuracy.

The $100.00 gold prize was won by L. D. Reese, 1227-15th St., Denver, Colo., with 9941 correct words. The highest $10.00 gold prize went to S. K. Fraser, Lincoln, Pa., with 9921 correct words.

A complete list of the 331 winners with their home addresses will be sent to any contestant enquiring on a postal card.

Be sure and give name and address clearly.

This contest has cost the Co. many thousand dollars, and probably has not been a profitable advertisement, nevertheless perhaps some who had never before tried Grape-Nuts food have been interested in the contest, and from trial of the food have been shown its wonderful rebuilding powers.

It teaches in a practicable manner that scientifically gathered food elements can be selected from the field grains, which nature will use for rebuilding the nerve centres and brain in a way that is unmistakable to users of Grape-Nuts.

JOSEPH PERRAULT

Lives there a man who can say the affairs of the office of the clerk of court of Red Lake county have not been rightly and justly administered; that Joe Perrault has not been a competent, careful, obliging, honorable official? If there is, he comes not forward to say so. Then it is not doubted by any man that such things are the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. What more is wanted of any man? That he should wear a Thief River Falls collar and promise that town he will go outside the pale of his duties and assist them without regard to what the law requires of him in his official capacity? Joe Perrault is not that kind of an official; he is a man among men; and because he will not wear the yoke of Thief River Falls' selfish demands, the democrats and republicans of that town have banded together to defeat him.

It is time for the people of Red Lake county to take note of these things and say to these people of Thief River, you shall not defeat a man whose only offenses are his residence and his refusal to do their bidding right or wrong.

Joe Perrault is one of the county officials who should be re-elected and whether you vote early and often or late and seldom, vote for him.

SHERIFF LINNIHAN.

Dan Linnihan is one of the officials who is able to render a good account of the conduct of his office. During his services there have been no duties connected with the office that have not been promptly attended to. He has been jealous of his reputation as a painstaking official for he has known that attention to duty is the primary requisite of any public office. The public, whether a man voted to elect him to office or not, has a right to expect it of him and the public is quick to commend the faithful performance of duty.

So with a conscious knowledge of faithful service, Dan Linnihan comes before the people this fall for re-election. It may safely be accorded him in the interest of the general welfare.

The democrats of Thief River Falls have joined hands with the republicans of that city to defeat the regular democratic nominees. Are the democrats of the rest of the county to stand for it?

Both the democrats and republicans of Thief River Falls need to be taught a lesson and the democrats of the rest of the county should see it is properly taught with no chance of their forgetting it in a hurry.

Vote for candidates that stand for a "square deal."—Thief River Falls News.

As the News can only mean Ford, Perrault, Linnihan and Jeffers, the Courier is pleased to endorse the sentiment.

There is far more reason to believe that Thief River Falls is "flooding the county with money" for J. B. O'Brien than that Red Lake Falls is paying Jim Ford's campaign expenses. Thief River Falls News please copy.

Wall street hopes for the defeat of Hearst. That is one of the best things ever said of him and almost the worst is that he owns a string of papers across the country that are more widely read than any other papers on the continent.

The democrats of Thief River Falls have banded together with the republicans of that city to turn down the regular nominees of their party. They may do it if they wish to but they have no right to expect any consideration from the party outside their town.

The Thief River Falls "gang" tried to get Gov. Johnson to remove County Auditor Ford. Gov. Johnson wouldn't do it as there was absolutely no ground for such action. Now the "gang" up there, a hybrid bunch of traitors to their party, are going to knife Gov. Johnson.

Thief River Falls is not Red Lake County but the democrats of that city are trying to force the election of certain republicans and the republicans of that city are trying to force the election of certain democrats. Shall the rest of the county submit to that sort of combination and dictation?

That prince of news pirates, Johnnie Eastman of the Thief River Falls News, is howling his foolish head off about the Red Lake Falls "gang" and all the while he is making a spectacle of himself as the exponent of a "gang" at Thief River Falls that, for selfishness and trickery, has anything that Red Lake Falls ever did skinned a mile. You can be an ass without doing that Johnnie.

James E. Ford, one of the most competent auditors in the state, honest, honorable, efficient, a credit to the county and worth several times his salary to the interests of the tax payers, to be defeated by an unholy combination of republicans and democrats at Thief River Falls? Let us not be blind to the attempt but vote as one man to re-elect him to the auditor's office.

J. B. O'Brien is the candidate of the Thief River Falls democrats and republicans joined together to defeat the wishes of both parties outside their little town. He wears their collar and when they say in one breath if he is elected he will only do his duty and in the next breath they will support no man who is not pledged to do their bidding without regard to duty, they seek to hoodwink the people of the rest of the county.

Would any business man in Thief River refuse to sell his goods to a Red Lake Falls candidate? Never in a thousand years. But the the Thief River papers dare not print their advertisements although their very living comes from the sale of advertising space. Say you fellows up there, don't you find your chains a little bit galling? And don't you think it would be awfully nice for a change to be permitted to run your own business?

KARL M. HANSEN
County Treasurer
and
Candidate for re-election

The democrats of Thief River Falls have joined hands with the republicans of that city to defeat the regular democratic nominees. Are the democrats of the rest of the county to stand for it?

The democrats of Thief River Falls have a right to vote as they please without let or hindrance or advice of the Courier, but when they join hands with republicans to defeat democrats, whose honor and official integrety are unquestioned and whose only offense is that they live in Red Lake Falls then the Courier is in duty bound to call upon the democrats of the rest of the county to administer a rebuke that will leave a lasting impression.

Great is our Teddy as a trust-buster. The paper trust was busted and now paper is higher than it ever was. The oil trust is in the process of being busted and Rockefeller with thousands of indictments hanging over him, cannot be gotten into court even as a witness. The Northern Securities trust was busted and the only noticeable reduction in any kind of rates is that secured by Governor Johnson, a democrat. And there are other things.

They held a public meeting in Thief River Falls recently and democrats and republicans joined hands to vote only for such candidates as would promise allegiance to that town. It therefore becomes the duty of democrats thruout the county to protest against such action. See to it that the democrats of Thief River Falls shall not indorse republican candidates and shall not have that indorsement ratified by the party outside their little town.

Are the democrats and republicans of Thief River Falls to be allowed to enter a combination and dictate the election of certain democratic or republican candidates who are subserviant to their own selfish interests? It is the duty of democrats, at least, to vote against the Thief River indorsement, for he is the result of that unholy alliance. It is not in the province of the courier to advise the republicans of this county but it doesn't believe they are going to submit to any such dictation.

Plummer Pioneer (Rep.)— The county seat committee of Thief River falls had a meeting there more than ten days ago at which they ruled that the people there should support the candidates favoring Thief River Falls regardless of party. These same candidates secured their nominations on party lines and now they have deserted the party because this committee has sent forth this edict. Thief River Falls says the taxpayers dont get a "square deal" from Red Lake Falls and this is the way they are trying to make the people believe that in Thief River Falls they will find everybody on the square and every condition just as it ought to be. Is this action honorable? Is it a "square deal?"

The Red Lake Falls high school football team went to Fertile last Saturday and trimmed up the bunch there by a score of 18 to 0, thereby evening themselves up for their defeat a week before by Crookston. Fertile was also a heavier team but were the victims of speed and headier playing. Twenty and fifteen minute halves were played. It was Ernest Toupin who scored the first touchdown and in the second period he and Robert Zaiser each scored one. The Falls team has been strenghthened by the appearance of John Richards in the line up and several other changes.

Deputy Sheriff George Jarman came down from Thief River Falls Friday bringing one, William Moore whom he placed in the county jail. Moore has something of a reputation in the pugilistic world and is known as the "Syracuse Kid." While at Thief River Falls the kid found it impossible to restrain his pugilistic propensities and smote one, Pete Newman, some several times between the joints of his harness. In fact he smote him so severly that Mr. Newman refused to recognize it as a piece de resistence in the world of humor and forthwith caused his apprehension on a charge of assault. The Kid was duly and anciently apprehended and given a sentence of twenty days and in durance vile the self same kid doth even now languish. Verily, the way of the transgressor gathereth no moss, neither doth it accumulate aught of fruits or flowers, or sunshine—for twenty days anyhow.

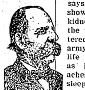
A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

How a Veteran Was Saved the Amputation of a Limb.



B. Frank Doremus, veteran, of Roosevelt Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., says: "I had been showing symptoms of kidney trouble from the time I was mustered out of the army, but in all my life I never suffered as in 1897. Headaches, dizziness and sleeplessness, first, and then dropsy. I was weak and helpless, having run down from 180 to 125 pounds. I was having terrible pain in the kidneys, and the secretions passed almost involuntarily. My left leg swelled until it was 34 inches around, and the doctor tapped it night and morning until I could no longer stand it, and then he advised amputation. I refused, and began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The swelling subsided gradually, the urine became natural, and all my pains and aches disappeared. I have been well now for nine years since using Doan's Kidney Pills.

DISFIGURED WITH ECZEMA.

Brushed Scales From Face Like Powder—Under Physicians Grew Worse —Cuticura Works Wonders.

"I suffered from eczema six months. I had tried three doctors, but did not get any better. It was on my body and on my feet so thick that I could hardly put a pin on me without touching eczema. My face was covered, my eyebrows came out, and then it got into my eye. I then went to another doctor. He asked me what I was taking for it, and I told him Cuticura. He said that was a very good thing, but that he thought that my face would be marked for life. But Cuticura did its work, and my face is now just as clear as it ever was. I told all my friends about my remarkable cure. I felt so thankful I want everybody far and wide to know what Cuticura can do. It is a sure cure for eczema. IF NOT AIR, SAND.

Life Saving Device of an Autoist Stranded in Jersey.

"I find," said a man who has not yet come to own a buzz wagon, "that automobile tires are sometimes filled with other things than air. Down on the Jersey coast the other day I saw a man filling a tire with sand.

"This tire had apparently—for the men in the auto appeared to be cool and competent men who knew what they were about—became broken in such a manner that it could not be repaired to stand inflation on the spot, but they wanted something in it and so they filled it with sand. At the place where they were when the tire collapsed the road ran close to the ocean front, and they took the tire off the wheel and one of the men climbed with it down the bulkhead of the beach and there he set to work.

"When he had worked in a lot of sand he would hold the tire up and shake the sand down in it and then he would put in some more, and so on till he had the tire filled.

"This was something new to me, but a friend tells me he has seen it done before and that sand in the tire is better than nothing, that it will cushion the tire in some measure at least and keep the machine from pounding down on that wheel with its sheer dead weight."

NO DAWDLING.

A Man of 70 After Finding Coffee Hurt Him, Stopped Short.

When a man has lived to be 70 years old with a 40-year-old habit grown to him like a knot on a tree, chances are he'll stick to the habit till he dies.

But occasionally the spirit of youth and determination remains in some men to the last day of their lives. When such men do find any habit of life has been doing them harm, they surprise the Oslerites by a degree of will power that is supposed to belong to men under 40 only.

"I had been a user of coffee until three years ago—a period of 40 years —and am now 70," writes a N. Dak. man. "I was extremely nervous and debilitated, and saw plainly that I must make a change.

"I am thankful to say I had the nerve to quit coffee at once and take on Postum without any dawdling, and experienced no ill effects. On the contrary, I commenced to gain, losing my nervousness within two months, also gaining strength and health otherwise.

"For a man of my age, I am very well and hearty. I sometimes meet persons who have not made their Postum right and don't like it. But I tell them to boil it long enough, and call their attention to my looks now, and before I used it, that seems convincing.

"Now, when I have writing to do, or long columns of figures to cast up, I feel equal to it and can get through my work without the fagged out feeling of old." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

But the mystery was susceptible of an easy explanation after all. The murdered man, when he first learned that his footsteps were being dogged by the unwelcome person who had importuned him at the railway station, was slowly wheeling a bicycle up hill. When he paused to speak he propped his wheel against a moss-grown milestone. When the blow was struck he was in the act of reaching for the handle-bar. He fell back, and the assassin leaped upon him and stabbed him repeatedly with a ferocious vigor. He had but reached out a hand to rifle the dead man's pockets when Truscott's shout for help sounded on his ears, and leaping on to the bicycle he rode at headlong speed down hill. He heard voices and running feet a hundred yards away and made a desperate effort to check himself with intent to hide. The wheel skidded, and it and he plunged headlong into the ditch together. The racing feet went past him, and in a minute he was up and away again and into a side lane. Here the ruts shook him until they threatened to shake the machine to pieces, but in a while he came upon an open turnpike road, leading he knew not whither. He passed now and then a horseman and now and then a farmer's cart or a pedestrian, but there was nothing in the way of impediment to traffic.

The man rode fast and far, and did not slacken speed until the first gray premonition of the dawn was abroad. He was fifty miles from the scene of his crime when he first slowed down. The scattered houses of a hamlet lay before him, and near him on the left was a horsepond all overgrown with thich green scum. Beside this he dismounted and stood looking about him for a time with a peering suspicion. There was not a soul in sight at that hour, and the earliest bird was not yet awake to disturb the heavy silence by a chirp. The man bared his head and smeared his moist forehead with his cap, whilst he stood apparently immersed in thought. Suddenly he turned the machine in the direction of the pond, poised it upright on the downward slope, and released it. It carved a clean line through the thick green scum upon the surface and disappeared from sight. The line gradually faded as if a wound were being healed.

"Safest gone," he murmured under his breath. "It would not pay to be found with any of his property in my possession."

He went on again afoot, walking at an easy pace, and looking about him for some indication of his own whereabouts, for hitherto he had steered by pure hazard, taking care only to lengthen the distance between himself and his pursuers. After a mile or two along a lonely lane he came to a dilapidated signpost at four crossroads. He could just make out the blistered and faded lettering on one of the three arms time and weather had spared, and he learned that he was seven miles from Dover.

"Dover?" he said voicelessly. "Yes. Dover will serve as well as another place."

He filled and lit his pipe, and went on again, saunteringly, like the man who has the day before him. As the day broadened it revealed him as a person of possibly respectable exterior, or, possibly an artisan of the better class. He was dressed in decent gray tweed. His linen was a little frayed and disordered, and he was dusty from his ride, but there was nothing in his aspect which would have drawn a second glance to him.

A mile or so outside the town he drew a handful of hay from a stack near the roadside and plaited it leisurly into such a wisp as grooms sometimes use to impart the last polish to a horse's coat. With this he brushed the signs of travel from his dress and then sat down to smoke and idle until such time as the town before him should be astir. If he had any remorse for the deed so recently committed, he gave no sign of it. As the rays of the sun grew warmer, he sought a patch of shadow, and, sitting there with his back against a gatepost, he fell insensibly into a doze. This deepened into slumber, and he did not awake until the sound of church bells broke upon his ear. At this he arose and shook himself.

"I am hungry," he said, half aloud, drawing a cheap watch from his pocket and turning it over in his palm. "This is all that I have, and it will not go for much. It may find food for a day or two, and with the help of a night in the fields it may see me up to London. And once there, hey for Mr. Brangwyn with a message from the brave Grimaud."

CHAPTER XVII.

Three days later Alexis went down into the country to pay a duty call on Lilian, and, having failed to give the lady warning of his coming, he found himself in the plight of Tennyson's "happy lover" who has come—

To look on her who loves him well;
Alights and rings the gateway bell,
And finds her gone and far from home.

He did not suffer himself to be greatly perturbed by this misfortune, though he made much of his regret to Miss Lee's Aunt, and took his leave with a proper aspect of dejection. And as he went sauntering back toward the station whom should he see but Truscott seated in his motor car and tooling it slowly round the abrupt curve from his own drive to the roadway.

"Aha!" said Truscott, waving one hand toward him. "Going to town? Can I give you a lift?"

"Why, thanks," said Alexis, "but I'm not dressed for it."

"Jump in," cried Truscott. "I'm not a road hog. Ten miles an hour is my pace, and you don't need to dress to drive with me. Besides, you can travel sheltered if you like. Antoine can drive. Let me offer you a cigar."

Alexis accepted the invitation, and in another minute they were bowling smoothly toward London.

"We had a rare sensation down here on Saturday," said Truscott. "I suppose you heard about it?"

"Down here?" asked Alexis. "I never read the papers. What was it?"

"It was a murder," Truscott answered. "My wife and I were sitting in the grounds Saturday night just after dinner. Everything was calm and peaceful as you can fancy. Moon rising, nightingale singing, typical tranquil evening. Two fellows stopped in the lane ten yards away and began to talk in French. I read French, of course, but I don't follow it when it's rapidly spoken. I made out that one of them was begging and that the other was refusing him, and that was about all. But suddenly one of them let out a fearsome yell, and when I rushed out into the lane there was a great burly fellow lying in the moonlight stone dead."

"Heavens!" said Alexis. "What an adventure!"

"The country was scoured for miles," Truscott went on. "We gave warning at every railway station and every police station in the neighborhood, but the assassin was gone and had left no trace behind. Amongst other things a newspaper man is a sort of merchant in murder. I've dispensed a good deal of criminal intelligence in my time, but I was never so near the actual fact before, and I can assure you that it is really quite a scary kind of thing. My wife hasn't got over it yet, and won't forget the horror of it for some time, I'm afraid."

"Who was the murdered man?" Alexis asked.

"Mystery," said Truscott. "Pure mystery. It's the most amazing thing in modern life that a man can drop out of existence like that and not be missed. People are always disappearing and being sought for, and lost in darkness. But here's a man murdered at one's door, the fact advertised in a thousand journals the world over, the dead man's protograph circulated broadcast by the illustrated papers, and not a soul found to identify him. Now that man must have lived a curious isolation. I made out that he had come down by train from London. Scores of people must have seen him, unless he had the gift of fern-seed. He needn't have been long in London, of course, and he may have been the merest bird of passage, but it's an odd thing that nobody comes forward to say, 'That's So and So.'"

"Yes," Alexis assented. "It's very odd."

"This," said Truscott, drawing forth a pocketbook and searching among its contents, "is the photograph we printed of him in the Record. It's a striking likeness, and I don't think anybody who had known the man could fail to recognize him from it."

Alexis took the photograph from Truscott's hand and looked at it. He gave ever so little a start when his glance first fell upon it, but Truscott was setting the contents of his pocketbook in order, and did not notice. When he looked up Alexis was studying the face with an air of interest. The body of the murdered man lay upon a table, and to the waist it was covered with a sheet which had apparently been turned down from the face by the photographer. The eyes were closed, and the man looked asleep. There was no pain or passion in his aspect. Alexis turned the little picture sideways so as to set the recumbent figure upright, and sat looking at it for a long time with his head thoughtfully on one side.

"Yes," he said at last, handing it back again; "it looks strangely lifelike, don't you think? It's a characteristic face. There's a sort of vulgar force in it. One wouldn't have liked to have had that man for a master. You wouldn't have cared to feel that you were in his power. Look at the mouth and jaw; very pitiless, don't you think?"

"M'yes," said Truscott. "You're a believer in physiognomy, Brangwyn?"

"We're all believers in physiognomy, whether we think so or no," said Alexis. "We pass instantaneous judgment on strangers every day. Here's a gull, and here a fox, here a sulky brute, and here a right good fellow; here a man with a will of his own, and here a man without one. For my own part, it's my greatest recreation to ride in omnibuses for the express purpose of studying my fellow-creatures. I don't find a face that puzzles me once in a blue moon. And really, it's one of the most diverting things in life. The foolish, the bovine, and all the varieties of each—the cruel foolish and the kindly foolish, the angry bovine and the placid bovine; the alert person whom you'd have neither for a friend nor an enemy if you could help it; the kindly chap who is as certain to go to ruin as he is to go, sooner or later, to his grave; the other sort of kindly chap who means well to himself and to everybody else. Women whose faces are an index of meanness, weakness, vanity, spite; women whose faces tell you at a glance that they have spent their lives in the love of home and children. There's no studio like the omnibus."

"But you wouldn't pass a real judgment in that random way, said Truscott, rather seriously. "It might be a dangerous thing to live by first impressions."

"Dangerous or not," Alexis answered, "we all do it. And none of us can help it. You may check yourself if you like, and argue that it's unfair to be prejudiced by a look or a manner, but the prejudice is there, for good or evil. And the striking thing about it is that in nine cases out of ten the natural instinctive judgment is justified by a more familiar knowledge."

"I like to hold my judgment in reserve," said Truscott. "One has to remember that one is oneself a bundle of preconceptions. Why on earth it should be so I can't even guess, but I have a natural antipathy to red-haired people. Now to give that antipathy a loose rein would be manifestly unjust and ridiculous, and, as a matter of fact, some one or two very fine fellows of my acquaintance are as ruddy as a fox."

"Well, you see," Alexis answered, "complexion has a lot to do with temperament, but temperament has very little to do with character. But to go back to what I was saying, that instinctive knowledge of character which the first careful gaze at a new face conveys to you is mutual. You not only know the man you will like and trust, but you know the man who will like and trust you."

"Are you sure of that?" asked Truscott.

"As sure as I am of anything in the world," said Alexis.

It was very unlike Truscott to do so, but he spoke on impulse.

"Take a case as a test. What about myself and you. Do you read trust and liking into my mental attitude toward yourself or mistrust and misliking?"

Alexis accepted the inquiry without embarrassment.

"Oh," he answered, "that's clear enough. Your natural impulse is to like me. But it isn't your natural impulse to trust me. You see," he went on, with a laugh, "I do some credit to your discernment. I'm a likable sort of fellow, but I'm a weathercock. I don't know that it's in me to hold long to a purpose or an attachment. In the bottom of your mind, now, don't you feel that I'm rather an agreeable sort of fellow as an acquaintance, but not quite the kind of man to go out with to shoot tigers? The tigers are metaphorical. I shouldn't leave a pal to face a tiger by himself, but I should drop him like a hot potato if I ceased to want him. Come! Be candid. Wasn't that your judgment? You can't offend me."

"Well, you see," said Truscott, guardedly, "I don't share your opinion as to the solidity of these impressions.

A PROFESSOR OF FLEAS.

Odd Profession in France—Troubles of One of the Impresarios.

Among the curious professions which one meets with in this country from time to time is that of professor of fleas. What the professor trains his alert pupils to do I cannot imagine, writes the Paris correspondent of the London Globe, but every now and then at the shows which camp on the outskirts of Paris the flea professor has his booth.

One of these strange impresarios named Jocolino lately took up his residence in a lodging house in the Rue St. Charles. Unfortunately Jocolino's pupils multiplied with far more rapidity than he could train them to be well behaved, with the result that their active disposition led them to explore the adjoining rooms of the lodging house, where they performed on their own account.

Their visits were not to the liking of the neighbors, and Jocolino was obliged to listen to some very forcible remonstrances on the subject. The nuisance, however, did not abate, and finally one of the tenants, a plumber named Sauvin, decided to take the matter into his own hands. Armed with a large quantity of insect powder, the irate plumber entered Jocolino's room in the absence of the professor and sprinkled the exterminator in all directions.

While he was so engaged, however, the flea trainer returned, and mistaking the plumber for a burglar seized a revolver and shot him in the head. Sauvin is now lying in a hospital and the trainer of the lively flea is in the hands of the police.

Romance vs. Reality.

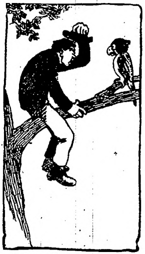
Cumback — What became of that pretty Miss Dreamer who used to declare she would never marry until a handsome knight rode into town on a fierce charger with a glittering sword by his side and claimed her for his own?

Homer—Oh, after breaking into the spinster class she was married to a man who drove two chargers hitched to a milk wagon, and she did remarkably well at that.

THOUGHT IT WAS A BIRD.

Parrot's Fluent Talk a Surprise to Green Irishman.

An Irishman in Boston who had made money in the contracting business sent to Ireland for a younger brother, who landed at Charlestown, and was taken around to see the sights. Passing through a park the greenhorn saw a parrot that had escaped from its cage, and was perched on the limb of a tree.



Surprised by a Talking Bird.

"What a purty bird; I would like to catch that," he said.

The brother tried to stop him, but he climbed the tree, and started to crawl out on the limb, when the parrot said: "Well, what is it?"

"Excuse me, sor," the greenhorn hastened to say, "I thought ye wur a bird."

JOKERS PUT SNAKE IN JUG.

Scheme to Save Drunkard Makes Him a Maniac.

By placing a live snake in a water jug, fellow harvest hands made a raving maniac of Peter Deuser, on the farm of Joseph Andover, near Waterville, Wash.

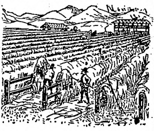
Deuser had been in America but three months. He left Germany while under the effects of liquor, according to his explanation, and he had been trying to drown his disappointment over his escapade in drink. He was just recovering from a spree when his companions conceived the idea that to place a snake in the water jug might teach Deuser a lesson. A harmless reptile was captured, deposited in the jug, and corked up.

Deuser's thirst caused him to seek the jug, and the jokers watched his actions with great interest. He removed the cork and had the jug within two inches of his lips, when the head of the reptile emerged. With a wild scream Deuser hurled the jug to the ground and ran until he reached the Columbia river, six miles distant. He plunged into the stream and lapped the water like a dog. He was wading into deep water when his pursuers captured him.

HAY HUNG OUT TO DRY.

How the Crop Is Gathered in Rainy Parts of Norway.

One of the most peculiar harvest scenes in the world is to be witnessed in some parts of Norway. Those are districts in which the rainfall is excessive, a common "boast" of the country folk there being, "We are sure to have one dry day in a year."



When the hay is cut, to leave it upon the ground to dry would, instead, mean that it would rot and be rendered valueless.

Therefore, long fences are built in rows reaching right across wide fields and to these the grass is brought in carts. In the daytime the hay is tossed about on the ground; but towards evening it is all carefully hung upon the fences to dry. In very damp weather it remains all day on the fences. The peasants say "our women and men do the same work, only while the women hang out clothes, the men hang out hay," to dry.

Tree That Gives Light.

Among freaks of nature in trees there stands conspicuous one known as the Asiatic star tree. It is enormously tall, growing to a height of from 60 feet to 80 feet, while from the ground up to a distance of about 40 feet the trunk is perfectly bare. From that point there spring a number of tangled limbs, which shoot out clusters of long, pointed leaves, and it is these, grouped together, that emit at night a clear, phosphorescent light. This gives the tree a spectral appearance, and is very deceiving to travelers, who frequently mistake the glow for an illuminated window of a house. The light is not brilliant, but is of sufficient strength to allow of a newspaper being read by it. It does not flicker, but glows steadily from sunset to daybreak.

RUN DOWN FROM GRIP

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Have Cured This Form of Debility in Hundreds of Cases.

"Four years ago," says Mrs. F. Morrison, of No. 1922 Carson street, South Side, Pittsburg, Pa., "I took a cold which turned into the grip. This trouble left me all run down. I was thin, had backache much of the time, had no appetite, my stomach was out of order and I felt nervous and unstrung.

"While I had the grip I had a doctor, but I really suffered more from the condition in which the influenza left me than I did from the disease itself. I felt generally wretched and miserable and the least exposure to cold would make me worse. I couldn't seem to get any better until I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I very quickly noticed a benefit after I began taking them and they restored me to good health and strength. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a wonderfully good medicine. Thanks to them I am now in fine health and have had no return of my former trouble. I recommend the pills to everyone who is ailing and take every opportunity to let people know how good they are."

Dr. Williams Pink Pills cured Mrs. Morrison because they actually make good, red blood. When the blood is red and healthy there can be no debility. The relation between the blood and nervous system is such that the pills have a very decided action upon the nerves and they have cured many severe nervous disorders, such as partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia and St. Vitus' dance, that have not yielded to ordinary treatment. Their double action, on the blood and on the nerves, makes them an ideal tonic.

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or they will be sent by mail postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

Mark Twain's Toast.

Mark Twain, who celebrated his seventieth birthday not long ago, is still able to enjoy life with the zest of a Peter Pan, nor has he apparently forgotten the delights of stolen sweets, for the other day, when temperance organizations were under discussion, his contribution to the debate (and whether he spoke for or against, he left his audience to decide, as the true humorist always does) was this brief remark: "Taking the pledge will not make bad liquor good, but it will improve it."

WOMEN WHO CHARM

HEALTH IS THE FIRST ESSENTIAL

It Helps Women to Win and Hold Men's Admiration, Respect and Love

Woman's greatest gift is the power to inspire admiration, respect, and love. There is a beauty in health which is more attractive to men than mere regularity of feature.

Mrs. Chas. F. Brown

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, should be a woman's constant study. At the first indication of ill-health, painful or irregular periods, headache or backache, secure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begin its use.

Mrs. Chas. F. Brown, Vice-President Mothers' Club, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For nine years I dragged through a miserable existence, suffering with inflammation and female weakness and worn out with pain and weariness. I one day noticed a statement by a woman suffering as I was, but who had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I determined to try it. At the end of three months I was a different woman. Every one remarked about it, and my husband fell in love with me all over again. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound built up my entire system, cured the trouble, and I felt like a new woman. I am sure it will make every suffering woman strong, well and happy, as it has me."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, bloating (or flatulence), displacements, inflammation or ulceration, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, or nervous prostration may be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Consultation With Kitty

By Paul Creswick

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Then it is almost a romance?" inquired Kitty, with one of her little shrugs.

"Quite."

"What is the lady's name?' she continued, artlessly.

"M or N," I told her.

"That means I'm not to ask questions?"

"I want your opinion without going into names. They don't actually matter, do they? You see, it's a delicate situation."

"I can't see, unless you tell me. But I don't imagine that my opinion, after all—"

"It means everything," I said, earnestly. "You know, I always ask your advice on really momentous affairs."

"But you never take it, of course?"

"It all helps."

Kitty smiled scornfully. "How intensely man-like that is! Well, go on with the situation. I suppose I may listen to it?"

"It's not my affair, really. It belongs to a man I knew at school. He has asked me to act for him as best man. The situation is perfectly proper—too much so, I venture to think. That's why I need to have your view of it."

"Thank you."

"Well, women understand these things better—"

"I shall possibly understand this particular case better—when I know all about it! You're very diplomatic, Reggie, I must say, even for a lawyer."

"This is my first very important brief, in a way. And I'm bringing it to you—for counsel's opinion."

Kitty smoothed out her skirts, and settled herself more comfortably in her big armchair. "Pray state your case," she commanded, judicially. "And please endeavor to do so without being too legal. This is not a court of law." She glanced approvingly and comprehendingly about her pretty little drawing-room.

"Ahem!" said I, bringing my chair slightly nearer hers. "Ahem!"

"My lord and gentlemen of the jury—" prompted Kitty.

"The case may be outlined in two minutes," I began rapidly. "It is a very old story. My client is a young man of irreproachable antecedents, and possessing a small patrimony. He is a member of the medical profession, and junior partner in a promising practice. He has been studying closely during the last year or so, and has passed extra examinations, as he wishes to specialize. Three months ago, having learned that his efforts had been entirely successful, he took a much-needed holiday—"

"Excellent," commented Kitty. "May I interrupt the court, while I ring for tea?"

"Allow the court to do it for you." I said, rising. Having performed all that was necessary I returned to my seat.

"Don't bring your chair quite so near," Kitty suggested. "I like to have the court in perspective."

"My mistake," I said, dutifully obeying. "I now come to the critical portion of my narrative. "My client, acting on the advice of his friends, chose a quiet, secluded, sunny and salubrious little retreat."

"Sounds rather like a guide-book."

"Pray silence for the prosecution. The name of this little seaside spot is immaterial; but can be obtained, by the inquisitive, from the usher on payment of a small fee. My client entered himself on the guest roll, at a small but select farmhouse, and prepared to relax."

"I like guest-roll," said Kitty, cheerfully. "It so appropriately heralds our tea. Please come in, Loftus, and be quick—and very quiet. Thank you. Now may I ask the court to also relax? These sandwiches are rather decent—Loftus prides himself on them."

"You see," said I, between mouthfuls, "it was all so ridiculously usual. Anybody might have gone to the farmhouse and opened a flirtation with the girl. She was there on purpose. Part of the bill of fare, you might say. A companion, or something, to the proprietress. My client hasn't satisfied me on the point. His transparent endeavors to make me like her simply indicate to me that the girl is a—"

"Well?"

"I was going to say a typical seasidey little thing. You follow me? But that's hardly kind, is it?"

"Is she—pretty?"

"I was wondering when you would ask that. She is pretty—after awhile. You know what I mean? You have to get used to her."

Kitty believed that she understood. "Your client has become very used to her?"

"I'm to be best man," I reminded Kitty, gloomily. "That's why I'm here, asking you to advise. You begin to perceive that the situation is delicate?"

"I really don't see why you are so concerned, after all—"

"Good gracious, my dear child," I cried, bringing my chair inches nearer in my excitement. "You don't see? You must see; if you're the dear good sensible creature I have always imagined you. If I'm best man, don't I aid and abet?"

"A glimmer of light comes to me. Evidently you do not like the lady, notwithstanding your client's endeavors in that direction. Well, before I can offer any suggestions, I must have a more complete notion of the lady's appearance and manner. Please take a full breath; think hard, put your chair back into its place—Loftus may be coming in at any moment—and describe."

After a brief pause: "You must understand that I have scarcely seen her," I announced. "Just an introduction, and a five minutes' subsequent inspection. She has come up to town, en route for some relative's; and I was allowed to call. She's fair, with a small turned-up nose, very brown face, blue eyes—rather nice, now I come to remember them."

"How did she dress?"

"Well, really! Just sensibly, I suppose. The sort of frocks you would expect. All alike, I mean—close fitting and neat."

"Your powers of observation are limited, Reggie. What is her name? Oh, I'm forgetting again. Any deformities? There must be some reason for you not liking the poor thing."

"I don't dislike her. She has points. Quite a style, really—only I can't do it justice. It's the man, I'm thinking about. Such a marrying in haste, right at the outset of his career. It's sure to turn out all wrong."

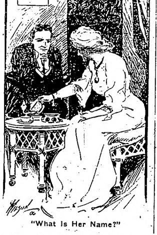
Kitty didn't answer for a moment. She deliberated awhile, and finally gave her shoulders one of those very expressive little shrugs. "You'll have to get out of it," said she, at last.

"How?"

"You must be suddenly called away. Or ill."

"I'm intensely sorry for him," I put in.

"Yes. He ought to have done better, no doubt. I had a little cousin in my mind. She is going to spend a week or two with me. A very nice little thing, who knows how to dress; and—better still—how to behave. A sweet, simple, unspoiled girl. She would have done very well—for him; or for you."



"What Is Her Name?"

"I'm not in the market, Kate—you know that."

"I don't. And I'm not Kate, if you please. Still, I need not bring you away from the 'Situation.' Sophie has achieved the doubtful distinction—for herself. Here is her letter of last Monday—telling me that she is engaged. To whom, I can't say. Woman-like, she writes of him, as her 'dear Francis.' Some awful man, I expect—with prominent eyes, and a chronic blush."

"Young, I take it?"

"So far as one can discover. And, of course, poor. They're all poor at Downderry. One has to be either fisherman or artist there. Neither profession makes a man."

"One moment, please. Did you say Downderry? And Francis? And Sophie?"

"I believe I did mention names. I'm not legal."

"Sophie Lavinia—"

"Tredinnick. Yes. You haven't met her, have you?"

"No—yes. My dear Kitty, I observe that it is half-past five. I'm outstaying my time, as usual. Forgive me. Shall I see you at—"

"No. I'm not going there. I begin to guess things. 'Turned-up nose, very brown; blue, unforgetable eyes—'"

"I never said unforgetable—although I meant it. Her eyes are delightful. A faint reflection of yours. Look here; I'm sorry and glad together. Your little cousin; just fancy! Dear old Deb—well, that's his luck again."

"A companion, or something, to the proprietress! Reggie, I'll never forgive that. A Tredinnick, too. Direct descendant of our Sir Richard Grenville, of the little Revenge! You're a horror. Good-by at once."

"I'm going, so soon as you have found a verdict."

"For the defendant, unanimously And the way you described her clothes!"

"You mustn't forget I'm a man."

"You won't let me. Good-by, and don't be silly. You know that it was agreed you should not kiss my hands. It's absurd, in such old people."

"Romance," I urged, gently. "I suppose you'll be at the wedding?"

Kitty stood up. "And you?"

"Shall I be best man?"

Kitty wouldn't answer. But when I had reached the door she just turned her dear face three-quarters toward me. I am sure she smiled.

"Shall I?"

She nodded. "How conceited you are!" she added, inconsequently.

OBLIGING THE SHOPKEEPER.

Traveler Had Time to Try On a Few Garments.

There has been a great deal of complaint of the way in which a certain class of shopkeepers try to force their wares upon passers-by, says London Tit-Bits. One man, a traveler, has managed to get the better of one of these shopmen, a clothing dealer, who had a way of almost dragging people into his place. One day, shortly after his arrival in London, the traveler stopped for a moment to examine a coat hanging in front of a clothing establishment, when the shopman rushed out and asked:

"Won't you try on some coats?"

"I don't know but I will," responded the traveler, consulting his watch. "I have some time to spare. Yes."

He went in and began to work. No matter how often he found his fit he called for more coats, and after he had tried on thirty he looked at his watch again, resumed his own garments and walked off, saying:

"I won't charge anything for what I have done. I believe in a man who'll oblige another when he can. If I'm ever this way again and you have any coats to try on, I'll do all I can to help you."

What the shopkeeper said we are not told, but it is not hard to imagine what he thought.

"The A. B. C. Excels."

Having attended other commercial schools, previous to my enrollment at Aaker's Business College, I believe I can say that my testimony is based upon actual experience and proof. I find that the A. B. C. does not advertise one thing and practice another, but that a person can rely upon it in every respect. The school is strictly modern in equipment, building and methods of teaching. With pleasure I recommend it to all those desiring a good business education. For direct information write to

"She says she was dying to speak to you this morning when she saw you," said the peacemaker.

"Why doesn't she, then?" replied the girl with the steely eye.

"You mean you'd like her to speak to you?"

"No; die."

Small Boy (just home from school)—Mamma, Miss Simpson says I'm descended from a monkey.

His Mother (glancing severely at her husband)—Not on my side, darling.

Method in His Madness.

The special mania of an insane man was the belief that he himself was a poached egg. One day he said to his keeper, "I would like a piece of toast." It was not at meal time, and the keeper asked: "Why do you want a piece of toast now?"

"Because," answered the man, "I am tired, and I'd like to sit down!"

Remarkable Man.

"Popley seems to be quite an extraordinary individual."

"In what respect?"

"It appears that he can remember quite a number of incidents connected with his own boyhood that are fit to repeat to his children."

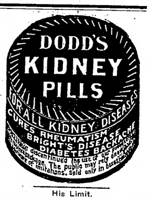
The Retort Bitter.

"Why, how d'ye do?" said the barber to his one-time customer.

"Howd'y'," snapped the latter.

"You're a stranger. I haven't seen your face for a long time."

"That's odd. I left most of it on your razor the last time I was in your shop."



His Limit.

THE WINNING STROKE

If more than ordinary skill in playing brings the honors of the game to the winning player, so exceptional merit in a remedy ensures the commendation of the well informed, and as a reasonable amount of outdoor life and recreation is conducive to the health and strength, so does a perfect laxative tend to one's improvement in cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc. It is all important, however, in selecting a laxative, to choose one of known quality and excellence, like the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., a laxative which sweetens and cleanses the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects, as it acts naturally and gently on the internal organs, simply assisting nature when nature needs assistance, without griping, irritating or debilitating the internal organs in any way, as it contains nothing of an objectionable or injurious nature. As the plants which are combined with the figs in the manufacture of Syrup of Figs are known to physicians to act most beneficially upon the system, the remedy has met with their general approval as a family laxative, a fact well worth considering in making purchases.

It is because of the fact that SYRUP OF FIGS is a remedy of known quality and excellence, and approved by physicians that has led to its use by so many millions of well informed people, who would not use any remedy of uncertain quality or inferior reputation. Every family should have a bottle of the genuine on hand at all times, to use when a laxative remedy is required. Please to remember that the genuine Syrup of Figs is for sale in bottles of one size only, by all reputable druggists, and that full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co., is plainly printed on the front of every package. Regular price, 50c per bottle.

DO YOU KNOW

That a rich bachelor may make a poor husband.

That virtue becomes a vice when you boast of it.

That the business race is seldom won by the fast man.

That few people dispute the man who quotes the bible.

That familiarity breeds more things than contempt.

That many a toast is drunk standing—and so is the crowd.

That in times of peace girls prepare their wedding trousseau.

That a girl in love is almost as miserable as the one who isn't.

That the Roseau Times says it is now written "pro bunco publico."

That it pays to be honest—only the pay is apt to go to the other fellow.

That the Indians can now furnish us with all the summer they want to.

That a girl doesn't like to be kissed by a man who can't keep a secret.

That unless you slap some men on the back they think you are cool to them.

That an ugly woman is uglier than an ugly man, says some ill-natured brute.

That poets are born, not made, but most editors have poetry thrust upon them.

That money talks and the great regret is it is usually in a hurry to say "good by."

That the older a man is, the more certain he becomes that all the world doesn't love him.

That it wasn't a musician who suggested that music ought to be written on note paper.

That if you cant keep a secret yourself, you cant expect anyone else to keep it for you.

That the woman, who jumps at a conclusion, often meets with a surprise when she lands.

That it is more or less truthfully said that some men look upon religion as a sort of moral fire-escape.

That a woman doesn't necessarily see the point of a joke because she laughs at it, says the woman-hater.

That longevity is the result of perseverance. If you want to live to a ripe old age, just keep on living.

That a southern exchange says, "Mr. F. L. Loyd was partially paralyzed last week." He should cut it out.

That much of the stuff that paints landscapes in the fevered brain of man will make you look like the reel thing.

That an exchange says some men have the luck to be in the ice business in winter and the coal business in summer.

That when a man beholds his first baby boy his path of life looks sonny. That's another one of those bum jokes.

That the poet inquires, why do summer roses fade. Possibly because it is part of their business. Let 'em fade.

That some girls have golden hair and others merely have their's plaited. Read it again if you don't get it the first time.

That an exchange says you are always fussing because people are not true to you. Are you particularly true to others?

That a Red Lake Falls woman is responsible for the thought that women haven't much faith in doctors un less they have whiskers.

That a man's heirs never know whether he was in full possession of his faculties at the time of his death until the will has been read.

That a subscriber wants to know what becomes of all the autumn leaves women press. If she will tell us where are the snows of yester year, we will try to answer her questions.

That some one got next to the lords of creation when it was asserted that a woman doesn't have to be married long to discover that her husband doesn't know half as much as he pretends to know.

That Mary had a little money,
 Mary saw a little hat,
Mary did a little shopping,
 Now her little purse is flat.
Mary wants a million dollars—
 Thinks of it and holds her breath,
But if Mary had a fortune
 She would shop herself to death.

RHEUMATISM
TROUBLESOME PAINS AND ACHES

While Rheumatism is usually worse in Winter because of the cold and dampness of a changing atmosphere, it is by no means a Winter disease entirely. Persons in whose blood the uric acid, which produces the disease, has collected, feel its troublesome pains and aches all the year round. The cause of Rheumatism is a sour, acid condition of the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter, which the natural avenues of bodily waste have failed to carry off. This refuse matter coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed by the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. Rheumatic persons are almost constant sufferers; the nagging pains in joints and muscles, are ever present under the most favorable climatic conditions, while exposure to dampness or an attack of indigestion will often bring on the severer symptoms even in warm, pleasant weather. Liniments, plasters, lotions, etc., relieve the pain and give the sufferer temporary comfort, but are in no sense curative; because Rheumatism is not a disease that can be rubbed away or drawn out with a plaster. S. S. S. is the best treatment for Rheumatism; it goes down into the blood and attacks the disease at its head, and by neutralizing the acid and driving it out, and building up the thin, sour blood, cures Rheumatism permanently. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, S. S. S. will not injure the system in the least. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice without charge.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE FROM BURNING HOUSE

Family of Joseph Beauleau Barely Escape Flames Which Consume Home.

Faithful Dog Which Awakens Them to Danger Perishes in Flames —Insurance.

Awakened by the howls of their dog, Peter, Ed., George and Dora Beauleau barely had time to save their lives from the flames which consumed their home and all its contents last Friday night.

The house was owned by Joseph Beauleau on the north side. He was away at the time and his four children were asleep, the little girl downstairs and the three boys up stairs. It was about midnight that Peter was aroused by the dog to find the house full of smoke. Quickly he awakened his two brothers, and the three jumped out of the window. Then, breaking in the window of their sister's room they were able to get her out in safety. There was no time to spare and a trunk containing some of the effects of one of the boys was the only thing saved. The faithful dog dog perished in the fire.

The exact cause of the fire is unknown. A lamp had been left burning for Mr. Beauleau and it may have exploded or been upset by the dog. The building was valued at $800 and there was $700 insurance on it and its contents. The fire department made every effort to be of service but the house was burned too quickly to be saved.

An Act In Your Behalf That Means Dollars In Your Pocket, Mr. Farmer.....

While it is not generally known throughout the county, County Auditor Ford was the direct means of saving each real estate owner in Red Lake county several dollars during the past month. In their labors with the real and personal values of the state, the State Board of Equalization raised the real estate valuation of every county in the Ninth district at their recent session at the state capitol, with the single exception of Red Lake county. The Board had this county on the list and would have raised the valuation here had it not been for JAMES E. FORD. Auditor Ford explained carefully to the Board that there were several reasons why this raise should not be made at present One was that the farmers of Red Lake county, the principal realty owners, have not enjoyed any too much of the country's prosperity during the past few years and therefore could not well afford to pay more taxes than they had been paying. Another reason was that the settlers on the reservation had experienced considerable difficulty and expense in endeavoring to get their homes started, and an additional tax on them would work a hardship. The proposed raise would have given Mr. Ford over $300 more salary per year, but he did not look at that part of it for an instant, but acted only on behalf of the people he has always stood by—the farmers. This is but more illustration of the character and fair-mindedness of County Auditor Ford, and is but one action out of a multitude all of which have resulted in a saving to the farmers and taxpayers. Will you lend your aid to defeat him, Mr. Voter, simply to gratify personal spite? Not if you are interested in your own welfare, and you certainly are.

Wylie Elevator Company Wins the First Round.

The Great Northern Railway company has struck a snag in its efforts to oust the Wylie Farmers Elevator and Mercantile company from its right of way at Wylie.

It was last week that the Railway company began an action to restrain the Wylie company from erecting an elevator on the railroads right of way claiming an irreparable damage if the elevator should be built. Accompanying the summons and complaint was an order to show cause why a temporary injunction should not be issued. The order was made returnable and a hearing had at the opening of court Monday. After hearing the arguments of A. C. Wilkinson for the railroad and Germo & Farley for the defense, Judge Watts refused to issue the injunction and dismissed the order to show cause.

The circulars sent out contain these instructions:

Send or deliver all butter or cheese for the contest to Millette & Dufault, Crookston, Minn., before the 14th of November.

Be sure take a receipt for your railroad fare when you come, for all will depend on if we have receipts enough to show whether we get reduced rates or not. Remind others of this fact also.

More Motor-Cycle.

All the signs point to the coming of the motor-cycle into popularity says Leslie's Weekly. Its growth has been slow, but sure without a boom, which is so fatal in its final sky-rocket effect to anything. The noise which one of these one-lung, two-wheelers make is often greater than that made by the big touring cars. Probably if they come into general use a muffler will be devised which will do away with most of the noise. Let us be healthy by drinking golden grain belt beer. It is pure, healthful and wholesome. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

HUNDREDS OF LIVES WIPED OUT BY STORM

ISLAND NEAR MIAMI, FLA., ENGULFED AND 250 PERSONS PERISH.

HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE AT SEA

STEAMER ST. LUCIE SINKS AND MANY FISHING BOATS ARE MISSING.

HAVANA IS HIT BY CYCLONE

TWENTY LIVES LOST AND $2,000,000 DAMAGE—SALVADOR HIT HARD.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 21.—The steamer St. Lucie, Capt. Bravo commanding, has been sunk off the Florida coast. One of the excursion steamers arrived in port last night, bringing sixty wounded, which were taken to the hospital, and it is said there are twenty-eight dead bodies which will be brought up to-day. It is believed now that a portion of the Florida Fish and Produce company's fleet was destroyed. Manager Adams sent out one of their boats to look for the men and boats and on their return they reported no signs of the fleet. The fishing nets were found strewn on the shore.

250 Lives Are Lost.

Capt. Bravo says that he anchored on the Lee side of Elliott key, twenty-fiive miles south of Miami, Thursday morning and that soon after a tidal wave engulfed the island. He says there were 250 resident on the island, all of whom were lost. The St. Lucie was crushed by the same waves, and of the 100 passengers on board twenty-five were killed. Capt. Bravo was seriously injured

A barge containing a hundred people is said to have been torn away from its moorings at Elliott key and afterwards was picked up near the Bahama islands, fifty of her passengers having been drowned.

Cyclone Hits Havana

Havana, Oct. 21.—A cyclone of unprecedented severity, accompanied by a terrific downpour of rain, swept over the provinces of Havana and Pinar del Rio Wednesday night and resulted in twenty deaths in this city and the serious injury of a dozen or more persons. The damage is estimated at fully $2,000,000. The dead are all Cubans of the poorer class.

The United States cruiser Brooklyn dragged her anchor until her stern grounded in the mud off La Regla. She got off yesterday morning without injury.

Great Havoc in Harbor.

The storm caused great havoc and confusion to the shipping in the harbor. Many buildings were badly damaged and nearly all the trees in the city and suburbs were uprooted.

The 2,000 American soldiers and marines at Camp Columbia were put to great inconvenience by the storm. Nearly all the 400 tents in camp were blown down, but there was little actual damage. Harry Fosdick, an army teamster with the Twenty-eighth infantry, from Sioux City, Iowa, sustained probably fatal injuries. He was crushed by a tree which fell through the barracks in which he was sleeping. Fred Sutcliffe of Fort Snelling and Thomas Shonealt of Reading, Pa., sustained injuries.

Many Farmers Lose All.

One hundred and fifty tobacco barns in the Alquizer district have been destroyed.

The recently planted tobacco crop also has been seriously damaged. Enormous damage is reported from La Guira, the center of the banana and plantation growing industry. These crops are said to have been practically destroyed. Many small farmers have lost their all and are in great distress.

Matanzas city was practically uninjured, only a few houses there sustaining damage. No loss of life has yet been reported from outside Havana, but a message received yesterday says five persons were injured at Nunez.

Wires All Went Down.

All street car service in Havana was paralyzed, and communication with outside points was impossible. The telegraphic service was annihilated.

The first train to come into the city since the storm was the Santiago express, which arrived yesterday afternoon. Passengers report that the devastation does not reach far to the eastward.

Havana recovered quickly from the effects of the storm and yesterday, except for the presence of gangs of men replanting uprooted trees and the sight of wreckage in the harbor, one would not know that such a severe storm had blown over this end of the island.

Shipping Suffers Most.

The storm caused the greatest damage and confusion in the harbor. The damage sustained by the American squadron amounts to little.

The total number of lighters sank in the harbor has not yet been ascertained. Many of them were loaded with sugar and other merchandise, on which the loss will be great. The storm drove the lighters against the harbor bulkheads, where they were broken up or sank. The harbor has been searched for dead and it is now believed that all the bodies have been found.

Many Houses Damaged.

In Havana city about fifty houses were more or less injured. The buildings of the University of Havana sustained damages amounting to many thousands of dollars. Eight persons were killed and four were injured by the collapse of a tenement house. The other fatalities resulted from falling signs and cornices, contact with live wires in the city or by drowning in the harbor.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

Tempest Causes Death and Heavy Property Loss in San Salvador.

San Salvador, Oct. 21.—A tempest raged incessantly for ten days throughout the republic, flooding the rich valleys, principally that of Majada, and resulting in great loss of life and the destruction of cattle and crops.

The Saivadorean man-of-war Izalco was lost at Acajutla. The topography of various departments has been changed, buildings have fallen burying their tenants in the ruins, and the iron bridges over the principal rivers have been carried away.

Up to Wednesday 15,000,000 tons of water had fallen. The railroads, telegraphs and commerce are paralyzed, but traffic is being restored in some towns.

The rivers are bringing down the bodies of persons drowned in the storm and the carcasses of cattle, and the sight of these tends to increase the terror of the people.

Guatemala and Honduras also have suffered severely. It is said the losses there will amount to many millions of dollars.

TAMMANY BOSS TELLS ALL.

As Result Grand Jury Subpoenas Six Other Witnesses.

New York, Oct. 21.—Interest from an unexpected source was injected into the campaign yesterday when Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, appeared before the grand jury in response to a summons from the district attorney's office to tell upon what he based his statement that the managers of the Independence league were attempting to "hold up" Tammany candidates.

From the little that is known of the proceedings before the grand jury, it is understood that Mr. Murphy was questioned for thirteen minutes and that as a result of his testimony subpoenas were issued for half a dozen other persons, including Representative Joseph E. Goulden, William Astor Chanler and Joseph Pendergast.

Mr. Murphy had nothing to add to his original charges.

BAN ON POPULAR HYMNS.

Catholic Bishop Bars "Nearer, My God, to Thee" From Churches.

New York, Oct. 21.—The singing of "Nearer, My God, to Thee" in the Catholic churches of the Newark diocese has been prohibited by Bishop O'Connor, and "Lead, Kindly Light," can be sung only after services. An order to this effect has been sent to the rectors of the various churches by the bishop. Bishop O'Connor said:

"The rule of the church forbids the singing of any hymn or anything else that is not a part of the liturgical service, and of course 'Nearer, My God, to Thee' is no more a part of the service than is 'In the Sweet By and By.' Aside from the church rule, this hymn is purely sentimental, and I can see no reason for its rendition.

"'Lead, Kindly Light,' is an appropriate one for spiritual light, but then there is no cause for singing it in our churches."

BOARD OF TRADE AS FARMERS' GAG

CHICAGO SYSTEM RESTRAINS TRADE, SAYS BROKER IN GRAIN PROBE.

LEAVING RUSSIA IN PANIC

HOOLIGANS ARE CONSPIRING TO REPEAT LAST YEAR'S CARNAGE.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—W. S. Jackson, former president of the Chicago Board of Trade, was called as a witness at yesterday's session of the interstate commerce commission to testify as to the practice of owners of elevators storing grain contrary to law. He testified that he had known of cases where grain had been stored in elevators that belonged to the owners of the warehouses. In such cases, he stated, however, it was the custom to transfer the title of the grain before storing it, thus in a way complying with the letter of the law. After the grain was removed from the elevators, he asserted, it would be retransferred to the owner.

Grain Men Testify.

Several other grain men testified that such a practice was in vogue and stated that they did not consider it in violation of the law.

Richard Gambrill, a board of trade broker, was the first witness called. Mr. Gambrill declared that the rules of the Chicago Board of Trade are clearly in restraint of trade and are rapidly making the Chicago grain market, in the words of the witness, "a one-horse proposition."

Restraint of Trade.

"A rule is posted on the Chicago Board of Trade each afternoon," said Mr. Gambrill, "which prevents me from going into the country and bidding for grain. That, to my mind, is detrimental to business and is in restraint of trade."

Samuel Finney, another broker on the board of trade, testified that there is an agreement between certain board of trade men to bid certain prices for grain in the country. He named two firms which he declared are a party to this agreement.

Employes of these firms were at once served with subpoenas.

FEAR FIENDISH MASSACRE.

Jews of Odessa Have Well Founded Apprehension of Slaughter.

Odessa, Oct. 18.—The local branch of the Union of Russian Men, which includes a very large Hooligan element, threaten to make a bloody celebration of the anniversary of the black October days of last year—that is, to repeat the frightful program which desolated the Jewish quarters of the city from the 1st to the 5th of November, according to the ordinary European calendar.

Extended inquiries among subordinate leaders and other members of the union shows that this is not an empty threat. The intention is there, and is so seriously regarded by the Jews that they are now electing strong deputations to lay their apprehensions before the prefect, Maj. Gen. Gigorieff, in whose honesty, energy and humanitarianism they repose the fullest confidence.

MRS. JEFFERSON DAVIS DEAD

WIDOW OF PRESIDENT OF CONFEDERACY SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA.

New York, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Jefferson Davis, widow of the president of the Confederacy, who had been ill for a week at the Hotel Majestic, in this city, died at 12:25 o'clock last night. Death was due to pneumonia, induced by a severe cold which Mrs. Davis contracted upon her return from the Adirondacks, where she had spent the summer months. Although grave fears were felt from the first, Mrs. Davis' wonderful vitality, which brought here safely through a similar attack a year ago, gave hope of ultimate recovery until Monday night, when a decided change for the worse was evident and the attending physicians announced that the end was near. It was then believed that Mrs Davis could not survive the night, but she rallied slightly during the early hours of yesterday. Shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning she had a similar spell and Rev. Nathan A. Seagle, rector of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal church, was hurriedly summoned to give religious comfort to the patient in her last moments of consciousness. The clergyman remained some time, and an hour later it was announced that Mrs. Davis had lapsed into a state of coma. The period of unconsciousness continued to the end.

MRS. THAW MAY BE INDICTED.

Jerome Unmistakably Intimates Second Person Will Be Accused.

New York, Oct. 18.—The district attorney yesterday intimated so strongly as to make misunderstanding impossible that a second person is to be indicted as a principal in the Thaw murder case on evidence showing that this person gave Harry K. Thaw the revolver with which he shot Stanford White and urged him to kill the architect.

This startling turn to the case developed in the court of general sessions yesterday, when the district attorney appeared in person to oppose before Recorder Goff the motion of John B. Gleason, counsel for Thaw, for a writ of prohibition restraining the district attorney from issuing further John Doe subpoenas for examining any more witnesses.

Mr. Gleason made a stubborn fight to have Thaw taken from the cell and appear in court, but the district attorney made the point that only the witnesses whose depositions had been taken in his office were defendants in the matter at issue and that Thaw nor Gleason had any standing in court. Recorder Goff sustained the district attorney.

"Your honor," said the district attorney, "it does not appear that we are going to use any of these forty-three depositions that we have taken. As a matter of fact, we do not intend to use them against this defendant. We do not even intend to call any of these witnesses against this defendant.

"Your honor, there is no fiction in this case. I am not sure that there is not another who could be coupled with the defendant in an indictment for murder in the first degree."

"FAMILY DUEL" WAS MURDER

FILLMORE COUNTY MAN IS ACCUSED OF BRUTALLY KILLING HIS WIFE.

Preston, Minn., Oct. 20.—Murder in the first degree is now charged against Celestine St. Antoine, who killed his wife at his son's farm in what he said was a duel. The evidence brought forward at the inquest showed that the slaying of the woman was deliberate, and that so far from her fighting a duel with her estranged husband, she was given no opportunity for self-defense.

According to the evidence brought out by the coroner, St. Antoine went to his son's house nd broke into the room on the first floor in which the woman had locked herself and attacked her there. The story of three shots being fired was corroborated by those who were near at the time of the shooting, but it seems that Antoine first killed his wife and then deliberately fired the other two shots, as the bullets from these were found in the wall of the room.

FARMERS' TRUST.

They Organize to Control the Price of Grain.

St. Paul, Oct. 19. — A Minnesota union of the American Society of Equity, the "farmers' trust," was organized at a meeting yesterday at the old state capitol. E. S. Morrell of Bethel, Anoka county, is the president. The idea of the society is that the farmer can better fix the price of grain than the buyer, provided the farmer has information regarding supply and demand that the buyer has. They propose the establishment of a bureau to give such information to the farmers, and eventually they hope to have a general representation of farmers and that they will be able to hold their grain until they can get whatever price they demand.

The society has organizations in several Eastern states, notably Indiana and Ohio. Twelve counties in Minnesota have county unions.

The State Day by Day

NEWS OF INTEREST.

MINNESOTA A MODEL.

Sets Pace for All States With Her Agricultural High Schools.

W. M. Hays, assistant secretary of agriculture, talked very interestingly regarding Minnesota agricultural college work, contrasting what is being done in Minnesota with similar work in other states.

"The importance of the Minnesota work is emphasized every day," he said. "Our plan of the agricultural high school work is finding a place in the country life education system of the entire country. Nebraska was the first to follow our plan, and Oklahoma, North Dakota and Maine were next in line. Alabama has organized nine agricultural high schools, practically one for each congressional district. Georgia has recently passed a law for the organization of eleven agricultural high schools and the department will help locate them. Wisconsin has made a good beginning in its experiment with county agricultural schools.

"Agricultural educators all over the country are following with undisguised interest Minnesota's recent enlargement of its plan, shown in the new agricultural high school at Crookston, and our state is regarded generally as the leading force in this important work.

"The work of special interest at present is the development of men trained to superintend and teach in the agricultural high schools. The department in Washington is constantly receiving requests for such teachers, and the salary paid ranges from $1,000 to $2,500.

"Just at this juncture the Minnesota university could not do better work than to gather scores of the right kind of college graduates throughout the West who have had farm experience and train them with a two-year course into the ways and subject matter of the school and college of agriculture at St. Anthony Park.

"Those who have delayed in developing faith in the agricultural education should now sit up and take notice. During the past two years this department of agriculture here has increased its appropriations one-third. The increase at the last session of congress was more than the entire appropriation for the department when Secretary Wilson assumed office, nine years ago.

"The growth of agricultural matters in the Northwest is shown by increased circulation of Minnesota's three great periodicals, Farm, Stock and Home and the Northwestern Agriculturist of Minneapolis, and the Farmer at St. Paul have increased their circulation in fifteen years from 25,000 to upwards of 250,000."

Prof. Hays thinks that the new school at Crookston ought to help rather than harm the St. Anthony Park institution. This Crookston school will no doubt show by its large enrollment the oft proved fact that secondary schools need to be nearer the homes of their pupils to get the best results.

"Prof. Hays continued: "The course of study wrought out by the faculty at St. Anthony Park through its eighteen years of existence is serving as a base for the courses of study in all states undertaking the agricultural high school plan. In a number of states not mentioned above, such as Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio and New York, there is a most earnest discussion regarding agricultural high school work. And what has been said about the education of young men applies also to that of young women.

"Should hard times come, the growth of agricultural high schools might be checked somewhat, as hard times increase the value of country business. This class of schools and the experiment farms going with them deal with the question of improved production."

PERIL IN PRAIRIE FIRES.

State Forestry Commission Calls Attention to Law.

Seven prairie fires have been reported from the northern part of the state, and Forestry Commissioner C. C. Andrews is trying to learn how they were started and by whom, with a view of prosecuting the offenders. To leave a fire unquenched near a forest, or the prairie, is in itself an offense which may be punished by a fine up to $100. Town supervisors are fire wardens and will be urged to enforce the law with the utmost vigor.

In Molan township, Marshall county, the people were called out to fight a threatening prairie fire, and twenty-two persons were engaged in the work before it was overcome. Near Vespice fire raged over swamps, fields and forest, destroying barns, fences and wood. Several dangerous fires have been reported from Roseau and Red Lake counties.

Wheaton is the Democratic candidate for clerk of the supreme court. He protested against being called Frederick.

ATTACKS HILL FIGURES.

Loftus Sends a Circular Replying to the Willmar Speech.

The Minnesota Shippers' association has prepared a circular statement, 40,000 copies of which are being sent throughout the state, in reply to a satement J. J. Hill made at Willmar, Minn., Sept. 22, 1905. This statement was:

"The state of Iowa to-day has an annual income from her farm lands of $8.20 per acre. In Minnesota it is $4.67. In the southern tier of counties it is a little under $6."

The reply was written by George S Loftus, president of the Minnesota Shippers' association, under the heading of "What's the Matter With Minnesota?"

Mr. Loftus says that Mr. Hill admits the soil of Minnesota and its climatic conditions are essentially equal to those of Iowa, and hence his statement arraigns the Minnesota farmers as occupying a low plane compared to those of the sister state. They feel humiliated and outraged by so unjust a charge and maintain that other reasons exist for the state of facts shown. One is that the net earnings per mile of Minnesota roads averaged $4,900 in 1903, while those of Iowa at the same time were $1,730, according to the railroad statements on file. Equalizing mileage, Minnesota paid in that one year an excess of $24,112,058 in net earnings over those paid by Iowa. This burden fell principally on the products of Minnesota farm.

The circular then takes up the assertion by Mr. Hill that he has been a prime factor in rate reductions. It shows that average receipts of railroads over the country in 1903 were 74 cents a ton per hundred miles. The average on the Great Northern was 86.6 cents, although 40 per cent of the tonnage, an excessive proportion, consisted of iron ore, coal, stone and sand and other commodities taking the lowest rates. The much-heralded reduction in grain rates announced by the Great Northern last year has brought hardly any relief to the farmers of Minnesota. It was due, moreover, to the action of the Soo line, as the circular maintains, that any reduction was made.

STUDENT ROLLS REACH 3,911.

Registrar of University Issues Statement Showing Attendance.

From the official figures given out by Registrar E. B. Pierce, the enrollment of students at the University of Minnesota for this year will slightly exceed that of last year. The total registration at this time is 3,911, and at least 200 more will be enrolled in the course of the year. The registration for the year 1905-1906 was 3,941.

The academic department comes first, with the enrollment of 1,384; the school of agriculture, with an enrollment of 700, is second, and the engineering and law colleges are close thirds. There is some surprise over the slight increase of the academic college of thirty-two students over last year. On account of a higher standard of requirements the graduate college shows a loss from 110 to 46. The colleges of engineering, agriculture, chemistry and mining show the largest increase in size. It is expected that the enrollment of the law department, which is now 429, will be increased 75 or 100 with the opening of the second term.

	Beginning of 1906-7.	Total 1905-6.
Graduate (approximate).	46	110
Academic	1,384	1,352
Engineers	424	412
Mines	130	121
Chemistry	52	47
College of agriculture ..	61	50
School of agriculture (approximate)	700	718
Law	429	500
Medicine	180	192
Dentistry	162	180
Pharmacy	71	79
Summer school	256	210
Homeopathic	16	14
Total registration	3,911	3,985

State's Wards Cough.

The Owatonna state public school has an epidemic of whooping cough.

Information is meager as to the seriousness of the malady, but that the epidemic is causing some alarm is indicated by the fact that the Minneapolis juvenile court was notified not to send several children recently committed to the institution, but to detain them in Minneapolis for the present.

Supt. H. A. Merrill of the Owatonna school is expected in St. Paul to consult with the state board of control regarding the matter.

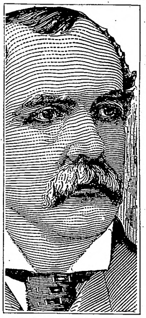
UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.



Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Dyspepsia Is Often Caused By Catarrh of the Stomach—Peruna Relieves Catarrh of the Stomach and Is Therefore a Remedy For Dyspepsia.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. In order to cure catarrh of the stomach the catarrh must be eradicated. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available.

Peruna exactly meets the indications.

Migratory Sheep.

There said to be 10,000,000 migratory sheep in Spain which travel on occasions as much as 200 miles from the plains to the mountains. They are known as transhumantes, and their march, resting places and behavior are governed by special regulations dating from the fourteenth century. At certain times no one may travel the same route as the sheep, which have the right to graze on all open and common land on the way.

Hobson's Choice.

Richmond Pearson Hobson, formerly of the United States navy, and whose election as a Democratic congressman from Alabama is assured, has expressed a desire to have a place on the naval committee. The policy of the minority in the house is against a large navy, while Mr. Hobson is an earnest advocate of increasing it.

Read About Indians and Outdoor Life in a little book that costs nothing. The book describes the Northwest, the land of the future. It is printed on the best of paper, is interesting, profusely illustrated and full of information. It is suitable for your own home, for schools and libraries. It describes the wonderful Yellowstone Park, the wild Bitterroot mountains in Montana, the Queniut Indians—almost unknown—on the North Pacific Coast, and grand Columbia river scenery, the marvelous Puget Sound region, and Alaska. It costs but the postage required to mail it. It will be sent to any address for six cents. The book is "Wonderland 1906," published by the Northern Pacific Railway, and is for general distribution. Send six cents to A. M. Cleland, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minnesota, or as many times six cents as you wish copies, with proper addresses, and the little volume will be promptly forwarded by that gentleman. Don't wait! The book has an object—to educate and inform the public about the Northwest, the region that Lewis and Clark explored and made known to us. Help it perform its mission.

Sixty-Three Years a Teacher.

Zepheniah Hopper of the central high school in Philadelphia has begun his sixty-third year as a pedagogue. He graduated with the first class of that school in 1842 and two years later began to teach mathematics there. He has been associated with the institution ever since, more than 25,000 pupils having studied under him.

Leek Her Floral Emblem.

Queen Alexandra enjoys the distinction of being the only sovereign in modern times to wear the leek as a floral emblem at a state function. The wild leek has long been regarded as the national emblem of Wales, and it was as such that Queen Alexandra wore it at a drawing room which she held on St. David's day.

Low Temperature.

"Do you believe that Barkson really had the rich Plukley persuaded to run away with him?"

"Not I. He's too cold. Why, I don't believe his own prejudice would run away with him."—Puck.

He who seeks out the suffering never needs to worry as to whether he is walking with the Savior.

Vote for Jeffers.

Then vote for Ford.

Also vote for Linnihan.

And whatever you do don't forget Joe Perrault.

The funny little Olberg Journal refers to him as "Hon Cole."

Get wise, says the Thief River Falls Press. Get wise yourself Sid, and see how it feels for a change.

"Every purchasable ward healer" would include about four-fifths of the population of Thief River Falls, wouldn't it Johnnie?

The county auditor's office is one, above all others, that requires the services of one trained in the accountant's work. And Jim Ford is that man head and shoulders above the Thief River Falls candidate.

The Crookston papers are saying unnice things about each other, the bone of contention being Senator A. D. Stephens. Looks as tho they would forget the Red Lake county seat contest for a little while.

Old A. L. Cole
Was a merry old soul,
A merry old soul was he;
But in the boil and bubble,
In the toil and trouble,
He won't get the votes, you'll see.

Elect a man for county auditor who will refuse to do the bidding of the Red Lake Falls gang.—Thief River Falls News.

And elect a man who has pledged himself to do the bidding of the Thief River Falls gang. Not yet.

Look out for fraud. Remember what a change there was in the vote of Red Lake Falls two years ago as returned by the election and then counted by the court, says the Thief River Falls News. Yes, and the News is urging the election of the man who made that change. You better back up Johnnie.

For Your Protection

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street New York

Every purchasable ward healer in Red Lake county is working for the Red Lake Falls gang ticket.—Thief River Falls News.

You do us wrong, Johnnie. We tried to purchase a few but they all said they were owned body and soul by the Thief River Falls gang.

Shall the majority rule, innocently asks the Thief River Falls Press. Sure and that is why the voters of Red Lake county ought not allow Thief River Falls to defeat every candidate who wont pledge himself to use his office for the benefit of the Thief River Falls gang.

When you hear a lumberman opposing Mr. Cole, it is very easy to understand the reason why, says the sophisticated Brainerd Tribune. Now that is a right happy thought but in view of the fact that Cole was nominated by the machinations of the head and front of the lumber barons, Tom Shevlin, you won't hear of any lumberman opposing him. This is even easier than trying to understand a reason that doesn't exist.

If Senator Beveridge isn't an anarchist, he is at least preaching a doctrine dangeous to the success of his party. This is what he said in a recent speech: "When a fortune reaches a point where it is no longer the result of individual effort and thru accumulations of its own force it ceases to be a blessing and becomes a curse. No man ought to own a hundred million dollars. In a republic of free and equal men no man ought to have immeasurable power that the possession of such tremenduous riches give him."

Thief River Falls News is as abhorent of the truth as the cheapest liar that ever lived and the lies it has printed about Jim Ford ought to satisfy any disciple of Annanias without adding to the list each week. Mr. Ford never made a campaign on the blank book proposition and the county isn't at the present time paying as much for blank books as it did in former years as the News would have it. And if it did Mr. Ford is but one of a committee of three on purchase and the bills must afterward be allowed by the county commissioners, so to a man with any honesty of purpose whatever the situation isn't one even worth lying about.

Bob Dunn; king of dyspeptic and jaundiced abuse, of disappointment and senile decay; peevish, fretful, whining; with nothing in his soul but envy, hatred and malice for all who oppose him. Defeated for governor by John A. Johnson, all his days are consumed in splenetic hatred of the governor. In the last issue of his Princeton Union, he attacks the governor for going over the range country in a special train and even while Bob was writing his stuff Candidate Cole was doing the self same thing. It is the limit of narrowness of all human nature which sees only good in itself, only evil in others. Poor old Bob, king of dyspeptic and jaundiced abuse, of disappointment and senile decay!

FRANK JEFFERS

"Vote for Jeffers" is an expression up one side of the county and down the other and contains a meaning that is recognized by all voters for he has as many warm personal friends as any man in the county. It is just, too, for there is no act of kindness he would not do for a man whether he had any claim upon him or not. He can't help it, it is the way he is built. But beyond personality, Frank Jeffers [illegible] a mighty efficient register of deeds and where the title to land depends upon efficiency in that position it is wise to have a man of his known ability in charge of that office. No one has ever had the occasion to find fault with the way he has kept the records of the office and there is little wisdom in changing to one who knows nothing of the office. Just "vote for Jeffers" and let it go at that.

PUT UP A JOB ON SNITZ.

Early Day Jokers In Atchison Laughed a Saloonkeeper Out of Town.

A good many years ago a German named Herman Snitz kept a saloon on Fourth street. Charley Layng and W. C. McPike used to go in there occasionally in the morning for a glass of beer and a bite of lunch. They entered from the rear of the old McPike & Fox drugstore, then located on the south side of Commercial street, below Fourth. On their way into the place one morning they found an old cistern on Snitz' premises. This cistern was uncovered and Mr. Pike suggested to Snitz that he cover the cistern or someone would fall into it. Snitz put boards over it, but the next morning, when Layng and McPike went into Snitz' place they kicked the boards off the top of the cistern and again complained to Snitz. This they kept up several weeks, and greatly enjoyed Snitz' confusion. They told Snitz that people were talking about his carelessness and Snitz said he was being driven crazy over that cistern; he said he spent half his time putting boards over the mouth of the cistern, but these were kicked off every morning by Layng and McPike. The jokers finally had a straw man made in the McPike and Fox warehouse, and this was thrown into the cistern secretly. Then Layng and McPike went into the beer saloon and again complained of the dangerous condition of the cistern. Snitz followed them out, saying he was doing his best. "It would be easy for a man to fall in," Layng said. By this time the three stood beside the cistern. "Good heavens," McPike said, "there is a man in there now!" Great excitement. In two minutes the alley was full of people. Snitz wanted to pull the man out, but Layng said: "Do nothing until A. D. McConaughy, the coroner, comes." The coroner arrived and selected a jury from the crowd. Then the man was drawn to the surface and his true character discovered. Layng and McPike, at the time the body was drawn to the surface, were at Harmony Garden, laughing. Snitz was so annoyed over the affair that he sold his place and left town.—Atchison Globe.

This Girl Is a Baseball "Sharp."

Because many women who attend baseball games are credited with silly remarks about plays it does not follow that all the freshly laundered summer girls who sit in the grandstand are ignorant of the sport, says the New York Press. On the contrary, some of them have a good knowledge of the intricacies. What's more, there are girls who can play ball, despite a popular impression. Miss Marion Reynolds often has been asked to play baseball with youths in Belfast, Me. In the Eastern college she attended she threw a ball 181 feet. When the story was doubted by her friends at home she confounded them by hurling the regulation horsehide sphere 182 1-3 feet. And there is nothing about her to suggest the "emancipated" being.

Constipation is one of the chief causes of appendicitis. If your bowels do not move at least once a day, something is wrong. Brown, Jr., who returned from a trip Saturday to the different towns of Northern Minnesota reports that they are meeting with fine success and that all the towns are taking up the Red River Valley Development and Immigration Association with much interest and that clubs are being formed in many places in order to help the success. The success of the venture is now assured and the publicity part of the work will begin about the middle of next month.—Times.

It will probably be an item of news to most readers that a postmaster is not compelled to make change for you when you make purchases at Uncle Sam's office. This is a queer rule that not one in a thousand persons know. Buyers of stamps or any purchasers at a postoffice must furnish their own change, i. e., the postmaster could insist on the buyer furnishing his own change if he sees fit to do it; but usually the post master is glad enough to get rid of his "chicken feed" and is always ready and willing to accomodate the public by making all the change it asks for. If a man wishes to buy fifty cents worth of stamps and has but a silver dollar, he would be compelled to buy a dollar's worth of stamps or go and get his silver dollar changed or do without his stamps if the post master was stubborn and refused to make change for him, and postmasters are not compelled to take more than twenty-five pennies at a time, if they do not want them.

I., says: "My kidneys were weak from childhood, and for eight or ten years past my back was very painful and I had many annoying symptoms besides. When I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I weighed only 120. To-day I weigh 165, and am in better health than for years. Doan's Kidney Pills have been my only kidney medicine during four years past. They bring me out of every attack."

HOUSTON'S CAREER.

Texas' Tribute to Its Most Striking Figure Was Well Merited.

The State of Texas has recently placed a statue of Gen. Sam Houston in the capitol at Washington. This was as it should be, for he was not only a great Texan, but probably the most striking and commanding figure which has yet appeared in the public life of the Far Southwest, says C. A. Culberson in Scribner's.

Born in Virginia: taken to Tennessee at an early age, whence, while yet in his teens, he went to war with Andrew Jackson against the Creek Indians: desperately wounded in the battle of the Horseshoe Bend; adjutant general of Tennessee and a representative in congress from that state; governor of Tennessee in his youth: married, separated from his wife in two months, resigning immediately as governor, self-exiled for years among the Cherokee Indians, emigrating to Texas in 1832; member of the convention of 1836, which declared Texas to be an independent republic; general and commander-in-chief of the army which achieved independence at San Jacinto: twice president of the republic, United States senator, and governor of the state.

While there is much of surpassing interest in his remarkable career with which the present generation is unfamiliar, his relation to the secession of Texas in 1861 naturally excites the greatest public concern. The popular impression is that he was opposed to secession on principle as well as on consideration of expediency and that he remained steadfast in this opposition until his death in July, 1863.

A FOOD CONVERT.

Good Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve dyspepsia, keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion — dyspepsia — is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to stimulants is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash increases his loss of power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an adv. I tried Grape-Nuts food, and after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved.

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way.

"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonfuls at a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." THE Brangwyn Mystery

"Oh, but you do," laughed Alexis. "You try to persuade yourself that you don't, as almost everybody does. That is why we allow ourselves to be betrayed into false confidences. We pretend to ourselves that we trust this man or that, and when he betrays us we feel aggrieved. But to give sway to the real impulse of the soul would be death to treachery. No man will ever betray me, for I shall never trust anybody but the trustworthy. I stand for instince, and, as I said just now, at the bottom of your mind you know that I'm right. You don't deny that I've hit your impression of myself, do you?"

"No," said Truscott, lingering on the word: "I don't."

"Exactly!" said Alexis, as if he had achieved a triumph.

"But I don't know," said Truscott, in his downright way; "I don't know how you found me out. I never gave you any token, as far as I know, either of one sentiment or the other."

"No," Alexis assented eagerly. "They radiate, my friend; they radiate! And if you preserve your native receptivity you know the truth at a glance. There are two men amongst all others I have met whom, if we trust were only mutual—as it never could be, mind you, for they have their own instincts as well as I—two men—no more—whom I would grapple to my soul with hooks of steel." He dropped back against the cushioned back of the car, and suddenly to Truscott's amazement, leaning forward again, laid a hand upon his knee and said; "You're one of 'em."

Truscott was too dumbfounded by this extraordinary outburst to find an immediate answer. He was not a man who carried his emotions in his pocket to scatter like small change as his companion seemed to do, and yet there was something in the manner of Alexis which seemed to bespeak sincerity—a something which moved him strongly.

"My cousin Aloysius is the other," Alexis said. "A steadfast man, an immovable man. A man of iron purpose—iron patience. It's given to some of us irresponsible Johnnies," he went on, with a startling change from deep seriousness to frivolity, "to worship the qualities which are so absolutely denied to us. I shall always be liked by those who are content to take me at a surface valuation, but I shall never inspire a real trust in anybody. Now, there's that poor dear old calf of a Billery. For a clever fellow he's the most awful fool I know. He's got no will of his own—no more backbone than a jelly-fish—and yet everybody with a pennyweight of discernment in him knows him to be as stanch a friend as a bulldog to his master. You'd trust him with your fortune or your sweetheart, or with the secret that would hang you. But then Billery drinks, and Billery drunk is the indiscreetest old donkey in the world. Pity that one fault should undo virtue, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Truscott, "it is a pity; but Billery's mending, don't you notice?"

"I see it," Alexis answered. "I'm very glad of it for his own sake. I hope the reform will last."

Then he fell into a moody silence after his own fashion. The motor-car hummed smoothly along for the greater part of an hour, and they were nearing the end of their journey before he spoke again, and then only in answer to a question.

"You don't see much of your cousin, Brangwyn, do you?"

"No," he answered then; "very little."

"He is a man whom I should like to know," said Truscott.

"I can well believe you," answered Alexis. "You'd find a hundred points in common. If you don't mind asking your chauffeur to pull up, you can drop me here. Thanks for a very pleasant drive. Good-by."

They parted at the junction of New Bridge street and the Embankment, and Truscott saw him hail a hansom. He plunged back into thoughts of business. That day he was to help in the making or the marring of a ministry. A baronetcy was being dangled at him, but that was sure to come sooner or later and the temptation did not move him much. He had become a power in the land, and the chief private secretary of the prime minister was lying in wait for him when he reached the sumptuous room in which he worked.

Alexis, as forgotten as if he had never existed, jolted springily in his hansom along the broken and uneven road of the Embankment, on his homeward way. Arrived at his destination he paid the driver with a capricious liberality, and as he did so he was faintly conscious of a shabby figure loitering at the curb. He gave the man no second glance or thought, but as he walked leisurely up the broad stone steps which led to his own suite he was very vaguely aware of a slipshod following footstep, to which he paid no heed at all. He had drawn out from his pocket the latchkey by which he meant to admit himself to his chambers, and was holding it loosely in readiness between finger and thumb, when the slipshod footstep behind him quickened and a hoarse voice said: "Monsieur."

The staircase was a trifle dim just there, and Alexis turned on the landing to peer downward at the person who accosted him. It was the shabby figure of the street below, but Alexis looked at him with no recognition. The man was not ill-dressed for his apparent station in life, but he was travel stained, and his face was in a dusty sweat. He shuffled on his feet under Alexis's gaze, and the sound he made on the stone stair proclaimed plainly enough that his boots were broken.

"Halloa!" said Alexis. "Who are you? What do you want?"

"Monsieur has forgotten me," said the other. "I am Lepellitier."

"Lepellitier? I don't know you. What do you want?"

"I have a message from Grimaud monsieur."

"From Grimaud?" asked Alexis. "And when did you get your message from Grimaud, my friend?"

"To-day," said the man, after a momentary but noticeable hesitation.

"Ah!" replied Alexis. "Come inside. I must see a little more of you." He opened the door and stood aside for his interlocutor to enter. "You are Lepelletier, are you? And you bring me a message from Grimaud?"

"But yes, monsieur," the man answered, standing before him and twisting his cap in both hands. "I am Lepelletier, and I have a message from Grimaud."

"Tenez donc," said Alexis. "I begin to think I know you. You are an old convict, n'est-ce pas?"

"But yes, monsieur," said the man, still twisting his cap in both hands. "I am an old forcat, as you come to say, and I am here to represent Grimaud."

"And when did you get your authority to represent Grimaud?"

"To-day, monsieur."

"You are a liar, my friend," said Alexis, quietly. "Grimaud was murdered at Manor Wantage at half-past 9 o'clock on the night of Saturday last. They bury him to-morrow."

"Ah!" the man answered, coolly. "They have identified him?"

"Yes," Alexis answered, "he is identified. And now, don't you think, my friend you had better go?"

Go?" asked the man, with quiet insolence. "Go where? To the police? To the cousin of monsieur? Listen, monsieur. I am worth your consideration. Neither monsieur himself, nor monsieur the cousin of monsieur, would desire to have trouble over an affair which has been buried for so many years. It is true that Grimaud has gone, but I am here to represent him. I am discreet. I can hold my tongue. It is worth while to ask me to hold my tongue. It would have been worth Grimaud's while to have recognized the hold I have. But he would not; and as a consequence, monsieur, I succeeded to that unfortunate's estate."

"You villain," said Alexis, "do you confess——?"

"I confess nothing, monsieur. I only say that if Grimaud had been a little more considerate to an old comrade——"

"You killed him?" said Alexis, in a choking whisper.

"Well!" the man answered. "I see no value in denial. Yes, Monsieur Brangwyn, I killed him. And I am here to take his place. I can hold my tongue as well as he could, and what he knew I know. I will go now for a hundred francs, and I will give you an address to which you can send more to-morrow."

Alexis drew out his purse, and poured a little stream of gold upon the table. It was more by far than the man had asked for, but he did not pause to count it.

"Go," he cried hoarsely. "Go! And if you set a value on your life never let me see your face again."

"I will write, monsieur, to-night," he said, and saluting in military fashion, he went away.

Alexis stood stock still until he heard the outer door close behind him. Then he cast himself upon a couch as if he were diving into water, and broke into a a long fit of passionate weeping.

"Oh, vain fool!" he cried, "vain fool! vain fool! When I saw Grimaud's face this afternoon I thought the long agony of fear was over. No help. No help. No rest. No peace. Never, never. Never on this side the grave!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

The acquaintance between Billery and Parson Lisle was ripening into friendship, and the visitor found himself a tolerably frequent guest at the high tea which on Sundays took the place of dinner at the rectory. This of course led to an arrest in that pursuit in which Miss Molloy and her friends had assumed Billery to be engaged, and when they met the young lady was tenderly reproachful with him. She was not so unmaidenly as to intercept him on his weekly way to church, but somehow or other it did so fall out that Billery overtook Miss Molloy in the course of a somewhat circuitous ramble in which she indulged in on fine Sunday afternoons. In these mended days he had groomed to a nicety, and was a cavalier to whose escort no lady of Miss Molloy's vivacious disposition could have made objection. It had chanced that for three Sundays running Billery had suffered himself gladly to be spirited off to the rectory, where he rejoiced greatly in long, scholarly discussions with the parson, which being renewed from week to week lured him back to many a morning's pleasant study of the old classic favorites he had so long neglected.

Miss Molloy heard his footstep behind her this pleasant summer Sunday afternoon and thrilled at it, but when he drew up, hat in hand, beside her she was so surprised that she gave a pretty little scream, and for a moment was quite overcome with a bashful confusion.

"Oh, how ye startled me, Mr. Billery," she said, casting her eyes shyly up to his face and shyly down again, and blushing. "Ye came up like a ghost."

"Did I, indeed?" said Billery. "I was walking at my usual pace, I fancy. But perhaps you were thinking, Miss Molloy?"

"'Deed, I was then," said Miss Belle; "and I don't think you'll easily be guessing the unworthy object of me thoughts."

"I wish," said Billery, with an innocent gallantry, "that I had only had the happiness to be present there."

To the end of his days he will never know what that speech meant to him.

"Oh, Mr. Billery," said Miss Molloy, "I'm afraid ye're a deceiver, an' that ye don't wish anything of the kind. Ye say it just to flatther me."

"Indeed I don't," said Billery. "I'm sure one would always like to be present in the thoughts of one's friends."

"Now, how ye turn it off, now," Miss Molloy answered, in a coquettish confusion. "I thought," in a tone between banter and reproach, "that ye were paying me a very pretty little personal compliment."

"Oh, no," said the unconscious Billery: "indeed I wasn't. I spoke quite seriously, believe me."

If Miss Belle's spirits were momentarily damped by this rejoinder she gave no sign of it.

"Well," she said, "'tis a fact now. Ye were in me mind at the very minute that ye stole up so quietly an' startled me."

"Dear me," said Billery; "was I, indeed?"

"Ye were, then," answered the lady; "and I was thinkin'——"

She paused and looked up at him and looked down again.

"No, I'll not tell ye what I was thinkin'."

"Oh, please do," said Billery.

"Perhaps I'd better not," said Miss Molloy.

"Oh, I say!" protested Billery. "You had begun to tell me."

"Well, now," said Miss Molloy, "since ye press me so, I will. I was thinkin' that it wasn't quite like ye to desert an old friend for a new one."

"Indeed it isn't," said Billery, quite wounded at this imputation on his loyalty.

"Well, maybe 'tis not," Miss Molloy answered. "But 'tis three clear weeks running that ye've been taking tea with the rector, and talkin' your rusty, musty, fusty, ould Greek an' Latin with him." This was delivered with a jocular archness, but she dropped into a tone of gentle resignation, which Billery really found quite touching. "Well, I'm gettin' to be an old maid, and I suppose I'll have to grow inured to me situation. But really now, ye'll not desert me altogether, Mr. Billery? Miss Cole and I are lonely enough, conscience knows, and we like to see a gentleman now and then."

"May I come up this evening, Miss Molloy?" asked Billery.

"Why, ye know ye may," said Miss Molloy, "and there's nobody in the world more welcome."

And thus did he, unconscious man, set a seal upon his fate.

(To Be Continued.)

SOMEBODY'S PROFIT.

Mrs. Blinxly's One Objection to Link Sleeve Buttons and the Moral.

"Mrs. Blinxly tells me," said Mr. Blinxly, "that she wishes they'd wear the old style of sleeve buttons, not links.

"The old style buttons, going through the buttonholes in such a manner as to make the ends of the cuff lap made the cuff round when worn and so made it present a uniform wearing surface; whereas link buttons, tending as they do to flatten the cuff, tend to break the cuff at the bend in the back, made sharper as it is by the flattening of the cuff, while sticking out there as it does and so brought in chafing contrast with the inner side of the coat sleeve the cuff wears out sooner than a uniform rounded cuff would do.

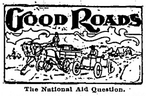
"That's what troubles Mrs. Blinxly. She doesn't object to the link button as such, but because it makes it cost us more for shirts. I tell her not to worry; we can't expect to have everything come our way. The link button may be bad for us, but anyway it's good for the jeweler and the shirtmaker."

The Lion and the Cub.

"Said a distinguished politician to his son. "Look at me. I began as an alderman, and here I am at the top of the tree; and what is my reward? Why, when I die my son will be the greatest rascal in the city."

To this the young hopeful replied: "Yes, dad, when you die, but not till then."

In union there is strength—as many a married man has learned to his sorrow.



The National Aid Question.

It is very gratifying to note that but few of the papers in the country oppose the movement for national aid to good roads. Such remarkable unanimity of sentiment in the press is a clear showing of popular feeling concerning the measure. We all know, of course, that the $24,000,000 sought to be appropriated by the Brownlow-Latimer bills, to be expended at $8,000,000 a year, will not more than start the work of road building. The purpose is to stimulate road improvement by furnishing object lessons to the States, and to aid the States where they are willing to aid themselves. It is an accomplished fact that the building of railroads by Government aid stimulated the building of other railroads without Government aid, and so it would be in the matter of the wagon roads. The building of railroads has made it possible for the products of labor of every sort to be hauled to the points of consumption at the least cost and greatest profit. The railroads have also opened up new sections and made possible our marvelous development, and thus the Government has benefited a thousand fold for all the aid it extended. When we have the same wise policy adopted as to the highways the result will be still more wonderful, and the country will go on to the full fruition of American hopes. And this is what is coming. The statesman of to-day must certainly know that national aid to highway improvement is a fixed certainty of the near future. Public sentiment in a republic like ours does not sleep nor stand still. The world is progressing; it is a progressive age we are living in. The men who hew the wood and carry the water to sustain national life will not always bear burdens that are unreasonable. There is nothing more monstrous in our social and economic system than the imposition of all the expense of road building and maintenance on the farming classes when the benefits to flow from good roads are to go into every household, workshop, manufactory, banking house and mercantile establishment in the United States and our Territories. He will be wise who notes these things and gets on the car of progress. National aid to highway improvement is a demand of the people growing out of conditions that are intolerable. No other civilized country under the sun has failed in building good roads. The people of this country pay a penalty for bad roads that is grievous in the extreme. The way to relief is through the enactment into law of the good roads bills now before Congress. It is not necessary to tell Senators and Representatives that the country needs this legislation; they every one know it, no matter what States or districts they represent. But we may tell them that the demand for it is growing every day, and that the day is close by when the proposition must be acceded to. It is too stupendous in its importance to be flippantly treated by the lawmaking body of the land; it cannot be cried down by jest or special pleading. Nothing less than its enactment into law will be justice to those who sustain the Government.—Brooklyn (N. Y.) Uptown Weekly.

The Nation's Roads.

The wagon roads of the country belong to the nation—not to the States, counties or townships. Every highway in the land is pre-empted by the General Government for the carrying on of an essential part of its business, any interference with which, even though it be by a highway commissioner or road overseer, is immediately resisted with the force of the Government, and the offender sent to prison. The General Government holds fast to the highways of the land for the transmission of mails, and no authority, State or county, may intervene. The Government does not pay one farthing as a privilege in doing this. The Government does not pay one penny of the expense of improving or constructing a single foot of road in the land, except in its reservations, parks and cemeteries. The Government has the roads for its own use, and under Federal statutes, if necessary to the continuance of the mails, all other business could be stopped thereon without further ado about it. And yet, we have people who think the Government ought not to participate in the expense of road building in the States. It is a fair and honest proposition to say that the Government ought either to extend its aid to the States in highway construction, as outlined in the Brownlow-Latimer bills now pending in Congress, or it ought to construct a system of roads at its own expense wherever its business, of whatever character, extends. Road building in the United States is a national obligation. The obligation will never be discharged until the country has a uniform system of highways.

A Common Interest.

In many cases the farmers do not like automobiles because they do not know them, and they do not know them because they don't like them. But they are fast becoming acquainted. The farmers are of much service to the automobile owners and the automobile owners are of corresponding benefit to the farmers, for they all need good roads.—Good Roads Magazine.

Eggs in a Tree Trunk.

In felling a large tree some days ago in Cirencester, Gloucestershire, a bird's nest containing four eggs was discovered inclosed in a hollow near the heart of the trunk. The sap rings showed that nearly a century has elapsed since the eggs were laid, and it was obvious that the hollow had closed automatically. The eggs were intact, but slightly faded.

Reforesting in Sicily.

The ancient poets used to sing of the dense forests of Sicily. To-day the mountains are bare. The question of reforesting is a difficult one. Attempts at starting new growth are frustrated by the peasants, who tear down fences and drive in their goats. Only under military protection could new forest trees be grown.

Badly Affected With Sores and Crusts—Extended Down Behind the Ears—Another Cure by Cuticura.

"About ten years ago my scalp became badly affected with sore and itching humors, crusts, etc., and extended down behind the ears. My hair came out in places, also. I was greatly troubled; understood it was eczema. Tried various remedies so called, without effect. Saw your Cuticura advertisement, and got the Cuticura Remedies at once. Applied them as to directions, etc., and after two weeks I think, of use, was clear as a whistle. I have to state also that late last fall, October and November, 1904, I was suddenly afflicted with a bad eruption, painful and itching pustules over the lower part of the body. I suffered dreadfully. In two months, under the skillful treatment of my doctor, conjoined with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I found myself cured. H. M. F. Consolation for the Artist.

The late Lord Leighton, president of the Royal Academy, once had a chance to learn something about himself that perhaps he had not suspected. His chance came to him at a picture gallery, where his painting "Helen of Troy" was on exhibition.

He joined a group of ladies who were standing before it just in time to hear one of the number say:

"It's a horrid picture—simply horrid!"

"I'm sorry, but it's mine!" Lord Leighton exclaimed involuntarily.

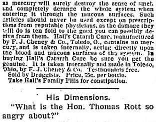
"You don't mean to say you've bought the thing?" questioned the same lady.

"No; I—painted it," the artist humbly replied.

The critical lady was momentarily abashed; then she said easily:

"Oh, you mustn't mind what I say."

"No, indeed, you mustn't," another began earnestly. "She's only said what everybody else is saying!"



THEY CURE ANÆMIA

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the Most Successful Remedy for All Forms of Debility.

Anæmia, whether it results from actual loss of blood, from lack of nutrition due to stomach trouble, or whatever its cause, is simply a deficiency of the vital fluid. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They do that one thing and they do it well.

"As a girl," says Mrs. Jessie Fink, of 180 East Mill street, Akron, Ohio, "I suffered from nervous indigestion and when I was eighteen years old I was reduced in weight to 93 pounds. I was anæmic, nervous, couldn't eat or sleep, was short of breath after the least exertion and had headaches almost constantly. I had a doctor, of course, but I might as well have taken so much water for all the good his medicine did me. Finally my vitality and strength were so reduced that I had to take to my bed for several weeks at a time. I could not digest any solid food and for weeks I did not take any other nourishment than a cup of tea or beef broth.

"While I was sick in bed I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I stopped all other medicine and began to take the pills. Soon my improvement was very noticeable. My strength began to return, my stomach gave me no pain and just as soon as I began to take solid food I gained in weight. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills certainly saved my life. I am now perfectly well, have regained my normal weight of 120 pounds and I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a wonderful medicine."

These celebrated pills are recommended for stubborn stomach trouble, for all cases of weakness and debility, such as result from fevers and other acute diseases. All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or they will be sent by mail postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

 The robins came and told
How they had dared to woo and win
 When early spring was cold.

We sometimes supped on dewberries,
 Or slept among the hay;
But oft the farmers' wives at eve
 Came out to hear us play
The rare old songs, the dear old tunes—
 We could not starve for long
While my man had his violin
 And I my sweet love-song.

The world has aye gone well with us,
 Old man, since we were one;
Our homeless wandering down the lanes—
 It long ago was done.
But those who wait for gold or gear,
 For house or for kine,
Till youth's sweet spring grows brown and sere
 And love and beauty pine
Will never know the joy of hearts
 That met without a fear
When you had but your violin
 And I a song—my dear.

The Lady of the Rock

I.

GILBERT CURTIS had run up to Deephaven to put in a few days there with a friend. The reports of the quaint old town by the sea fascinated him.

His friend Alden had gone to Deephaven early in the summer, and had written as laudatory letters as possible. Then he began to speak of another charm Deephaven afforded. "I can't help pitying her a little, though it's absurd to say that about Mrs. Worthington. But she's so young, and has such a bright, unaffected vivacity, and her eyes are very round, and her eyebrows so arched, and on her temples there is the dimmest little touch of a wandering blue vein, such as shows sometimes through a baby's skin. You can analyze, Curtis, and I can only sympathize. She has been married once, and lost her husband. That was over two years ago."

Each subsequent letter had some allusion to Mrs. Worthington. Then there was no letter at all for a week. Then a short letter without any allusion to her. But Alden urged, almost plaintively, that Curtis would come to Deephaven for a while.

The day Curtis arrived the two men got a boat and drifted around in the little bay. They passed a small promontory jutting picturesquely out into the rippling water. Alden looked glowering at the top of it.

"You see that miserable little cape?" he asked, indicating by his glance the charming promontory. "Ten days ago Mrs. Worthington refused me up there."

"What shocking taste!" murmured Curtis consolingly. "Not in scenery, but in husbandry."

"My dear fellow," went on Alden, impressively, "listen; the afternoon I made such a fool of myself I began to skirmish about for an opportunity to avow my sentiments. She detected the symptoms, and led me to the top of that cape. There is a very comfortable rock there for sitting on, and just below it a small grassy shelf where a man can stretch himself out. Mrs. Worthington perched herself cosily on the rock and looked at the sea. I sprawled out on the grassy ledge and looked at her. Well, when I had made the plunge she was 'so sorry' if her manner had led me to suppose that I had engaged her affection. 'I think,' she said in a real childlike burst of innocence, 'that the air of this place must have something to do with it. You are the seventh man who has proposed to me this summer on this spot! Isn't it odd?'"

"I think it's a nice humorous spectacle," said Curtis. "The little widow leading her victim to this rock when she scents a proposal and giving him his coup de grace there. But, Tom, what a connoisseur she must be by this time in masculine love avowals!"

"She said I did it very nicely,' one of the best, in fact. But she may have told each of the others something equally flattering. The better I did it the more humiliating the throwdown."

"But what a consolation, though, in knowing there are six others in exactly the same boat!" exclaimed Curtis, comfortingly. "Gad! I am keen to see this belle dame sans merci."

"I've no doubt she would be delighted to add you to her list as the eighth," retorted Alden. "This strikes me as a very pretty record in scalps for one summer in a quiet place like Deephaven.

"Well, you are forearmed. When you find her steering you toward that rock, either change your course or your conversation. It is evidently dangerous for lovers. What a triumph it would be for her to wing such a coy old boy as you, Curtis. By Jove," he added, kindling with a new idea, "why don't you couch a lance for your devastated sex? Go in, make the widow love you, and then 'be so sorry that you could have done anything to have aroused such hopes.' Be the 'Avenger' of the Seven!"

II.

Three weeks later two figures loomed up on the crest of the little cape, and were silhouetted for a moment against the pure blue sky. The lady had seated herself upon the rock.

"This is a beautiful spot," murmured the lady. "I love to look out on the bright, happy, sparkling sea."

"Yes," assented the man, "but how much more beautiful it would seem to a man who could look at it knowing that the only woman he had ever loved loved him, and was gazing at it by his side."

The lady's eyes became more dreamy as she turned them from the breezy blue of the sea and let them rest tenderly on the back of his head.

"Esther," he said after a moment, not altering his position, and calling her by her first name with perfect calmness, though he had never so addressed her before, "why did you refuse those seven men this summer?"

"For the excellent reason that I did not wish to marry any one of them," the lady replied promptly, and with a slight asperity; "I did not love them," as if her thought was of what love meant, rather than of the unloved seven.

"Yet you proposed coming out here this afternoon," he persisted, without changing his glance, "to this Rock of the Departed Seven. Why?"

"Perhaps, because I thought the air of the place would be good for you," she murmured, regarding him with a faint, arch smile.

He remained motionless and silent for a moment. Then he shifted his head so that his chin rested in the hollow of his hand, and said, as if abstractedly: "Seven plus one is eight." With a somewhat flippant air, he added: "Are you so very fond of addition, Mrs. Worthington?"

He heard no reply. Turning his head quickly, he saw that the soft smile with which she had been regarding him had faded from her lips. Her beautiful eyes were turned toward the sea, with a veiled expression in them. Just then, too, there was the faintest quiver of her lips.

He sprang to his feet, took a step forward, sank upon the grass, so close to her that her knees pressed against him, and grasped both her hands tightly. His eyes, like sapphire lights which love had kindled, and with the passion breaking forth in his voice at last, he said hotly: "Esther, I love you. You shall marry me."

III.

"Dear Alden—You are asleep, so I leave this on your table where you will get it early in the morning. As an 'avenger' I am a ghastly fizzle. I have been to the rock! When we left it we were bound for the altar, which we hope to reach early this autumn, as we both hate a long engagement. Don't be sore with me, old man, I am loaded with gratitude to you. If you hadn't got me up here I might never have met her! Of course I want you to be the best man. There is one thing the seven can be proud of, and that is, unquestionable taste. Poor Esther! She did not realize what it meant to you, for then she had never been in—But I mustn't talk about Mrs. Gilbert Curtis that is to be, or I would write too much. Yours, CURTIS."

"P. S.—She says I did it worse than any of you."—New York News.

SHORT LIVED DOCTORS.

The Habits of the Physician That Cause His Eventual Ending.

The diseases which claim the most victims among physicians relatively to all males are gout and diabetes, and there is a high relative mortality from diseases of the nervous system and kidneys.

From the nature of his habits the physician is not subject to accidents, and, though he is brought into contact with infection to a greater extent than other men, his preventive means are sucessful and his mortality from infection is very low. Freedom from prolonged muscular strains and high blood tension apparently saves him from arteriosclerosis, but suicide claims many, and so do the drug habits acquired by the nervously exhausted. It has been said that three-fourths of French morphine users are physicians.

The cause of the physician's early death is evidently the excessive nervous expenditure, insufficient rest and defective nutrition, inseparable from his calling, with its broken and restricted sleep, irregular hours of work, rest and meals, the worry when lives depend upon his judgment and the lack of a day of complete relaxation in each week. The physician who sees his patients every day in the week, month after months, and cannot learn to forget them when he goes home, merely burns the candle at both ends. He violates the law obeyed by every other animal, that there should be short periods of moderate exertion interrupted by longer periods of rest when repairs are made. It is not too much work as a rule, but scattered work, which prevents rest.—American Medicine.

Stories of Places.

In any Servian village there is only one swineherd, and he leads all the pigs of the community. In the morning he goes through the streets blowing his horn and the pigs come out of their own accord and fall in behind him and follow him to the pasture. At night he brings them home and they disperse to their sties in the same orderly way as they pass the houses to which they belong. They require no attention and no singling out.

Australia has adopted the system of drying milk. The milk is dried between steam rollers and sold as a powder, from which nothing but water has been extracted and to which nothing but water requires to be added to make wholesome, clean and sterile milk. A leading medical officer is reported to have said that the adoption of dried milk at some of the asylums for consumptive patients and in general hospitals has proved a success.

This winter the Norwegians have varied the excitement of ski running by yoking the runner to a motor cycle by a long leather strap, which he grasps with his left hand. The speed attained is enormous and great skill is required to avoid being pulled over, as the body is apt to outrun the feet. The pastime is growing very popular.—Chicago Daily News.

WORLD BETTER THAN IT WAS.

Hon. Carroll D. Wright Takes Issue With the "Exposure" Sensationalists.

As guest of honor at the monthly meeting of the Merchants' Club, at the New Algonquin Club house, in Boston, Hon. Carroll D. Wright, president of Clark College, considered the subject of "Public Conscience" before the members. The president of the club, Elwyn C. Preston, presided.

President Wright said that he believed the world is growing better, rather than worse, as indicated by sensational writers, who, he said, found that writing cold facts was not profitable, hence they delivered the salable articles of strong sensational charges against people in high office. He refuted the charge of William Allen White, who said that more than ninety-eight per cent. of the employes at Washington are grafters. He pointed to the "star route" and "whisky ring" scandals, which, he said, were gigantic, compared with the recent postoffice exposures. Yet at the present time the public conscience is so acute that the latter were made to appear stupendous by comparison. "The difficulty is," said President Wright, "we are comparing the present with the past, using perfect statistics of to-day with imperfect ones of years ago." He took to task the clergymen who preach against supposed graft and use statistics incorrectly interpreted to substantiate their contention.

He spoke of the enormous financial tranactions of the United States Government involved when a transfer is made from one United States treasurer to another, a transaction into which billions of money enter and which are fully and correctly accounted for without error to the extent of even one cent. This he cited as a remarkable illustration of honesty and fidelity, in the aggregate, of men in high official place and he further drew a lesson from the absolutely insignificant percentage of loss to the country and the Government through dishonesty on the part of its officials and employes in any branch of its service throughout the United States.

With a tabulated chart, Mr. Wright showed that crime had decreased with the increase of population. He quoted a well-known writer who said that there were more people in Massachusetts State Prison than there were in Virginia's penetentiary; but the speaker explained this condition by saying that one particular crime is punished by a State prison sentence in this State, while in the other it only involves a $20 fine.

Speaking further regarding crime in Massachusetts, he added that the number of people arrested for mere drunkenness is larger by far than in other States, with proportionately larger number of imprisonments. This, however, he stated does not necessarily mean that in Massachusetts there is a larger proportion of cases of this one offence, as compared with other States, but rather emphasizes a stronger public feeling and a better awakened conscience for treating it than is found elsewhere.

"Civilization brings into recognition any bad conditions," he said, "but does not create them. True citizenship lies in the fact that every man, whether he knows it or not, gets more out of the community than he can do for the community. He is a servant of the community, whether he recognizes his service or not, for every man in some degree helps along the work in sensitizing, like the photographer's plate, the public conscience which puts down corruption, which would not be recognized if the public conscience were not sensitive."

President Wright referred to what he stated to be the "stupendous claim" of Robert Hunter that there are in the United States ten millions of people in poverty. This statement the speaker refuted as having absolutely no real basis of fac., and he added that Mr. Hunter's claim has been thoroughly exploded.

Webster Beaten by a Woman.

In the somewhat famous case of Mrs. Bodgen's will, which was tried in the Supreme Court many years ago, Daniel Webster appeared as counselor for the appellant. Mrs. Greenough, wife of the Rev. William Greenough, of West Newton, was a very self-possessed witness. Notwithstanding Mr. Webster's repeated efforts to disconcert her, she pursued the even tenor of her way, until Webster, becoming quite fearful of the result, arose, apparently in great agitation, and, drawing out his large snuffbox, thrust his thumb and finger to the very bottom, and, carrying a deep pinch to both nostrils, drew it up with gusto, and then extracting from his pocket a very large handkerchief, he blew his nose with a report that rang distinct and loud through the crowded hall.

He then asked: "Mrs. Greenough, was Mrs. Bodgen a neat woman?"

"I cannot give you full information as to that, sir; she had one very dirty trick," replied the witness.

"What was that, ma'am?"

"She took snuff!"—Boston Herald.

Killing Bluejays to Protect Quails.

The Oroville Gun Club is waging warfare against the bluejay tribe, in order to protect the quail. The bluejay is a ruthless enemy of the quail, destroying every nest found, and so numerous have they become in this vicinity that quail are getting scarcer every year, and the sportsmen felt compelled to take some action. The club is divided into two teams.

The team killing the smallest number of jays during a specified time banquets the winning team. Prizes are also offered for the highest individual score made each week. The first week of the contest 432 birds were killed, and the second week, ending Sunday, March 11, 407.—Oroville (Cal.) Correspondence Sacramento Bee.

OPERATIONS AVOIDED

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

Margrite Ryan
Margret Merkley

The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation, she felt that her death knell had sounded.

Our hospitals are full of women who are there for just such operations!

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help.

The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot find words to express my thanks for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me. The doctor said I could not get well unless I had an operation for the trouble from which I suffered. I knew I could not stand the strain of an operation and made up my mind I would be an invalid for life. Hearing how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had saved other women from serious operations I decided to try it, and in less than four months I was entirely cured; and words fail to express my thankfulness."

Miss Margret Merkley, of 275 3d Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Loss of strength, extreme nervousness, severe shooting pains through the pelvic organs, cramps, bearing-down pains, and an irritable disposition compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor, after making an examination, said that I had a serious female trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation as my only hope. To this I strongly objected—and I decided as a last resort to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"To my surprise the ulceration healed, all the bad symptoms disappeared, and I am once more strong, vigorous and well; and I cannot express my thanks for what it has done for me."

Serious feminine troubles are steadily on the increase among women—and before submitting to an operation every woman should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn Mass. for advice.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been curing the worst forms of female complaints; all functional troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement, weakness, irregularities, indigestion and nervous prostration. Any woman who could read the many grateful letters on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office would be convinced of the efficiency of her advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DO YOU KNOW

That a sharp retort is often made in blunt language.

That if you haven't put them on yet, its time you did.

That an amateur performance covers a lot of histrionic sins.

That a knocker is usually a man who has failed to make good.

That in the twilight of reflection even shadows come home to roost.

That it will all be over, even the shouting, in about two weeks more.

That most people are willing to confess the things they can't lie out of.

That reputation is reckoned by what we do, not by what we say we can do.

That a thinking cap was never intended to protect your head from the cold.

That it is quite natural in his salad days for a man to be particular about his dressing.

That when the opposing attorney offers to compromise it means you have the better case.

That a girl can make a man forget his own mother if she tells him how brave and strong he is.

That if a man hopes to awaken and find himself famous he must do a lot of work before he goes to bed.

That the man who thinks he has a will of his own is bound to meet a woman with a won't of her own.

That the low shoe in winter time is a species of vanity that treads the path leading to the doctor's office.

A lot of people who don't go to church would surely do so if they could be convinced it was wrong.

That a girl wouldn't get half as much fun out of flirting if her mother told her it was good for her health.

That an exchange says some men give according to their means and others according to their meanness.

That you really ought not wink at people; some of them find it perfectly shocking to their sensative natures.

That a Red Lake Falls wise woman says there is nothing more lasting than a man's love—for himself.

That the wise man goeth about putting coal in his cellar and he hunteth up his last winter's snowshovel.

That the man who sits down and waits for something to turn up will get his reward sooner or later. His toes will turn up.

That the season of mistaking men for deer is fast approaching; but the season for mistaking women for dears is with us always.

That there is no woman so susceptible to the finer forms of flattery than a woman who persists in saying she doesn't like flattery.

That to know just how to sing's
A thing desirable, but then
It's well to know how not to sing,
And also where and when.—Ex.

That we are admonished not to let our right hand know what our left hand does but there are mighty few contributors to charity that don't get caught at it.

That it is said women live longer than men because they take better care of themselves and they are getting a big start in the business world because they do not bum as much as men.

That a difference between people is that some go around with chips on their shoulders for some one to knock off and others go around with blocks on their shoulders that should be knocked off.

That a Wyoming paper contains this news item: "Since Frank Mansfield got his new auto he has spent about all his time learning to knock the threads off the pedestrian's pants unless it be a woman, of course." It is pleasing to know that Frank drew a line somewhere.

That this one from Everybody's magazine is not too bad: One day Willie's mother found her young hopeful holding his pet rabbit by the ears. From time to time he would give bunny a violent shake and demand sharply, "Two plus two? Two plus two?" or "Three plus three? Three plus three?" "Why Willie," asked his mother with deep concern, "what makes you treat your poor little Bunny that way?" "Well" replied Willie greatly disappointed, "teacher told us in school today that rabbits multiplied very fast, but this dummy can't even add."

BAD BLOOD
THE SOURCE OF ALL DISEASE

Every part of the body is dependent on the blood for nourishment and strength. When this life stream is flowing through the system in a state of purity and richness we are assured of perfect and uninterrupted health; because pure blood is nature's safe-guard against disease. When, however, the body is fed on weak, impure or polluted blood, the system is deprived of its strength, disease germs collect, and the trouble is manifested in various ways. Pustular eruptions, pimples, rashes and the different skin affections show that the blood is in a feverish and diseased condition as a result of too much acid or the presence of some irritating humor. Sores and Ulcers are the result of morbid, unhealthy matter in the blood, and Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders that will continue to grow worse as long as the poison remains. These impurities and poisons find their way into the blood in various ways. Often a sluggish, inactive condition of the system, and torpid state of the avenues of bodily waste, leaves the refuse and waste matters to sour and form uric and other acids, which are taken up by the blood and distributed throughout the circulation. Coming in contact with contagious diseases is another cause for the poisoning of the blood; we also breathe the germs and microbes of Malaria into our lungs, and when these get into the blood in sufficient quantity it becomes a carrier of disease instead of health. Some are so unfortunate as to inherit bad blood, perhaps the dregs of some old constitutional disease of ancestors is handed down to them and they are constantly annoyed and troubled with it. Bad blood is the source of all disease, and until this vital fluid is cleansed and purified the body is sure to suffer in some way. For blood troubles of any character S. S. S. is the best remedy ever discovered. It goes down into the circulation and removes any and all poisons, supplies the healthful properties it needs, and completely and permanently cures blood diseases of every kind. The action of S. S. IS FALSE IN EVERY PARTICULAR

A TOWN THAT WILL DISAPPEAR FROM MAP

Thief River Falls About to Lose Its Railways, Postoffice and Saw Mill.

Red Lake Falls Joined With All Creation to Destroy the Once Thriving Hamlet.

Thief River Falls is doomed and in a very short time, not to exceed perhaps two or three months, there will be nothing left for the inhabitants of that once—in the long ago—thriving village to do but follow the town which will have disappeared from the face of civilization. The news is terrible in its revelation and is a record of high-handed hatred the citizens of Red Lake Falls bear toward their brethren of the north.

Thief River Falls has been a quiet little berg of far more pretension than performance and it was its ambition that brought about its downfall. Behold there was a crowd of ogres banded together in Red Lake Falls to destroy all the county of Red Lake so that nothing would remain but the city of Red Lake Falls. In Thief River Falls these ogres were called the "Red Lake Falls gang" and were held in great awe and fear by the Thieves and they did everything they could to raise up all the county against the ogres that Thief River Falls might obtain the county seat which Red Lake Falls and its ogres clung to so tenaciously, also that they might have every office-holder in the county labeled and owned body and soul by themselves so they would no longer be compelled to do the fearsome things the ogres commanded of them. These good "Thieves" were actuated by the highest motives and their motto as they went about to prepare for and hasten the destruction of the ogres was "A square deal"—for themselves. But, lo, they were weak and fought much among themselves and failed to accomplish their holy desires. So they painted their faces with a fair semblance of piety and honor and righteous doing and prayed with the people of the county to destroy these ogres with their votes and the ogres hearing of the same made ready for battle.

They first went to the Soo railroad officials and obtained their promise to remove the depot from Thief River Falls and work tearing up all the tracks within six miles of that town will begin immediately after election until they will have no more Soo road there presently than a jack rabbit.

Not satisfied with thus destroying the chiefest delight of the "Thieves" these ogres have compelled Jim Hill to remove the depot and tracks of the Great Northern from out the confine of the municipality of the "Thieves." This work too will be commenced immediately after election.

Nor is this all. The postoffice at Thief River Falls is to be removed to Highlanding and henceforth when the Thieves would have their mail they must travel miles to get it and the ogres have planned to encounter these "Thieves" as they go forth for their mail one by one and slay them.

The next step toward the destruction of Thief River Falls is even now in progress. The town is possessed of a very large lumber mill employing several people who give of their wages freely to the support and maintainance of the city. This support is to be withdrawn after election for the mill is to be immediately closed to Thief River Falls forever and moved away.

So it will [illegible] pass that within sixty days [illegible] election Thief River Falls [illegible] a post-office, a sawmill [illegible] road or any thing else, if [illegible] thing else worth while.

Now it is to be presumed that with the complete blotting out of Thief River Falls, the ogres will next turn their attention to smaller towns, St. Hilaire—and by the way Red Lake Falls was also the cause of the going out of business of the saw mill in that town—Plummer, Sunbeam, Erie, Brooks, Terrebonne. All are doomed for the ogres of Red Lake Falls are a terrible lot and have no use for any living thing out side their own town. Rats!

Note—This is a bungling, clumsy, idiotic, assinine fairy story but with that it isn't so much so as the Thief River Falls News' puerile fake last week about the Red Lake Falls people "indeavoring to destroy the little hamlet of Wylie." The people of Red Lake Falls would just as soon think of trying to destroy the big Hamlet of Shakespeare.

Wylie Farmers Elevator and Mercantile Company Pass Resolutions Denouncing as False in Every Particular the Thief River Falls News' Story that Red Lake Falls People are Trying to Destroy the Town of Wylie

Whereas there appeared on October 26, 1906, an article in the Thief River Falls News claiming that the citizens of Red Lake Falls were conspiring with the Great Northern Railway Co., to prevent the Wylie Farmers Elevator and Mercantile company from building its elevator and aiding and abetting the Railway company in destroying the village of Wylie, and

Whereas, we are informed that this issue of the same paper had a wide circulation in this county of said date, and

Whereas, we feel that a great injustice has been done the citizens of Red Lake Falls by the publishing of said article in the said Thief River Falls News.

Therefore, Be it resolved that we condemn said article as being false and unfounded in every particular as regards the people of Red Lake Falls; that instead of being against us they have aided us both financially and legally and we feel we are under great obligations to them for their aid and assistance; that our County Attorney, Thomas Germo, has represented us and the people of Wylie successfully ever since the beginning of the contest with the Great Northern company and when that company endeavored to have an injunction issue restraining our association from erecting an elevator, Mr. Germo was retained by us and succeeded in having the application for an injunction denied by Judge Watts.

Resolved further, that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded by the secretary for publication to the News and Press of Thief River Falls, Eleven Towns, Sunbeam, St. Hilaire Spectator, Plummer Pioneer, and the Red Lake Falls Courier and Gazette.

Signed,
Wylie Farmers Elevator and Mercantile Company.
By—Nick Eckstein, President.
—C. B. Crizen, Secretary.
Dated Oct. 30, 1906.

The foregoing resolutions are a sufficient answer to what is probably as foul a lie as that prince of liars the Thief River Falls News, knows how to manufacture without a scintilla of truth upon which to base its cowardly maliciousness.

It was in its last week's issue that the News ran its triple column display head front page story, "Trying to flim flam the people of Wylie and vicinity," "The Great Northern railroad and the people of Red Lake Falls are endeavoring to destroy the little hamlet of Wylie." Then follows lie after lie until one would think the author's sole and only occupation was to lie, lie, lie.

"As is well known," says the prince of liars, "the Great Northern Railroad acting at the instigation of the 'business interests' of Red Lake Falls desires to take up the railroad track from Wylie to St. Hilaire." Probably it does but that the Great Northern should act at the instigation of the "business interests of Red Lake Falls" is as palpably idiotic as it is false. "The object of Red Lake Falls was to kill the town and to force the farmers living in the vicinity of Wylie to do their trading and sell their wheat (where there is only one buyer) at Red Lake Falls." Another foul and foolish lie. There is more than one buyer of wheat in Red Lake Falls, and as far as the part Red Lake Falls is said to be playing, how does it compare with the language of the resolution. "the people of Red Lake Falls have aided us financially and legally?" But there is little use in taking up the News statements seriatim because the whole story is false.

The object of the News in circulating its cheap lies is to create a sentiment against Red Lake Falls for election purposes but how the News can afford to create a reputation for being the lowest and dirtiest trickster in all Minnesota journalism for the sake of a few votes passes all understanding. And, at that, this story of the News is only on a par with its editorial column. Week after week they have been filled with a mass of lies that, unless the people of Thief River Falls in their mad desire to get the county seat are lost to all sense of honor and decency, they must condemn it as being lower than the lowest, and contemptible even in the News with all its widespread reputation for knavery and falsehood.

A copy of the resolutions has been sent to the News in abundant time for this week's publication and if there is a lingering spark of the fast dying ember of manhood about the sheet it will publish the resolutions in justice to the people it has gratuitously attempted to deceive.

SENATOR CLAPP WAS HERE

Claims All Good Things Come from Republican Party.

United Senator Moses E. Clapp delivered a political address at the opera house last Thursday night and, in strict justice to him, it may be said he made as fair a talk as could be expected from any kind of a partisan.

With the coming of a United States Senator and a big brass band to stir up enthusiasm it was surprising how many empty seats there were in the hall but even the empty seats must have enjoyed the eloquence of the speaker.

Dr. N. M. Watson presided and his brief introductory talk was filled with enthusiasm. Referring to local matters he paid high tributes to County Attorney Germo and Fred Richards, candidate for superintendent of schools. He then introduced Henry O. Bjorge, representative from Meeker county. Mr. Bjorge gave a desultry talk on inconsequential matters and gave way to Senator Clapp. The Senator was at his best and he was followed with close attention. National politics took up much of his time and, quite natural ly, he claimed all good things on earth their origin and their continued existence in the republican party. He paid a glowing tribute to Senator Nelson and [illegible] A. L. Cole [illegible] he ever had [illegible].

CANDIDATE HAS A FIGHT

Bad Blood Has Been Created at Plummer.

Travelers from Plummer yesterday tell the story of a fight Tuesday evening in which E. M. Stanton of Thief River Falls and a prominent Plummer man came to blows.

There are two versions of the story: one to the effect that the row started in a saloon; Stanton called up the crowd to have a drink and then he made some slurring remark about his opponent for the county attorneyship which the Plummer man resented with a blow.

The other story says in the altercation Stanton struck the first blow and was then attacked with a buggy whip. The parties were separated by bystanders but not until both had given vent to their feelings.

The Courier has been at some pains to verify the reports but while all reports tell of the fight, it is difficult to learn who was the aggressor.

HALL = CROMPE WEDDING

Marriage of a Popular Young Couple on Tuesday.

Mr. Selvan Hall and Miss Annesy Crompe were married Tuesday morning at the Chapel at St. Joseph's school by Rev. Father Fayolle. The chapel was very prettily decorated and there were present the relatives of the parties and only a few immediate friends. The maid of honor was Miss Rosie Allard and the bride was also attended by Misses Anna Hall, Marina Crompe and Laura Lizee. The best man was Mr. Noel Delorme. The bride was handsomely gowned in white liberty satin princess, trimmed in allover lace.

At the ceremony the bridal mass was celebrated, after which the invited guests assembled at the home of the bride's parents for the wedding breakfast and to make merry during the afternoon.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Crompe and is one of the fairest young ladies of the city and altogether as charming a bride as has gone forth from the city this year. The groom is at present a resident of Cass Lake where he but recently went from this city. During his several year's residence in Red Lake Falls he was the druggist at W. A. Schrieter's, a young man of excellent habits and ability. He and his bride left on the evening train for Cass Lake where they will be at home to their friends after December 1.

TO THE VOTERS

Being unable to see all the voters of Red Lake county before the election, I respectfully ask for your vote and support at the coming election Nov. 6th., and if I am elected to the office of County Treasurer I shall undertake to perform the duties of the office in an honest, efficient and reliable manner.

Respectfully,
—O. T. Tanberg.

VOTE FOR JEFFERS

WHY HE SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED GOVERNOR

Twenty-five Reasons Why Governor John A. Johnson Should Receive Majority.

One Good Term Deserves Another and He Has Made Good Ought to be Sufficient.

1. Governor Johnson has saved the State $30,000 in less than two years by having the Insurance Commissioner placed on a salary basis. His progressive stand for insurance reform has commanded national recognition, with official commendation from the President of the United States, who recognizes the fellowship of fearlessness. No one else could step in and take the place of Commissioner O'Brien in the midst of uncompleted work of the highest importance.

2. His administration of the Dairy and Food Department has driven from the state the box-car dealer in foreign and impure foods, and the scientific aid rendered by the Department to Minnesota's great dairy industry has received recognition from the general government. Commisioner Slater's unfinished plans will make the department of increasing value to the state.

3. He is a man of the people; as a son of Minnesota he has shared the common lot in the fight against adversity, and as Governor his interests and sympathies have been those of the people on every public question.

4. He has increased the capacity of the State prison binder-twine plant 2,000,000 pounds, and demands that the excess product be sold on the open market to protect the plant from annihilation by the cordage trust.

5. He has reduced child labor in Minnesota factories and the free-employment bureau opened under his direction has given work to 10,000 working people without extra cost to taxpayers.

6. He has made public timber in the northern woods as safe as tho it were at the capital; and put an end to the system under which it was cheaper to steal the timber, than to buy it at legal sale.

7. Recent reductions in Minnesota grain and merchandise rates, made pursuant to his recommendations, will save Minnesota farmers and merchants this ensuing year alone over $1,500,000 in freight rates.

8. He has proved that the present need of Minnesota is not more railway legislation and evasion and delay, but an aggressive administrative backbone in the enforcement of the laws we have.

9. He stands unequivocally for the reciprocal demurrage freight protection of shippers—a measure on which his opponent in the last legislative session voted both ways the same day.

10. He is the Governor of and for all the people, regardless of party, section or nationality, and has before him a single ideal—the highest public interests.

11. His declaration for a two-cent passenger rate and the abolition of passes for the state officials has been endorsed even by the late Republican State Convention.

12. He has infused vigor and public spirit into every branch of the state government, whether held by republican or democratic officials.

13. His board of Equalization has increased the assessed valuation of iron mines and public service corporations by over $50,000,000.

14. He has taken the department of educa[illegible] of politics and protected th[illegible] public school lands by [illegible] power of the law.

Casualty.

Matt Duss, a trammer, was instantly killed in the Isle Royale mine at Houghton, Mich., by falling down the shaft from the sixteenth to the twenty-first level.

Four persons were killed, one is missing and about 100 were injured by a gasoline explosion in the Meinerding dry goods and hardware store at Fort Recovery, Ohio.

Frank McClure of Iowa Falls, while painting the court house dome in Webster City, Iowa, fell a distance of forty feet to the third roof. By remarkable and almost incredible good fortune the man escaped without breaking a bone. He is terribly bruised, however, and is in a critical condition.

Foreign.

Joaquin D. Cassasus, Mexican ambassador to the United States, has formally tendered his resignation to President Diaz, and the announcement of the fact will be made public in the next issue of the Diario Officiale.

Information received at St. Petersburg confirms previous reports that the sultan of Turkey is gravely ill. Although he attends the selamik and grants audiences, his malady is incurable and will perhaps soon have a fatal termination.

Terry McGovern and Young Corbett fought a hard six-round bout at the National Athletic club in Philadelphia. When the gong announced the close of the battle there was little to choose between the fighters. The fight was one of the bloodiest ever witnessed in the city.

TO MAKE CHANGES IN THE CABINET

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT MAKES OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF PLANS.

TWO NEW FACES AT BOARD

MEYER AND STRAUS GET PLACES —TRANSFER CORTELYOU AND BONAPARTE.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The following statement regarding the prospective changes in President Roosevelt's cabinet was made public at the White House yesterday:

"Oct. 23, 1906.

"On the retirement of Secretary Shaw and Attorney General Moody from the cabinet the following changes will be made:

"Secretary of the treasury—George B. Cortelyou.

"Postmaster General—George von L. Meyer.

"Attorney General—Charles J. Bonaparte.

"Secretary of the Navy—Victor H. Metcalf.

"Secretary of Commerce and Labor—Oscar S. Straus."

When Changes Occur.

The general understanding for some time has been that Attorney General Moody will retire on the first of the coming January and that Secretary Shaw will follow him on the 4th of March. On the first of the year, therefore, Mr. Bonaparte, who is now secretary of the navy, will succeed Mr. Moody as attorney general, and he will in turn be succeeded by Mr. Metcalf, the secretary of commerce and labor, the latter's place being filled by Mr. Straus. Mr. Cortelyou, now postmaster general, will take Secretary Shaw's place on the 4th of March, at which time Mr. Meyer is to become postmaster general.

First Hebrew in Cabinet.

Mr. Meyer, who will become postmaster general, is ambassador to Russia, to which place he was appointed on March 6, 1905. The appointment of Mr. Straus caused considerable surprise, as it will be the first case where a citizen of the Hebrew faith has been made a member of the president's cabinet. He was born Dec. 3, 1850, and is well known as a merchant, diplomat and author. He represented the United States as minister to Turkey on different occasions.

WOMEN STORM THE COMMONS.

British Parliament Scene of Outburst of Suffragist Hysteria.

London, Oct. 25.—Unusual excitement in connection with the reopening of parliament yesterday was caused by the presence of about 100 women suffragists, many of whom, despite the protests of the police, managed to find their way into the outer lobby of the house of commons, with the intention of buttonholing the members in support of their movement. A number of the suffragists mounted vacant chairs in the lobby and began to harangue the few members present in that part of the house.

The women resolutely refused to leave the house without being ejected by force, clung tenaciously to the stalwart policemen, the railings or other means of spuport and offered strenuous resistance to expulsion, while shouts of "We will have votes!" and "You cowardly men dare not give us justice!" resounded through the halls.

Finally the police were forced to carry out several of the women bodily, and the struggling and shouting suffragists were all ultimately deposited in the palace yards, where for some time they continued their vehement protests. A procession of house of commons attendants followed the women, bearing hats, cloaks and fragments of millinery and finery dropped in the scuffle.

So noisily demonstrative were some of the leading suffragists that after they had been expelled from the house the police arrested eight of them and marched them off to the nearest police station.

The reassembling of parliament drew large crowds to Westminster, despite the fact that the opening of the sessions was devoid of sumptuous ceremony or the appearance of royalty, as this was merely a resumption of the preceding session.

Carter Harrison Injured.

Montreal, Oct. 25.—Former Mayor Carter H. Harrison of Chicago was taken yesterday morning from Ridout, Ont., via Toronto, to Chicago, suffering from a badly strained back and possibly internal injuries. With a party of friends, all from Chicago, he was moose hunting back of Chapleau, when he was injured during a portage.

MEXICAN REBELS EXECUTED.

Notwithstanding Denials, It Is Said Rebels Were Put to Death.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 25.—A special to the Republican from Tucson says that a well known citizen of place, whose name is withheld, has returned from Nogales, where he was authoritatively informed that Salcide and all the other revolutionists recently deported from Arizona were taken to Hermosillo and summarily executed, notwithstanding official statements to the contrary.

MILWAUKEE ROAD HIT HARD

EXISTENCE OF COMBINE OF GRAIN MEN TO FIX PRICES ALSO SHOWN.

Kansas City, Oct. 25.—Some of the things brought out here yesterday at the grain hearing by the interstate commerce commission were:

Evidence of favoritism shown to the managers of the Kansas City elevators of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway in the matter of granting reduced grain rates to shippers.

The existence of a rule in the Kansas City board of trade threatening its members with suspension if they dealt with irregular grain men, so called.

A combine of members of that organization to fix prices.

Threats of Boycott.

Threats by grain dealers' associations to boycott board of trade members who might buy from farmers and others against whom the associations had issued orders

A score of grain dealers, elevator men and railway officials were examined.

E. W. Shields, elevator agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway and active manager of the Simonds-Shields Grain Company of Kansas City, who was instructed by the commissioners yesterday to return here from St. Louis, proved an important witness.

Had Inside Track.

Mr. Shields said he was in Chicago last fall, when he was called upon to advise about a special export rate on corn. He helped make a rate, effective several days later, then came home and bought corn right and left. He shipped 3,500,000 bushels of corn under the special rate. He had bought more than 1,000,000 bushels before other dealers learned that the reduced rate would be made.

Again, this summer, he said he happened to be waiting around the office of the vice president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway when the roads agreed on a cut of 2 1-2 cents a hundred pounds on wheat. He went out and sold several hundred thousand bushels for delivery under the rate

WOULD RAISE PAY OF 17,000.

Postal Department Has Recommendation to Make to Next Congress.

Washington, Oct. 25.—If a recommendation that will be submitted to congress at its coming session by the present administration is enacted into law, thousands of clerks and carriers in postoffices in Minnesota, Wisconsin, the Dakotas, Iowa, Illinois and other states of the West will be granted increased salaries in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1907. The retirement of hundreds of clerks from the postal service, directly traceable to inadequate salaries, induced the authorities to incorporate in the estimates just submitted to the treasury an item of $25,000,000 for the compensation of clerks, an increase of $3,000,000 over the present amount available for the purpose.

There are at present 28,500 clerks in first and second class postoffices throughout the country. As the estimates provide for nearly 17,000 promotions it will be possible, in the event that congress makes the appropriation desired, to raise the salaries of more than half of the clerks now employed.

WAS WORST STORM ON RECORD.

Blizzard in Colorado Most Severe Ever Known for This Time of Year.

Denver, Col., Oct. 25.—Eastern Colorado experienced a blizzard yesterday, but the weather bureau holds out hope of clearing weather. Snow ceased falling in Denver this afternoon, the storm center having moved eastward. The storm takes rank as the most severe at this time of year of which the weather bureau has any record. Snow began falling here last Friday night and continued about ninety hours. The actual fall in Denver was about twenty-one inches, and in some other portions of the state it was four feet or more.

The weather map issued yesterday shows a great change in weather conditions in the last twenty-four hours. The low pressure which has prevailed over Northern Colorado and its eastern strip and Southern Wyoming has filled up

Cripple Creek, Col., Oct. 25.—Heavy snow yesterday morning completely tied up the high line electric system and compelled most of the mines on Bull and Ironclad hills to close down. Trains were several hours late. The weather cleared late in the day, but a high wind drifted the snow badly.

SUES FOR PLACE ON TICKET.

Candidate for County Superintendent Goes to Court.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 25.—I. I. Kaasa has commenced an action in the district court to have his name placed on the official ballot for county superintendent of schools. Kaasa filed as an independent candidate, but owing to alleged defects in the petition the county attorney ruled that his name could not be placed on the ballot.

LIES THREE MONTHS IN WOODS.

Body of Supposedly Murdered Man Is Found at Last.

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 25.—The decomposed body of an unknown man has just been found in the woods near Kimball, Mich. MAY BE CLUE TO OCEAN TRAGEDY

FOUR HUNDRED LIFE PRESERVERS COME ASHORE NEAR CAPE HATTERAS.

PLUCKED FROM JAWS OF DEATH

FLORIDA STORM VICTIMS, ADRIFT, PICKED UP AFTER ONE SUICIDES.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 27.—A maritime puzzle that may be the result of an ocean tragedy came ashore near Cape Hatteras yesterday in the shape of more than 400 life preservers.

Between Hatteras and Big Kinnakeet the beach is strewn with cork jackets. Some are marked "Caswits, Rettunyayurcer, G. R. P., No. 108,341." Others are stamped "Sealanan." Two bear the name "Smeskf." Three miles north of Big Kinnakeet a part of a white yawl boat and a fragment of a boat's gunwale washed ashore. There are no marks on this wreckage.

Probably Passenger Ships.

Because all the life preservers and the pieces of wreckage came on the beach in such a limited area, and because of the large number of jackets, shipping men here are of the opinion that whatever the cause may be, it occurred not far from the coast, and that if there is a wreck it is probably that of a passenger ship. A search among the marine records has failed to reveal any names that correspond with those on the life preservers, and life preservers are generally marked with the name of the boat they are on. It is probable a revenue cutter will be sent out to search off Hatteras for further traces of a wreck.

Driven Mad by Suffering.

Counting the minutes, which seemed to them to be but few, intervening between them and death; bruised, bleeding, hungering and athirst, five men adrift on a bit of wreckage off the Florida coast saw one of their companions whose sufferings had driven him mad, throw himself into the sea to death, and not long afterwards a ship which was coming saved their lives.

The five survivors of one of the greatest tragedies which has ever occurred on this coast were landed here yesterday by the British steamer Heatherpool, Capt. John Grieves, commanding.

Dashed to Pieces by Cyclone.

The survivors, with about 145 others, were constructing a concrete viaduct for the Florida East Coast railway through the Florida keys and were aboard Houseboat No. 4, which lay anchored off the coast on the night of Oct. 17. The great hurricane which swept over the coast struck the houseboat about 1 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 18, and No. 4 broke adrift. The houseboat soon afterwards foundered and all of the 150 men aboard were thrown into the sea. The houseboat was dashed to pieces by the waves.

Many Were Killed.

Many of the men were killed by heavy timbers which struck them as they were struggling to find means of rescue. Six men lashed together two timbers and lived on this raft until one man became mad from suffering and injury and threw himself into the sea.

British Vessel Wrecked.

Astoria, Ore., Oct. 27.—During the heavy weather off the mouth of the Columbia river early yesterday the British bark Peter Iredale, Capt. FARMERS WANT $1 FOR WHEAT

East St. Louis, Ill., Oct. 27.—Prices on farm products were fixed yesterday by the American Society of Equity at its convention here, and by accepting the report of the committee the members of the society bind themselves not to sell products at less than the following prices:

In nearly all instances the list of prices is to be based on Chicago markets, the exceptions being the price of beans, which is based on Detroit quotations, and cotton on New York. It was explained in the convention that members must receive the prices named, less the cost of transportation.

There were stormy scenes in the convention yesterday. The fixing of prices was opposed on anti-trust grounds. The convention re-elected its officers, except the treasurer, the new treasurer being John V. Stell of Indianapolis.

News of the Northwest.

IS RESCUED IN NICK OF TIME

MINNEAPOLIS THUGS LEAVE HELPLESS VICTIM NEAR OPEN GAS JET.

Minneapolis, Oct. 25.—Bound, gagged and left to die, his head a few feet below a gas fixture, the valve wide open, Berman Ridges, librarian at the North side library, was rescued by the police at 10:30 last night just as the death stupor was becoming manifest.

Ridges is now in the city hospital in a critical condition from the gas fumes and the beating he received at the hands of two masked men who are still at large.

In his delirium Ridges repeated constantly:

"Let me alone, you ruffians; there's nothing here."

Alone in Library.

Shortly after 9 o'clock last night, Ridges, who was alone in the library, started to close up and was about to leave when two masked men darted through a side door, seized him by the throat and hurled him to the floor. Ridges was then bound and gagged and left lying on the floor while the thugs searched the building. They took $18 in cash from the till.

Then, disappointed at the small amount of plunder, the fiends approached Ridges, who was lying helpless on the floor, and beat him into insensibility.

Not satisfied with this, the thugs closed the doors and windows, and dragging Ridges' unconscious form beneath one of the gas fixtures turned on the gas and left him to die.

Struggle for Life.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Ridges regained consciousness to find himself lying on his back, his hands tied behind him and a gag across his mouth. Slowly settling over the darkened room, the heavy gas fumes forced their way to the floor, while the helpless man, his head throbbing wildly and his mind a maze, gazed blankly into the darkness.

Then knowledge of the fate before him flashed into Ridges' mind, and in the darkness there began a terrible struggle.

Breaking upon the heavy stillness came the shuffle of a heavy body being dragged over the floor, and then close against the wall a human form slowly reared itself, staggering uncertainly Slowly it made its way along the wall to the telephone and once there tottered and almost fell.

Works Gag Loose.

For ten minutes Ridges tried to free his hands, but he failed and was about to give up when a sudden thought flashed through his mind.

Standing close to the transmitter he rubbed his mouth slowly up and down against the metal until at last the gag worked loose and dropped below his chin. The receiver was still to be removed from the hook, and with a desperate lunge Ridges butted his head against the hook and the receiver dropped.

The central at the North side exchange, attracted by the switchboard light, answered the summons. She heard a husky voice, which shouted despairingly: "Call the police to the North side library. I am dying."

Rush to the Rescue.

Then the voice broke. A few minutes later a squad of bluecoats rushed pell-mell through the rain, and in five minutes the front door of the library swung open. A half dozen lights flashed through the room and disclosed, lying in a crumpled heap on the floor beneath the telephone the body of Ridges.

The gas fumes had almost accomplished their work, and the dying man was hurried into the open air just in time to give him a fighting chance for life.

Owing to Ridges' condition the police were unable to get a description of the men, but detectives and patrolmen scoured the city all night in search of the murderous highwaymen.

Desperate efforts are being made to overtake the gang, said to consist of five men, before they reach the buttes, in the southwest part of the state, and it is possible that a battle already has taken place.

It is believed that the gang will stand together and try to drive off the pursuers with firearms, rather than try to escape separately.

Nearly all the firearms in Minot have been turned over to the posses and the town is almost stripped of ammunition, but the citizens are eager to join in the chase, and there is no doubt that still more men will go from here to the aid of the deputies in case they seem to be needed.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 25.—A genuine epidemic of swamp fever is reported to have broken out among the horses in the town of Meadows, fifteen miles west of here. Eleven of the animals have died and a great many are sick. State Veterinary Beebe has been looking into the situation and states that the disease is the result of keeping the horses continually in damp, swampy places. The farmers there have had light crops on account of too much water, and now are losing their horses from the same cause. It is understood that a United States government expert will come and make a study of the disease, as very little is known regarding it.

It was thoroughly demonstrated here this fall that people did not care to witness races if there was anything else to see.

Northwest News.

PHONE WAR IMPENDS.

Northwestern and Tristate Companies Clash at St. Peter.

St. Peter is threatened with a telephone war. Because the Nicollet County Telephone company has permitted the Tristate to connect with the exchange in St. Peter the Northwestern system is somewhat wrought up, and its officers have declared that they will not use the exchange in common with their rival

Ever since the Nicollet County company was organized it was has worked in harmony with the Northwestern and all of the long-distance business of the local exchange has been handled over the wires of the latter. When the Tristate extended its lines into this part of the state they ran one into St. Peter and for five years have maintained a toll station in St. Peter.

In that time repeated efforts have been made to secure permission to enter the central station, and at the last annual meeting of the local concern the Tristate people took a long step in this direction when they were allowed to run into the exchanges at Gaylord, Gibbon and Lafayette. When this concession was granted they were also given to understand that eventually they would be allowed to connect in St. Peter. This promise has now been fulfilled, and in a few days the Tristate will be operating through the exchange.

When the Northwestern company was advised of the action taken by the board of directors it entered a vigorous protest, the officers stating that if the Tristate was admitted their company would withdraw its wires on Nov. 1.

Officers of the Nicollet County company greatly deplore this attitude, as they are anxious to give their subscribers the best service possible and desire the use of both systems. They have hopes of being able to adjust the difficulty.

HOGS DYING OF CHOLERA.

Losses for a Few Days in Watonwan County Amount to $25,000.

Hog cholera has again made its appearance in Watonwan county, and the plague is literally reaping down the hogs. It first made its appearance near Madelia two or three days ago, and even this short space of time has brought a loss of about $25,000 to the farmers of that community.

The disease also prevails in the towns of Riverdale, Fieldon, South Branch and St. James, and the loss is greater each day. The north tier of townships of Martin county to the south of Watonwan is also afflicted with the disease, and many farmers have already lost all their hogs.

One thing, however, seems certain, in the light of experience, and that is that it is a poor plan to ship hogs from warmer climates. Before farmers began to ship hogs from Nebraska and Southern Iowa the cholera was unknown in Watonwan county.

ST. PAUL ARCHITECTS WIN.

Design for High School Is Accepted by St. Peter Board.

Thori, Alban & Fisher, architects of St. Paul, have been engaged to draw the plans for St. Peter's new high school building, their design having been selected over those submitted by seven other draughtsmen. At the annual school election last July it was voted to bond the district for $35,000 to build the school, but of this amount some $10,000 will be spent in remodeling and repairing the present high school building. The new building will have an assembly room with accommodations for 225 students, seven rooms, two laboratories, a library and a gymnasium, and the members of the board of education are arranging to begin work early next spring. Reinforced concrete will be used in its construction, and it will be made as near ly fireproof as possible.

WAR ON POACHERS.

Authorities Will Protect Fur-bearing Animals.

The state game and fish commission has decided to make vigorous war on all poachers who hunt fur-bearing animals in Minnesota before the open season. Furs taken at this time of the year are worth little compared to their value later on, and premature hunting lessens the game for the open season, which begins Nov. 2.

S. F. Fullerton, executive agent of the commission, has received word of the arrest and punishment of two hunters at Swan Lake, Nicollet county. Seventy-five fresh muskrats skins were found in their possession, and they were fined $15 each. The skins are worth but 2 or 3 cents each, but if taken a month later would have brought 20 cents.

MORE SCHOOLS GET SPECIAL AID

Each Will Receive Less of State Appropriation.

There are 309 semi-graded schools, 1,094 first-class rural schools and 462 second-class rural schools which have come up this year to the requirements of the law, and will share in the special state aid provided by an appropriation of the legislature. The appropriation is not large enough to give all the full amount, so the semi-graded schools will get $216 instead of $250, the first-class rural will get $75 instead of $125 and the second-class rural schools will get $30 instead of $50. This will make a total of $66,744 for the semi-graded schools, $82,055 for the first-class rural and $13,860 for the second-class rural schools. Last year 287 semi-graded schools received $230 each, a total of $65,010; 970 first-class rural schools received $92 each, a total of $89,240, and 249 second-class rural schools each received $37, a total of 8,213.

Agencies Should Be Licensed.

Assistant State Labor Commissioner Lynch recently said the law failed to provide any adequate means of preventing employment agencies and contractors from extorting fees from laborers seeking work, carrying them off to some distant locality to labor on their jobs and then leaving them stranded after a few days' employment and in far worse condition financially than when they left home.

"I think there should be some law enabling the state itself to take up such matters," said Mr. Lynch. "At present all the laborer can do is to sue and that would be a poor remedy, for the amount of damages he could claim would scarcely pay the cost of going to law. I should like to see employment agencies obliged to pay a good stiff license fee and the license revoked and the fee forfeited whenever any fraud was perpetrated.

"I hardly think the railroads themselves could do any effective work toward preventing such frauds on the part of contractors, who do their grading and other work, and the employment agencies, even if the railroads should take the matter up. The state should have the power to punish such frauds effectually."

Mr. Lynch spoke of a number of just such instances of fraud on the part of employment agencies, as alleged in the complaint filed in the office recently by R. H. Jefferson of Cottonwood county, an account of which appeared in the newspapers.

"Our department can really do nothing but investigate such cases and give advice," said Mr. Lynch.

The state auditor has received reports from three Northern Minnesota mines owned by the state and operated under leases.

From the Yates mine, in St. Louis county, 153,631 tons of ore have been taken in the last three months. For this the state will receive nearly $40,000 royalty.

During the last quarter 8,660 tons have been mined from the Pool mine at Hibbing, on which the royalty will reach $2,165. From the Mesaba Mountain mine at Virginia 4,913 tons were mined, and the royalty is $1,228.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. In order to cure catarrh of the stomach the catarrh must be eradicated. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available.

Peruna exactly meets the indications.

Migratory Sheep.

There said to be 10,000,000 migratory sheep in Spain which travel on occasions as much as 200 miles from the plains to the mountains. They are known as transhumantes, and their march, resting places and behavior are governed by special regulations dating from the fourteenth century. At certain times no one may travel the same route as the sheep, which have the right to graze on all open and common land on the way.

Hobson's Choice.

Richmond Pearson Hobson, formerly of the United States navy, and whose election as a Democratic congressman from Alabama is assured, has expressed a desire to have a place on the naval committee. The policy of the minority in the house is against a large navy, while Mr. Hobson is an earnest advocate of increasing it.

Read About Indians and Outdoor Life in a little book that costs nothing. The book describes the Northwest, the land of the future. It is printed on the best of paper, is interesting, profusely illustrated and full of information. It is suitable for your own home, for schools and libraries. It describes the wonderful Yellowstone Park, the wild Bitterroot mountains in Montana, the Queniut Indians—almost unknown—on the North Pacific Coast, and grand Columbia river scenery, the marvelous Puget Sound region, and Alaska. It costs but the postage required to mail it. It will be sent to any address for six cents. The book is "Wonderland 1906," published by the Northern Pacific Railway, and is for general distribution. Send six cents to A. M. Cleland, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minnesota, or as many times six cents as you wish copies, with proper addresses, and the little volume will be promptly forwarded by that gentleman. Don't wait! The book has an object—to educate and inform the public about the Northwest, the region that Lewis and Clark explored and made known to us. Help it perform its mission.

Sixty-Three Years a Teacher.

Zepheniah Hopper of the central high school in Philadelphia has begun his sixty-third year as a pedagogue. He graduated with the first class of that school in 1842 and two years later began to teach mathematics there. He has been associated with the institution ever since, more than 25,000 pupils having studied under him.

Leek Her Floral Emblem.

Queen Alexandra enjoys the distinction of being the only sovereign in modern times to wear the leek as a floral emblem at a state function. The wild leek has long been regarded as the national emblem of Wales, and it was as such that Queen Alexandra wore it at a drawing room which she held on St. David's day.

Low Temperature.

"Do you believe that Barkson really had the rich Plukley persuaded to run away with him?"

"Not I. He's too cold. Why, I don't believe his own prejudice would run away with him."—Puck.

He who seeks out the suffering never needs to worry as to whether he is walking with the Savior.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$. 00 Per Year, in Advance.

THEY ARE AGGRIEVED

If the Thief River Falls papers are an idex of the feeling up in that town, the good people there would seem to be aggrieved and hurt to think that Red Lake Falls did not hand over the county seat to them on a silver salver immediately after they asked for it. They seem to think it was cold, unneighborly and unfeeling is us to deny them anything they wanted. That we had the temerity to decline, to say nothing of the selfihness to use the means at hand to retain the county seat, has wounded their sensitive natures and in their agony and bloody sweat they have cried aloud, have abused us, reviled us, lied about us until there may be some unthinking persons who believe we are monsters of ingratitude, and all because we didn't get down on our knees and tremblingly hand out the county seat before they began to shed their childish tears.

Reverse the situation; had Thief River Falls had the county seat and Red Lake Falls begun a contest would they have laid down and said take it? No, they would have fought to the last ditch as we are doing and as we intend to do.

But Thief River Falls has taken the fight into politics and before a move was made here they declared that no man should be elected to office in this county unless he first proved his allegiance to them in the county seat contest. James E. Ford, Joe Perrault, Frank Jeffers, Dan Linnihan, Thos. Germo, Fred Richards and Simon Paul could not qualify under their demands and the Thief River Falls people are resorting to every strategem known to politics—and a lot that are not known to decent politics--to defeat these men.

The county seat matter should have no part in politics but Thief River Falls has forced the issue and there isn't a town on earth but would defend its own if it had any courage whatever.

Thief River Falls has been the instigator of all the trouble and should be rebuked by every voter in the county whose pride in the purity of the ballot actuates his motives. Thief River Falls has dragged its quarrels into politics, let the town be rebuked politically by electing Ford, Perrault, Jeffers, Linnihan, Germo, Richards and Paul.

Vote for Jeffers.

If you see it in the Thief River Falls News you will know it is a lie.

Dan Linnihan is a capable and honorable sheriff. Re-elect him by all means.

Everybody knows that Frank Jeffers ranks high in efficiency in the duties of the office of register of deeds. Vote for Jeffers.

The Courier knows Thos. Germo to be a conscientious and high-minded gentleman and lawyer and has no hesitancy in advising the democrats of Red Lake county to give him their support.

Quiet, unassuming, manly, honorable Joe Perrault, a clerk of court familiar with the duties of his office and they are always given the most careful attention. Joe Perrault should be re-elected.

The Thief River Press woke up last week and said "Hypocrisy" in quite a loud tone of voice. Oh, Sidney, how could you! But never mind just put on your red flannels, go back to sleep again, and perhaps the strain will not injure you greatly.

County Auditor James E. Ford is an honor to the position he has filled with such marked and unusual ability. With the interest of the people of Red Lake county at heart the best advice the Courier can give is to re-elect him.

Fred Richards is a graduate of the Red Lake Falls high schools and is abundantly qualified to fill the office of superintendent of schools. An intimate acquaintance prompts the Courier to commend him to the democratic voters of the county.

Red Lake Falls offers many advantages says the Duluth Herald. It is a realization of this fact on the part of Thief River Falls that has made all the trouble. Thief River wants those advantages and it wont be happy till it gets them.—Crookston Times.

The attempt on the part of the Red Lake Falls gang to bribe S. T. Johnson was a failure.—Thief River Falls News.

If the intimation there came from any other source than the News there might be some little sense in denying the story but—if you see it in the News you know it is a lie.

The Red Lake Falls papers are circulating the story that Lewis A. Nelson has not been a resident of Red Lake county but a year.—Thief River Falls News.

"Papers of Red Lake Falls" includes the Courier and the Courier has never mentioned Nelson's name except in the list of candidates. Again the News lied with apparently great eagerness.

If the voters are lined up as solidly against the "square deal (?)" candidates of Thief River Falls as all the papers of the county, outside of that town, there will be nothing to it but the shouting. The Eleven Towns, Sunbeam, Plummer Pioneer, Gazette and Courier are all agreed and the only other paper, the St. Hilaire Spectator, hasn't shown any signs of favoritism for the Thief River Falls candidates.

In every clime its colors are unfurled
Its fame has spread from sea to sea;
Be not surprised if in the other world,
You hear of Rocky Mountain Tea.
A. L. Reichert.

The first of the Lyceum Bureau's entertainments, the Retz-Nehrbas combination, was given at the Metropolitan Tuesday evening, and was probably fully up to the expectations of the large audience gathered to hear the talented young ladies. Miss Nehrbas was easily the leader of the two. She is a violinist of rare power with an ease of execution, faithfulness to technique and a charm of personality that make one instinctively wish for more. The advance notices asked, did you ever hear a violin talk. If Miss Nehrbas' could, it would probably say it was satisfied to be in her hands. Miss Retz' readings were very well received and she reached her best in "Madam Butterfly." It was the most ambitious of her efforts and gave her an opportunity that did not exist or she failed to grasp in some of the others. If the other entertainments are the equal of this one, Red Lake Falls people will have no occasion to regret their coming.

Superintendent of Schools.

Supt. H. T. McAnulty secured 504 signers to his petition to run as an independent candidate for re-election. Mr. McAnulty is serving his first term as superintendent of schools of Red Lake county. He has devoted his entire time and attention to the interests of the schools. His work as superintendent is highly spoken of by teachers and school officers of the county. He has made several trips to this vicinity and other parts of the eleven towns to help along with the organization of new districts. Through his efforts the board of county commissioners held a special meeting and granted the petitions of districts 47 and 48 in time to hold the required month of school, thereby enabling them to draw the state apportionment this October.

The office of superintendent of schools is one in which much depends on the ability and willingness of the man in charge of it, as the law does not compell a superintendent to do all the work which should be done. He may either look wise and draw his salary, as some do, or get out and hustle as McAnulty has done.

We desire to call the attention of the voters to the fact that our present superintendent who is asking for re-election has received as salary only $1.050 a year, and has paid all his own travelling expenses. Notwithstanding this he has visited the schools in all parts of the county in all conditions of the weather and roads.

He holds a complete state certificate valid in rural and graded schools of Minnesota.—Eleven Towns. 1t

A WOMAN'S KIDNEYS.

Women have much to do, so many pains to suffer, so many critical periods to go through, that it is important to keep the kidneys well, and avoid the backache, bearing-down pain, headache, dizziness, languor and other common signs of weak kidneys. HOUSTON'S CAREER.

Texas' Tribute to Its Most Striking Figure Was Well Merited.

The State of Texas has recently placed a statue of Gen. Sam Houston in the capitol at Washington. This was as it should be, for he was not only a great Texan, but probably the most striking and commanding figure which has yet appeared in the public life of the Far Southwest," says C. A. Culberson in Scribner's.

Born in Virginia; taken to Tennessee at an early age, whence, while yet in his teens, he went to war with Andrew Jackson against the Creek Indians; desperately wounded in the battle of the Horseshoe Bend; adjutant general of Tennessee and a representative in congress from that state; governor of Tennessee in his youth; married, separated from his wife in two months, resigning immediately as governor, self-exiled for years among the Cherokee Indians, emigrating to Texas in 1832; member of the convention of 1836, which declared Texas to be an independent republic; general and commander-in-chief of the army which achieved independence at San Jacinto; twice president of the republic, United States senator, and governor of the state.

While there is much of surpassing interest in his remarkable career with which the present generation is unfamiliar, his relation to the secession of Texas in 1861 naturally excites the greatest public concern. The popular impression is that he was opposed to secession on principle as well as on consideration of expediency and that he remained steadfast in this opposition until his death in July, 1863.

A FOOD CONVERT.

Good Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve dyspepsia, keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia—is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to stimulants is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash increases his loss of power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an adv. I tried Grape-Nuts food, and after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved.

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way.

"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonfuls at a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

FEEDING TESTS AT THE ILLINOIS EXPERIMENT STATION

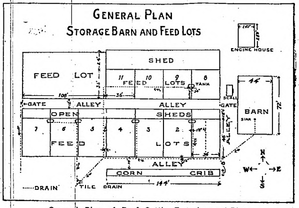
Splendid Equipment Afforded Opportunity for Exhaustive Observation.

The feeding tests carried on by the Illinois experiment station at Urbana have probably never had their equal in the United States, both from the point of extensiveness of the operations and the thoroughness with which the work has been done. The success attained has been largely due to the excellent equipment with which those conducting the experiments have had to work.

The feeding plant consists of a storage barn, sheds, feed lots, watering plant and other essentials to a complete equipment. To the south of the feed lots is a 144-foot corn crib and on the north is a 20x28 engine house.

There are 12 feeding lots in the two rows mentioned, seven of which are situated on the south side of the alley and five on the north side. All face to the south and all are paved with brick with the exception of three lots on the north side of the alley, one of which is used for experimenting with cattle fed in an ordinary earth lot. The sheds on the south side of the alley are open on the south side while those on the north side are inclosed, and provided with large sliding doors. None are paved.

Feed carriers convey the concentrates and chaffed roughage from the second floor of the storage barn to the lots on the south side of the alley. For general plan see cuts on this page.

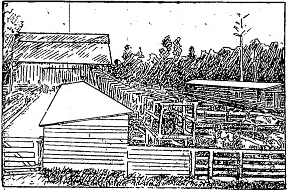


General Plan of Beef Cattle Experimental Plant.

The storage barn, containing a silo, feed grinder, cutter and shredder, feed bins, stalls, and storage room for roughage, is of plank-frame construction, all the framing material being of two inch lumber sized to 1⅞ inches. It is 44 by 72 feet and is divided into five bents.

Beginning at the north, the bents are spaced as follows: 15 feet, 14½ feet; the driveway, 12 feet; 14½ feet and 15 2-3 feet. The foundation is a brick wall 13 inches thick extending below the frost line and rising one foot above the grade line.

The ground was excavated six inches for the floor and the resulting space filled 3½ inches with gravel well tamped, then ½ inch with fine sand over which were laid No. 1 paving brick flushed with cement. The brick were laid flat in all places with the exception of the driveway, where they were placed on edge.



A View of the Sheds and Feed Lots.

The two north sections contain a 30-ton silo, feed bins, cutter, and storage for baled hay.

The walls are 18 feet high; curb, 31 feet; peak, 40 feet; studding 2x6, 24 inches on center; plates, 2x6, two ply; drop siding, 1x8 inches; rafters, 2x6 inches, 24 inches on center; roof sheathing, 1x2½ inches, three inches apart; cedar shingles, 5x2 laid 4½ inches to the weather.

A feed cutter and grinder are located near a 4x14 foot bin on the first floor. This bin has a capacity of 300 bushels. Just above this bin and in connection with it, is a smaller one with a capacity of 100 bushels. Grain is scooped into the south end of the lower bin and elevated into the one above, from which it runs into the grinder and when ground, is elevated to the bins on the second floor.

When ear corn is fed in the form of corn and cob meal it is scooped from a wagon into the grinder and elevated as in the case of shelled corn or other grain. If fed finely broken (similar to crushed corn) it is run through an ensilage machine and blown into bins on the second floor, as is also done with hay when fed in a chaffed state; but if fed broken by hand it is scooped from a wagon to the second floor, through the same opening by which the feed carriers leave the barn.

Other feeds, such as oil meal, cotton-seed meal, gluten meal, bran, etc., which are always purchased in sacks, are conveyed to the second floor by hand from a wagon in driveway of barn. As these feeds are needed they are weighed during the day, placed in feed carriers, and conveyed at feeding time to the lots south of alley.

The lots on the south side of the alley are each 48 feet long by 36 feet wide, exclusive of shed, with a 12x36 shed open to the south. Each lot is enclosed by a board fence four feet eight inches high. All lots are paved with brick. The sheds are not paved.

These lots have gates leading into each other, to the alley, and out of the south end of the lots. There is also a gate in each lot so placed that it, together with the gate between the lots, can close the space between the fence and feed bunk, thereby making it possible to confine the cattle under the shed while the lots are cleaned and in the lots when the sheds are cleaned. Each lot is furnished with a feed bunk for concentrated feed and two mangers for hay. One watering tank is provided for two lots.

The grade used in paving these lots was one slightly above the surrounding level and given enough slope (6½ inches from north to south and 3¼ inches from east to west of each lot) to allow the water to run to the southwest corner of each lot where tile were laid to carry it away.

The shed south of the alley is 250 feet long and 12 feet wide and is divided into seven equal compartments.

The feed bunks are five feet nine inches by 18 feet and are located five feet six inches from the shed. The posts are 4x4s, nine feet apart one way and six feet apart the other way. All extend from the pavement above the bunk to form the framework of the feed carrier's track.

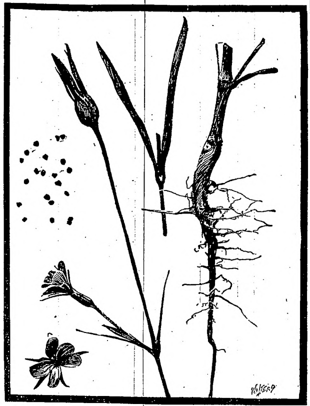
Two hay mangers in each lot are built of material of the same size and in the same manner.

The entire length of the track is 270 feet and the total fall, 11.25 feet, which means a fall of one foot in 24 feet. However, the fall from the door of the barn to the west side of lot 4, a little over half the distance, is one foot in 19.8 feet, while the remaining fall is only one foot in 36.5 feet. Thus it is seen the greatest fall is allowed just after the carriers leave the door.

Select for Breeding.—Early in the fall is the best time to consider the question of selecting birds for the breeding operations of the late winter. They do not need to be actually mated at this time, but should be picked out and put in a yard by themselves, so that they may have the care necessary to their proper development. Keeping all kinds of fowls together is a poor way to get properly developed breeders. It is not possible to give mixed flocks anything but mixed care, at least as regards feeding them. We realize the fact that most flocks on the farm do not receive this kind of care, but it will pay.

White Grubs.—There is no satisfactory remedy for white grubs, except as you turn a herd of hogs on the infested land. They will quickly clean it up; also skunks are valuable helps against this insect. Fall plowing is of value provided the following winter is severe, but unless the ground freezes to a considerable depth it is not of much advantage.—H. A. Gossard, Entomologist Ohio Experiment Station.

Corn Cockle in the Grain Field



Corn cockle is an annual. It is common in grain fields, especially in wheat, and ripens at about the same time as wheat. To eradicate, use only pure seed. It is very hard to separate the cockle from wheat, as the seeds of cockle and wheat are about the same size and weight. The only way to remove the cockle plant from the wheat field is to pull it by hand. This should be done in the part of field set aside for seed wheat.

FERTILIZING OF WHEAT PAYS

By Arthur Goss, Indiana Experiment Station.

Tests conducted by the Indiana experiment station at diffent places in the state for a number of years past have shown that it will usually pay well to use fertilizer on wheat.

While different soils, or even the same soil under different methods of treatment, require somewhat different fertilizers, and about the only sure way of determining the exact needs of a particular soil is by a series of fertilizer tests on the same, it may be said in a general way that the wheat soils of the state are usually benefited by all three of the essential fertilizing elements, viz., nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. Of these three elements phosphoric acid is usually needed in largest amount.

A fertilizer containing about two per cent. nitrogen, eight per cent. phosphoric acid, and two per cent. potash, will produce profitable results in most cases, and is very commonly employed. If used in addition to a heavy crop of clover, the percentage of nitrogen may be reduced, but if used on land that has not been manured or clovered for several years the percentage of nitrogen can probably be increased somewhat with profit. Legume crops should, however, be used to supply nitrogen whenever possible, as they afford far the cheapest source of this element.

On some of the wheat soils of the state our experience has shown that somewhat more than two per cent. of potash can be used with profit, but on most of the yellow or red clays this amount should be sufficient.

A fertilizer of the 2-8-2 composition as above may be purchased ready mixed or it may be compounded at home from the raw materials. If mixed at home the nitrogen may be secured in the form of bone, tankage, nitrate of soda or dried blood. The phosphoric acid may be derived from acid phosphate or bone. Raw rock phosphate or floats is not recommended as a source of phosphoric acid in wheat fertilizers, as tests conducted by the station have shown that this material is not sufficiently available to produce satisfactory results in a single season. Potash may be derived from either the nitrate, the sulphate, or kainit.

A good wheat fertilizer having the nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash in about the same proportion as in the 2-8-2 formula, can be made by mixing sodium nitrate, 14 to 16 per cent. nitrogen, 11 parts, steamed bone, one to two per cent. nitrogen, 20 to 30 per cent. phosphoric acid 15 parts, acid phosphate, 14 to 16 per cent. available phosphoric acid 30 parts, sulphate of muriate of potash, 48 to 50 per cent. potash four parts. Total, 60 parts.

We believe that such a formula can profitably be used on soils of low and medium fertility at the rate of 180 pounds per acre, which would be equal to 300 pounds of the 2-8-2 formula. This amount would cost, for the material contained, about $2.40. Our observation has led us to believe that too small an amount of fertilizer is usually applied in the wheat crop.

Fertilizer is best applied to wheat at seeding time by means of a fertilizer attachment to the drill.

One of the best fertilizers for wheat, or most other crops, is barnyard manure, but unfortunately most farmers are unable to make enough manure to cover their land and must resort to the use of commercial fertilizers. Manure alone, however, is not a well-balanced fertilizer, as it is deficient in phosphoric acid. In order to increase the amount of this material it is excellent practice to add about 40 pounds of acid phosphate to each ton of manure as the same is being made. This not only results in increasing the phosphorus content, but also in preventing the loss of nitrogen. Manure will not only produce excellent results on wheat and other crops, but is also one of the best known means of insuring a catch of clover.

The best results from fertilizer can only be secured when the same is used in connection with proper preparation of the soil, good drainage, good seed, etc. One need not expect the fertilizer to take the place of such necessary conditions any more than good tillage, etc., can be expected to take the place of the plant food necessary to produce the crop.

No danger of injury to the land from the use of fertilizer need be feared if clover or other fertilizing crops are used in the rotation to keep the ground loose and in good condition. If fertilizer is used constantly without such crops the ground may become hard and compact, due to the absence of organic matter.

Effect of Drainage.—The first reason why land is drained is to let in the oxygen between the minute spaces of soil, for the land plant must have oxygen at its roots in a form in which it can use it.

Wiping Udder and Flanks Before Milking

Some experiments conducted at the Storrs experiment statiton in Connecticut indicate beyond reasonable doubt that a careful wiping of the udder and flanks of a cow previous to milking will greatly reduce the filth that naturally falls into the milk pail during the milking.

At Storrs an experiment carried on through the last of April and all of May showed that the average bacteria content of milk taken from a cow with unwiped udder and flanks amounted to 7,058 bacteria per cubic centimeter. Where the udder and flank were carefully wiped with a damp cloth, the bacteria in a cubic centimeter was reduced to 716, showing a decrease of 6,342 bacteria in a cubic centimeter. The diagram shows graphically how the wiping increased the purity of the milk. Doesn't this look as though wiping the udder and flank will pay?

Eggs in a Tree Trunk.

In felling a large tree some days ago in Cirencester, Gloucestershire, a bird's nest containing four eggs was discovered inclosed in a hollow near the heart of the trunk. The sap rings showed that nearly a century has elapsed since the eggs were laid, and it was obvious that the hollow had closed automatically. The eggs were intact, but slightly faded.

Reforesting in Sicily.

The ancient poets used to sing of the dense forests of Sicily. To-day the mountains are bare. The question of reforesting is a difficult one. Attempts at starting new growth are frustrated by the peasants, who tear down fences and drive in their goats. Only under military protection could new forest trees be grown.

"About ten years ago my scalp became badly affected with sore and itching humors, crusts, etc., and extended down behind the ears. My hair came out in places, also. I was greatly troubled; understood it was eczema. Tried various remedies so called, without effect. Saw your Cuticura advertisement, and got the Cuticura Remedies at once. Applied them as to directions, etc., and after two weeks I think, of use, was clear as a whistle. I have to state also that late last fall, October and November, 1904, I was suddenly afflicted with a bad eruption, painful and itching pustules over the lower part of the body. I suffered dreadfully. In two months, under the skillful treatment of my doctor, conjoined with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I found myself cured. H. M. F. Consolation for the Artist.

The late Lord Leighton, president of the Royal Academy, once had a chance to learn something about himself that perhaps he had not suspected. His chance came to him at a picture gallery, where his painting "Helen of Troy" was on exhibition.

He joined a group of ladies who were standing before it just in time to hear one of the number say:

"It's a horrid picture—simply horrid!"

"I'm sorry, but it's mine!" Lord Leighton exclaimed involuntarily.

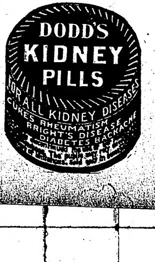
"You don't mean to say you've bought the thing?" questioned the same lady.

"No; I—painted it," the artist humbly replied.

The critical lady was momentarily abashed; then she said easily:

"Oh, you mustn't mind what I say."

"No, indeed, you mustn't," another began earnestly. "She's only said what everybody else is saying!"



THEY CURE ANÆMIA

Anæmia, whether it results from actual loss of blood, from lack of nutrition due to stomach trouble, or whatever its cause, is simply a deficiency of the vital fluid. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They do that one thing and they do it well.

"As a girl," says Mrs. Jessie Fink, of 180 East Mill street, Akron, Ohio, "I suffered from nervous indigestion and when I was eighteen years old I was reduced in weight to 93 pounds. I was anæmic, nervous, couldn't eat or sleep, was short of breath after the least exertion and had headaches almost constantly. I had a doctor, of course, but I might as well have taken so much water for all the good his medicine did me. Finally my vitality and strength were so reduced that I had to take to my bed for several weeks at a time. I could not digest any solid food and for weeks I did not take any other nourishment than a cup of tea or beef broth.

"While I was sick in bed I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I stopped all other medicine and began to take the pills. Soon my improvement was very noticeable. My strength began to return, my stomach gave me no pain and just as soon as I began to take solid food I gained in weight. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills certainly saved my life. I am now perfectly well, have regained my normal weight of 120 pounds and I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a wonderful medicine."

These celebrated pills are recommended for stubborn stomach trouble, for all cases of weakness and debility, such as result from fevers and other acute diseases. All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or they will be sent by mail postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Seasonable Entertainments and Suggestions for Social Functions

By EDITH A. BROWN
Society Editor of the Chicago Record-Herald.

A Thomas Bailey Aldrich Luncheon—"Portsmouth Treaty" Table for Honored Guests—Quotations That Suggest Decorations — Twelfth Wedding Anniversary Celebration—Chinese Menu Served Under Mammoth Parasol.

The second of the club luncheons in the American Poet series could be given in honor of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, who was born on November 11, 1836. His birthplace was Portsmouth, N. H., the town which will pass down into history as the scene of the signing of the treaty of peace between Russia and Japan. A clever idea for the chief table at the luncheon—where the officers and guests of honor are seated—could be worked out in decorating in the Russian and Japanese flags and colors, giving a bit of modern historical interest to the affair.

Mr. Aldrich's lyrical lines are easily adapted to the use of menu description and table decoration. For the tables carry out much the same idea of decoration as that suggested last week for the William Cullen Bryant luncheon, with this exception: instead of the use of the ribbons bearing the table quotation decorate in the flowers or foliage suggested by the quotation and use the lines on the second page of the folder, opposite the menu. This can be done very readily if the number to be seated at each table is determined early, that the writer of the menus may make the necessary divisions of the quotations.

From the prelude to the "Cloth of Gold" may be culled the line:

"A tissue out of autumn leaves," and if autumn leaves are still to be found this line suggests a good table trimming. From the same poem—

"Here a thistle, there a rose"— and the combination should be very attractive.

If the florist is unable to produce apple blossoms in November, go to the milliner. In her stock of trimmings may be found the blossoms very true to life these days, and, even if artificial, they can be woven into a very pretty table decoration. For this table "L'Envoie to Cloth of Gold" gives this line:

"Hailing the apple blossom."

For another combination, "When the Sultan Goes to Ispahan" gives—

"Anemones, myrtles and violets"— which the florists of the cities, at least, will be able to supply.

But most appropriate of all the tables for a fall entertainment is the line—

"The pine cone ripens and the long moss waves"— which is to be found in the poem "By the Potomac." The pine cone and moss forms one of the most beautiful decorations for luncheons or dinners which may be found, and it is of double value because so seldom used.

For the menu one of the "mystery" lines from the poem "Egypt"—

"'Tis neither midnight, twilight or moonrise"— will serve well for clear soup and as the beginning. Then in the order of service may follow:

For an oyster course—

"Dipping the jewels out of the sea," from "Before the Rain." For fish and its accompaniments—

"— costliest fish
And all that the curious palate could wish."—"When the Sultan Goes to Ispahan."

The same poem furnishes the line for the meat course—

"Of spiced meats"—.

With this course will come the bread, to be described by—

"— the amber grain
Shrunk in the wind."—"Before the Rain."

From this last poem likewise comes the suggestion for the glass of water—

"Scooping the dew that lay in the flowers."

The salad course returns to "Cloth of Gold" for its description—

"How strange and shadowy it all seems."

Then comes a series of lines from "When the Sultan Goes to Ispahan" to "order his feast" which will serve the dainty courses. For mixed ices or ice cream:

"Glittering squares of colored ice."

For the cakes, which will be a part of this course—

"Sweetened with syrups, tinctured with spice."

And for the bon bons—

"Creams and cordials and sugared dates."

Coffee, which comes with the bon bons, borrows this line from "Egypt"—

"Fantastic sleep is busy with my eyes," and the luncheon ends with fruit—

"And the grapes reach up to the sunshine," from "Little Maud."

China Wedding.

The china wedding anniversary, which comes with the twelfth year of married life, carries with it but little chance for decoration, since china as a decoration is not particularly adaptable.

Perhaps the best suggestion for a celebration of this kind is the use of a Chinese party. If the entertainment takes the form of a dinner, even a Chinese menu should be served. With the fad for Chinese restaurants growing to a wonderful extent in all cities of size, it should not be difficult to obtain the rice, chop suey, the various ways of preparing chicken, the sweets and the tea for a dinner, and the whole thing would be so odd that the very novelty would be appealing to the guests. The china used on the table should be of Chinese pattern and Chinese lanterns, parasols, dragons, pagodas, temples, sacred monkeys, all may be brought into play with the chrysanthemums, asters and other Chinese flowers.

Dinner will be announced by the ringing of a Chinese gong, and the table should be placed under a mammoth Chinese parasol, with the dining-room lighted with lanterns. For the courses where this is possible make the guests use chop-sticks.

If the host and hostess will wear Chinese costumes and ask the guests to do the same, the dinner will be very realistic. A Chinese orchestra engaged to play during the serving will add to the effect.

JAPAN'S FACTORY SYSTEM.

Laborers in That Country Are Working for a Bare Subsistence.

The problematical discussions of a "yellow peril" seem to Percy Alden, writing in the Westminster Gazette, to fade into insignificance by the side of the still more important question of the effect of Japan's industrial revolution upon the Japanese themselves. "The truth of the matter is that in her desire to adopt European ways and methods Japan has lost sight of the fact that it is only through great tribulation that England and Europe have overcome the worst evils of the industrial revolution. She herself has blindly followed in the footsteps of the west, and, regardless of the consequences, has handed over her working classes to the tender mercies of an employer, who, whatever good qualities he may possess, does not attach any great value to human life. Instead of taking warning by the mistakes of Europe during the latter half of the last century, she has created in her factories and her industrial system those same evil conditions which we have been striving to eliminate for over a generation.

"Not only is the change in industry great, but the change in the character of the people is equally great. The growth of the factory system in Japan often means indentured labor, especially as regards the employment of women and children. This, in itself, is an evil, is perhaps a greater source of mischief, because it results in the destruction of the health and happiness of large sections of the working classes. The girls and women are induced by all sorts of fair promises to leave the country for the town.

"Allured by the thought of high wages, with the possibilities afforded by the holidays and flower festivals of the town; attracted, also, as many peasants are in England, by the false glamour of city life, they leave the paddy fields and the farm and flock to the large centers of population. The result is that 'the field full of folk' is rapidly becoming to be a thing of the past, and physical deterioration is setting in. This deterioration is accompanied by a change in the character of the people. Owing to the stress of competition, to the long hours of labor, lack of opportunities for recreation and amusement, the Japanese worker is losing his light-heartedness, his kindliness of nature, his artistic sense and polite manners.

"The employer and the capitalist are piling up wealth; the laborer, and especially the female laborer, is working for a bare subsistence, and is losing health and strength and all the old bright and happy characteristics. While wages have increased on the average 40 per cent., the cost of food has increased 64 per cent., and rent is increasingly high, especially in the large towns like Tokio, Osaka and Kobe. This will account for the fact that the number of those on or below the poverty line is increasing and the number of electors decreasing. Those who are entitled to the franchise pay at least 15 yen (about $7.50) in taxes. On several occasions factory bills have been brought before the Japanese parliament, but these bills, of the mildest description, have failed to pass into law."

The "Old Jay."

Wiry, quick and energetic, enveloped in an old linen duster, a little man, wearing a slouch hat, crowded his way through the throng in the rotunda of the Tampa Bay hotel when the war expedition to Cuba was in preparation. Nobody seemed to know this quaint looking little old man, and he was given scant attention. On the sun blistered side of the hotel, where the thermometer stood at 110, he was given a room.

When he entered the dining-room the head waiter passed the "old jay" to the last table, where people of little consequence were assembled.

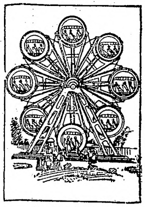
But Maj. Gen. Wheeler, for this is who the "old jay" was, didn't mind all this a bit. He smiled at the flower laden tables reserved for staff and field officers and "shoved" in his simple order of dinner with a lusty appetite.

Afterward, when the "old jay" appeared in a major general's uniform, he immensely appreciated the astonishment depicted on the face of one who had jocosely accosted him as "Rube" on the day before.

NOVELTY IN AMUSEMENT LINE.

Circle Coaster Is of More Than Common Interest.

Amusement novelties of more than common interest are weekly being put forth by enterprising inventors, which would seem to contradict the statements of owners and managers of amusement parks, who declare that there is a scarcity of new ideas. The one here pictured, "the circle coaster," has been patented by a Philadelphian:



Revolving Railway.

It is in the nature of an observatory or revolving railway.

There are eight circular compartments, which rotate on a central horizontal shaft. Within the compartments eight artistic coaches are arranged. These coaches run on wheels. As each compartment is brought at the lowest point the passengers file in. When all is ready for the trip the frame is rotated eight or ten times, at a constant normal speed. The cars always remain at or near the center of gravity—that is, at bottom center of compartments. At night the whole can be illuminated with numerous vari-colored electric lights.

DEAD SON LOOKED IN.

Curious Happening During the South African War.

Preaching in the Congregational church, Seaford, England, Mr. Compton Rickett, M. P., the other Sunday related the following coincidence which he vouched for as true.

A gentleman, whose son was attached to the British forces in South Africa as doctor during the Boer war, paid a visit to two of his sisters. They remarked that they were glad his son had returned home. On the father replying that his son was still in South Africa, they exclaimed that they had seen him looking through the glass panel of the door of the corridor about six p. m., just before the father's arrival.

The father returned to London, and next morning made inquiries at the war office. He was told that information had just been received that his son had died the previous evening from enteric fever, the time being six p. m., English time.

A Chinese Superstition.

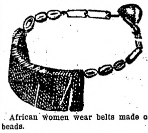
In China telegraph wires are placed underground instead of on poles. The Chinese worship ancestors and regard their last resting place as so sacred that even a shadow must not be cast upon their graves. In the more thickly populated parts of the empire these graves are scattered everywhere, and when the workmen of the first telegraph companies began operations the natives in crowds followed them, and, enraged at what they considered sacrilege, cut down the poles as fast as they were put up.

Discovering the cause of this fanatical zeal, and finding the Chinese government entirely powerless, or indisposed to interfere in a matter touching the religious susceptibilities of the people, the telegraph companies solved the difficulty by proceeding to bury the wires with the venerated ancestors.

Ballooning Affects the Eyes.

A Parisian eye scientist has been making experiments to discover the effects of ballooning at varying altitudes upon the human visual system. At an altitude of 6,000 feet a bottle was flung overboard into a lake beneath. The occupants of the car were able to follow with ease the descent of the bottle through the air, and also able to watch the neck of the vessel as it disappeared into the water. The balloon then soared to a greater height and by examination the doctor ascertained that at this altitude there was a considerable diminution of the pressure on the visual organs. The pupils distended and the sensibility of the optic nerve was appreciably increased.

BEAD BELT.



African women wear belts made of beads.

Without Seeing Daylight.

While sinking a well just outside a town in Mexico, a subterranean stream of water was discovered at a depth of 240 feet out of which were taken hundreds of little fish about an inch in length. As no stream for miles round disappears underground, it is supposed that the fish are spawned and live entirely beneath the earth's surface.

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation, she felt that her death knell had sounded.

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help.

The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot find words to express my thanks for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me. The doctor said I could not get well unless I had an operation for the trouble from which I suffered. I knew I could not stand the strain of an operation and made up my mind I would be an invalid for life. Hearing how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had saved other women from serious operations I decided to try it, and in less than four months I was entirely cured; and words fail to express my thankfulness."

Miss Margret Merkley, of 275 3d Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Loss of strength, extreme nervousness, severe shooting pains through the pelvic organs, cramps, bearing-down pains, and an irritable disposition compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor, after making an examination, said that I had a serious female trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation as my only hope. To this I strongly objected—and I decided as a last resort to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"To my surprise the ulceration healed, all the bad symptoms disappeared, and I am once more strong, vigorous and well; and I cannot express my thanks for what it has done for me."

Serious feminine troubles are steadily on the increase among women—and before submitting to an operation every woman should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn Mass. for advice.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been curing the worst forms of female complaints, all functional troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement, weakness, irregularities, indigestion and nervous prostration. Any woman who could read the many grateful letters on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office would be convinced of the efficiency of her advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Why He Should Be Re-elected Governor

15. His administration has been frank and fearless, vigorous and progressive, and in every way close and responsive to the people.

16. He has stood true to the first essential of a chief executive, the enforcement of the law and loyalty to the public interest.

17. A word fitly spoken by him was followed by a big reduction in rates when the railroad commission was installed.

18. Under his supervision the office of public examiner has been conducted with admirable zeal and discretion.

19. He has fulfilled his pledges, fought the fight of the people, and as Governor has "made good."

20. He stands free alike from boss rule and from timber, mining and railroad domination.

21. The voters wish to display their approval of his honest and fearless conduct.

22. The schools have been administered efficiently and without partisanship.

23. He is far-seeing and quick to support every progressive measure.

24. The law is his guide—not only for himself but for his appointees.

25. In a word he has "made good."

Cotton Picker.

A wise southern inventor has devised an automobile cotton picker. The work which used to require three or four men to the acre can be done by one man with the help of this machine. The great drawback in the cotton picking machine is that unripe cotton is picked with the ripe. This disadvantage is done away with in the new invention. If golden grain belt beer is served at every meal, the home will be cheerful and happy. Its purity and healthful qualities make it the ideal home beverage. RHEUMATISM
CAN NOT BE RUBBED AWAY

It is perfectly natural to rub the spot that hurts, and when the muscles, nerves, joints and bones are throbbing and twitching with the pains of Rheumatism the sufferer is apt to turn to the liniment bottle, or some other external application, in an effort to get relief from the disease, by producing counter-irritation on the flesh. Such treatment will quiet the pain temporarily, but can have no direct curative effect on the real disease because it does not reach the blood, where the cause is located. Rheumatism is more than skin deep—it is rooted and grounded in the blood and can only be reached by constitutional treatment—IT CANNOT BE RUBBED AWAY. Rheumatism is due to an excess of uric acid in the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter which the natural avenues of bodily waste, the Bowels and Kidneys, have failed to carry off. This refuse matter, coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. The aches and pains are only symptoms, and though they may be scattered or relieved for a time by surface treatment, they will reappear at the first exposure to cold or dampness, or after an attack of indigestion or other irregularity. Rheumatism can never be permanently cured while the circulation remains saturated with irritating, pain-producing uric acid poison. The disease will shift from muscle to muscle or joint to joint, settling on the nerves, causing inflammation and swelling and such terrible pains that the nervous system is often shattered, the health undermined, and perhaps the patient becomes deformed and crippled for life. S. S. S. thoroughly cleanses the blood and renovates the circulation by neutralizing the acids and expelling all foreign matter from the system. It warms and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, constantly depositing acrid and corrosive matter in the muscles, nerves, joints and bones, the body is fed and nourished by rich, health-sustaining blood which completely and permanently cures Rheumatism. S. S. S. is composed of both purifying and tonic properties—just what is needed in every case of Rheumatism. It contains no potash, alkali or other mineral ingredient, but is made entirely of purifying, healing extracts and juices of roots, herbs and barks. If you are suffering from Rheumatism do not waste valuable time trying to rub a blood disease away, but begin the use of S. S. S. and write us about your case and our physicians will give you any information or advice desired free of charge and will send our special treatise on Rheumatism.

VOL. IX—NO. 3 RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1906. WHOLE NO. 419

GOVERNOR JOHNSON RE-ELECTED

DUFFY ASSAULTED

Mayor of Red Lake Falls Forced From Polling Place at Thief River and Brutally Assaulted.

Maddened in their lust and passion, maddened in their covetousness of the county seat, maddened in their hatred of Red Lake Falls people, maddened unto cowardly brutality that only kinship with wild beasts can show, citizens of Thief River Falls conspired together and in that conspiracy wreaked a dastardly and wanton vengeance on Mayor John A. Duffy of Red Lake Falls, subjecting him to humiliation and physical attack by thugs hired for the purpose. It was a fitting conclusion of the Thief River Falls campaign which reeked with falsehood and every form of corruption and violation of law.

Mayor Duffy went to Thief River Falls Tuesday as an official challenger, armed with a proper certificate signed by H. E. Ives as chairman of the republican county central committee and took his stand, in his rights under the laws of the state, in the polling room in the first ward at Thief River Falls. Attending to his duties as a challenger, he was seized upon by one, Andy Smith, acting in the capacity of a peace officer, and rudely and forcibly ejected from the room and out upon the sidewalk where he was viciously assaulted by a thug, hired for the purpose, who struck him a heavy blow in the face. Mr. Duffy wore a heavy overcoat and was unable to defend himself. Later Mr. Duffy was followed to the train by a number of Thief River Falls people who jeered at him and taunted him. And in this crowd of hoodlums were men of supposedly high standing in the business and professional ranks of that city.

Since his return home Mr. Duffy has been confined to his home and is under a doctor's care. His assailant was Al. Parenteau, a notorious character of Thief River Falls. He has not yet been arrested and will not be until the outcome of Mr. Duffy's condition is determined.

That the attack on Mr. Duffy was premeditated and carried out according to plan is unquestioned. He has been the leader of the Red Lake Falls end of the county seat fight and at Thief River Falls has been the most cordially hated man on earth and everybody who has been at Thief River Falls has heard threats of what would be done to Duffy if he ever dared to show himself in that town.

A similar attack was planned upon P. B. Gaass of this city who was also an official challenger at Thief River Falls. John W. Eastman, editor of the Thief River Falls News, told openly in the hearing of parties of both towns that they were going to "lick" Mr. Gaass. What happened to prevent the cut-throats of that town from carrying out this plan is not known unless they were frightened by their own attack on Mr. Duffy.

And this is still another specimen of the Thief River Falls' idea of a "square deal."

How different the reception of the mayor of Thief River Falls. D. B. Bakke, when he came to Red Lake Falls to file his petition for county seat removal. He was taken in charge by the prominent citizens here, was wined and dined and given the time of his life, but in Thief River Falls there is a standing menace to the very life of any Red Lake Falls man who goes to that town.

NO PLACE IN POLITICS

No Place for Women Says Communfcation from One.

Women have no business in politics. No man ever did, will or could give sanction to a woman's appearance in a political roll.

A woman is queen in the home. In the rostrom she is unsexed and if she assumes a man's privilege she must expect to be treated as a man with all the lack of courtesy that it implies.

The United States constitution declares that, "All persons born in the United States are citizens;" and that same constitution forbids the abridgement of the rights and privileges of those citizens, but right in the face of this expression of justice and notwithstanding the fact that voting is considered the greatest of privileges, our state legislatures have, contrary to the plain letter of the constitution, granted special privileges and immunities to one half their citizens and withheld them from the other half, and for no other reason than the self-evident absurdity of man's supremacy based on mere physical force—and the so-called head ship of man in church, family and the state, which for centuries has succeeded only too well in keeping woman contented in her inspired correl, until the last fifty years, she has grown more restive and now boldly asks for her rightful position as companion and counsellor of man and not his slave or toy.

The eternal principles of justice, equality and freedom on which this government is based makes the withholding of the ballot from women a positive tyranny, greater than that, which caused the war cry of the revolution, because of our wider experience and broader views of human liberty.

It is impossible for a country whose institutions rest upon individual representation to practice any system of partially representative government without causing the interests and lives of the unrepresented to suffer from specifically unequal laws and other social wrongs, which fact has been thoroughly proven by women's experience in our government.

In two thirds of the United States today a mother is not the legal owner of her children. A husband may have a whole family out at service and he alone may collect their wages and if he chooses to spend it (?) and the wife has no redress.

But we are moving, for today if a woman is bright and industrious enough to earn her a home she can have the grand and glorious privilege of paying taxes, whereas she was once dead under the law she now liveth the law shutting her in its clutches tighter than a steel trap. She can be compelled to fill her lot, move her sidewalk or raise her building on short notice, grade and pave the streets or any other improvements the officers of the law—all men—see fit to vote upon her, (even tho she has to mortgage her home to do it) with no protest against her sex until it comes to a choice of officers, and she at once becomes a cipher. Why such taxation without representation is not tyranny is not clear. But there is consolation in the fact that it has taken woman only a little over fifty years to win her place as a sort of a thirteenth rib in the body commercial and that is rapid, when we consider the centuries she has been held as a mere rib of creation.

Experience is yearly proving Frances Willard's prophecy of 1884, viz: "That woman will bless and brighten every place she enters and she will enter every place. Its welcome of her presence and her power will be the final test of any institutions fitness to survive."

One of Them.

The Biggest Landslide Ever Known In the History of Minnesota Politics.

Carries Almost Every County in the State---Total Majority 75,000.

Special to the Courier.

St. Paul, Nov. 8, 10:30 A. M.—Johnson has over sixty thousand majority. McCleary defeated by twelve hundred.

John A. Johnson has been re-elected governor of Minnesota in the most remarkable campaign, in many ways, ever waged in the state.

Two years ago Theodore Roosevelt, republican candidate for the presidency, carried the state by a majority of 161,000: this year Governor Johnson, a democrat, carries it by over 60,000 majority.

The victory is a personal one, for for while Governor Johnson is so overwhelmingly elected, the balance of the democratic state ticket is defeated.

JOHN A. JOHNSON.

The reasons for this unusual condition are not difficult to determine; Governor Johnson had made a splendid record during the past two years; he has been personally popular with all classes of people; it was the "one good term deserves another" idea; and opposed to him was a man whom the people could only believe was nominated by the "interests" and was anything but a success in his public appearances. A. L. Cole couldn't arouse any enthusiasm for himself nor could any one do it for him. On the other hand Johnson was magnetic and attracted thousands by his mere personality.

Red Lake county did its share toward the landslide to Johnson, giving him a majority of nearly 1000. With seven precincts yet to hear from, Cole has 616 votes to 1489 for Johnson, a majority of 873. The vote of the other precincts will probably swell the number. Two years ago Johnson carried the county by 12 votes, getting 999 to 987 for Dunn.

The democrats also rejoice in the defeat of Congressman McCleary, in the second district, by W. S. Hammond. McCleary was a standpatter and dared to set his own opinion against the expressed wishes of his constituency. His home town assisted materially in his defeat.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Bray returned Saturday from Calgary where they had been for several months. The return was occasioned by the ill health of Mrs. Bray. They will remain probably a month in the city and then go to Eastern Canada.

Your stomach churns and digests the food you eat and if foul, or torpid, or out of order, your whole system suffers from blood poison. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea keeps you well. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. A. L. Riechert.

THE BATTLE LOST

Thief River Falls Elects All But Two of of Its Candidates---Had the Votes to Do It.

Anyhow we elected two of the county officials, Thomas Germo, county attorney; and O. T. Tandberg, treasurer.

That is the sum total of Red Lake Falls' performances in the county seat fight with Thief River Falls. It was a fight filled with hard work and much of bitter feeling. A big vote was polled and that settled it. Politics were cast aside and sectional preferment dominated. Thief River Falls had a set of candidates that they labored incessantly for and Red Lake Falls had another set. So it was not a political contest but a county seat scrap between the two towns. And now it is all over, it is a question whether it was worth the time, the work and money expended. The Courier had some personal friends it regrets to see defeated but as a purely county seat fight, the advantage to Thief River Falls is but a small affair and temporary at best. They are entitled to some comfort in a fight that has lasted two years and brought forth nothing to them.

They are welcome and it may be well for them to rejoice to the fullest extent.

James E. Ford, Dan Linnihan, Frank Jeffers and Joe Perrault are defeated. The county loses some of the best officials it ever had or ever will have. It is the county's loss. Following is the total vote for the candidates with the towns of Kratka, Smiley, Wyandotte, Mayfield and the unorganized towns of 152 39, 153 39, 154 29 yet to hear from but they will not change the result in any instance:

Governor: Johnson, 1489; Cole, 616.

Auditor: O'Brien, 1479; Ford, 1215.

Treasurer: Tandberg, 1413; Hanson, 1253.

Register of Deeds: Quist, 1409; Jeffers, 1268.

Sheriff: Nelson, 1441; Linnihan, 1306.

Judge of Probate: Ecklund, 363; Tarrant, 1829.

County Attorney: Germo, 1399; Stanton, 1254.

Clerk of Court: Johnson, 1541; Perrault, 1109.

Court Commissioner: Paul, 1075; Johnson, 1288.

Superintendent: Richards, 1619 McAnulty, 1996.

CLOSE OF THE CAMPAIGN

Contest Ended at St. Hilaire in Bitterness and Hard Feeling.

At St. Hilaire Monday night there was a spectacular close of the campaign that all who were present will remember for many a long day. Democrats and republicans were arrayed against each other and against their parties and democrats and republicans alike spoke for the same things and different things. There were bitterness, hard feeling, recrimination and denunciation.

It had been advertised as a democratic rally but resolved itself into a county seat scrap with both parties participating. The Red Lake Falls band was there playing an entertaining program on the street before the meeting and in the hall between speeches. It was impossible to get a St. Hilaire man to preside, so Frank Jeffers presided. After his speech he retired from the chairmanship in favor of John E. King. Several of the candidates James E. Ford, Thomas Germo and Fred Richards, made their appeals to the voters. Mr. King spoke for Governor Johnson. Then D. P. O'Neil made a little speech on behalf of Thief River Falls. It was fairness personified and so far everything was lovely but they introduced Dr. Tupper who injected the county seat fight into the proceedings and started a merry howdy-do. He talked on and on until the chairman had to call a halt but not before he made the mistake of his life. He had attacked County Attorney Germo unmercifully, without license or judgement. Mr. Germo again mounted the platform. With every muscle tensed, with an earnestness pictured in his face and every movement, and with a proper pride in the rectitude of his performance of the duties of his office, he hurled his defiance and denunciation at Dr. Tupper. It was splendidly done and won the heartiest approval of the audience. W. S. Cox then closed the evening with a three-quarters of an hour speech.

The large audience sat through over four solid hours of it and not a soul left the hall until the last words were spoken until considerably after midnight.

Perhaps it is a mistake to say that not a soul left the hall: Dr. Tupper did, for the pace was far too swift for him. In fact it was so swift that where men congregated to talk over the meeting and with the boys of the street, Dr. Tupper's name was a by-word and a jest.

Closing Days.

The closing days of the campaign were strenuous in the extreme; both Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls had every available man and team scouring the county from one end to the other. There were meetings and speeches wherever half-a-dozen men could be gathered together and day and night the work went on. Thief River Falls won the fight but Red Lake Falls has no reason to reproach herself because of any lack of work. She was just outvoted by the northern end of the county.

An extended account of the happenings of the last days would be utter uselessness for it it is all over except the natural regret in Red Lake Falls at the outcome and the corresponding rejoicings in the city to the north. Citizens of the county registered their wishes as a majority—let it go at that.

An Old Relic.

Last month the crew of a Delaware river clamdredger found a china urn bearing the inscription: "Presented by the City of Philadelphia to the Constitution, 1796." The old battleship Constitution, after she has been painted and polished, will probably receive this long-lost property, and it will be displayed among her other relics. Many years have gone by since golden grain belt beer was first brewed, and during these years it has built up a reputation for purity and healthfulness which made it the ideal home beverage. Havana, Nov. 1.—Maj. Theodore P. Kane, commander of the marines stationed at Cienfuegos, has sent in a report to the effect that on Oct. 27 he was informed that a serious uprising was on foot. He at once posted strong guards at the entrances to the city, with orders not to permit armed persons to pass in or out. He then went reconnoitering, and in the town of Caunac he found Col. Toledo at the head of a mounted body of 100 ex-insurgents. Toledo said he had organized for the purpose of resisting a threatened attack by the Moderates.

A similar gathering near Sancti Spiritus also was dispersed. From Matanzas come further complaints of the threatening attitude of bands of armed negroes in that vicinity, but no overt acts have been committed. SETTLERS IN WILD PANIC

REDS DETERMINED NOT TO GIVE IN—TROOPS PREPARE TO CLOSE IN.

Billings, Mont., Nov. 1.—A telephone message from Arvada, Wyo., yesterday afternoon, stated that the renegade Ute Indians are intrenched in a strong position in the hills adjacent to Arvada and that the Tenth and Sixth cavalry troops are reconnoitering the country, preparatory to closing in. Apparently the object of the troops is to awe the Indians with a display of superior force and thus secure surrender without bloodshed. The Utes are determined not to give in to the soldiers until they have to, believing if they would it will mean their return to Utah, where they say they cannot secure enough to eat.

Reds Want Concessions.

The Utes have been active in laying in a large supply of ammunition at Cheyenne and Gillette, together with provisions, and if the temper of the leading tribesmen can be taken as an indication, they propose to fight, or at least make a show of resistance and secure concessions from the soldiers and be permitted to make their way to the Cheyenne reservation and remain there pending their disposition by Washington.

Settlers in a Panic.

Moorhead advices state that a panic is on there, and the women and children are being removed from the scene of the trouble. It is feared that in the event of a clash between the soldiers and Indians, the Indians will scatter and wreak their vengeance on the settlers. The ranches are being converted into fortresses, and every precaution taken to meet the Indians if the come that way.

The real danger now lies in the anticipated junction of the Cheyenne Indians with the Utes.

They are worse than the Russian police."

The other arrests followed quickly. Edelson was charged with inciting to riot and the others with disorderly conduct.

According to the police, Edelson, in his speech, declared among other things: "No matter how much Czolgosz has been damned for his good work, we know that he was a great man. He was a true hero. American laws are all made for bluffing. The people of America are worse bluffed than those of Russia."

The driver was held at rifle point while the redskins sacked the load and carried it away, allowing the driver to proceed with the empty wagon.

Troops camped at the mouth of Buffalo creek are on short rations and more food has been ordered. Most of the Utes are still camped on Bear Creek, near Birney. Soldiers north of Sheridan have seen no trace of Cheyennes.

Outwit the Soldiers.

Miles City, Mont., Nov. 3.—Advices have been received at Fort Keogh of the arrival at Ashland of the Fort Keogh troops. They saw no Utes, the renegades apparently outwitting the Montana soldiers by making a wide detour toward the Cheyenne reservation. The exact location of the Utes now appears to be uncertain. NEWS OF INTEREST.

LAWS NEED TO BE RECONCILED.

Compulsory Education Law Is Cause of Trouble.

The compulsory education law passed by the last legislature is causing misunderstandings between school officers and officials of the labor department. The child labor law passed in 1895 and re-enacted in the new code prohibits child labor and orders the attendance of children at school until they are sixteen, while the 1905 law requires their attendance between the ages of eight and eighteen.

One provision of the compulsory education law is that children may be excused from school if actually engaged in some useful occupation or employment permitted by law. J. D. Bond, assistant superintendent of schools of St. Paul, asked the labor department a couple of days ago whether it would be necessary under that provision to give a labor permit to a youth between sixteen and eighteen if he wants to be excused from school. E. J. Lynch, assistant labor commissioner, took up the matter with the attorney general, who has ruled that a child over sixteen, employed in any work except such occupations as are prohibited to minors, is legally employed and does not require the child labor permit, but does require a separate permit from the school board excusing him from school.

Children under sixteen must have the child labor permit if they are to work, but those between sixteen and eighteen need have only an excuse from the school board from attending school.

PROBE STATE WATER SUPPLY.

Uncle Sam's Agents Will Work in Minnesota.

The hydrographic branch of the United States geological survey has assigned M. L. Fuller, F. G. Clapp and H. S. Spaulding of that department to visit Olmsted county for the purpose of studying the local conditions governing the occurrence of water in wells.

The geological survey is making a systematic examination of the ground water resources of Minnesota, including a determination of the depths at which the various water bearing beds occur in all parts of the state and of the quality and quantity of water that is available, and a special study is being made of the adaptability of the water for various industrial uses.

As soon as practicable after the completion of the field work a report will be published which will be distributed free of charge. The report will avoid as far as possible the discussion of the technical questions and will be so arranged that those interested may obtain from it such information as they may need concerning the available ground water at any locality in the state.

JANTZEN'S ESTATE PAYS A TAX.

First in Le Sueur County to Give Up Under New Inheritance Law.

The first tax to be paid in Le Sueur county under the inheritance tax law of 1905 is paid by Thomas H. Smullen, as administrator of the estate of Edward Jantzen, deceased, of Le Sueur. Mr. Jantzen, a real estate dealer, some sixty years of age, was married in October, 1905, to Eliza Termath, a professional nurse of Le Sueur.

After less than a year of married life Mr. Jantzen died, and on investigating his possessions in his safety deposit vault box at the First National bank, Mr. Smullen found gilt-edge securities, mostly in farm fortgages bearing interest in excess of 6 per cent to the amount of $27,000, and this sum, with a homestead worth $3,000, passes at once into the possession of his widow, the bride of less than a year. The inheritance tax will amount to $255.

HAS NOVEL DREDGE BOAT.

Contractor Near St. Cloud Uses Odd Craft on Ditch.

Contractor Doyle, who has charge of the construction work on Crow Wing Ditch No. 11, has constructed a novel dredge boat with which to prosecute the work. The boat is 16 feet wide and 68 feet long and is equipped with two 15 horsepower engines, a 40 horsepower boiler and a 40 foot power arm, the bucket of which will lift a cubic yard of dirt at a time.

The boat is provided with electric lighting machinery, and it is the intention to work day and night shifts. The dredge requires three feet of water to float it, and for that reason the work will begin at the starting point instead off at the mouth of the ditch. The men employed on the dredge have sleeping quarters and live constantly upon the boat.

So large a boat upon a marsh has created a great deal of curiosity, and farmers from the vicinity gather daily to watch its operations.

MEANS MILLIONS TO FARMERS.

Experiment Station Develops New Variety of Flax.

The experts at the state experiment station have been working several years to get a variety of flax that would yield a higher average of bushels per acre than is now produced throughout the state. The average last year was 11.3 bushels per acre. Two years ago the station distributed Minnesota No. 25, or "Primost flax," to farmers throughout the state, and this flax was grown by them, giving it a thorough test. The average comparative yield on forty-eight farms where No. 25 was grown along the side of the common varieties of flax and under exactly the same conditions showed an average gain of 3.1 bushels per acre for No. 25 over the common varieties, the common varieties averaging 11.9 bushels per acre and No. 25 averaging 15 bushels per acre, making a gain of over 26 per cent over the other varieties.

There were last year 537,365 acres of flax in Minnesota, with a yield in the state of an average farm value of 86 cents per bushel, or a total farm value for the entire crop of Minnesota of $4,363,459. North Dakota raised 13,078,195 bushels, the farm value being $12,947,413, and South Dakota raised 4,545,467 bushels.

A gain of 26 per cent in the yield per acre would have meant to the farmers of Minnesota an additional income of $1,134,499.84 over that received from the flax crop of last year.

While the increased yield of the new variety of flax indicated that it would be the best variety for the farmers of the state to grow, this year's tests of it at both the Minnesota and the North Dakota stations show it to be wilt-resistant, as well as a more productive flax. Just what this will mean to the farmers of the Northwest cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, as the yearly loss from wilt, although known to be enormous, can only be guessed. Wilt is a fungus disease that attacks both root and stem just above the ground.

Prof. C. P. Bull of the Minnesota experiment station says that flax is a remunerative crop; that it does not take any more nutriment from the soil than do the average grain crops, and does well when following a grass or cultivated crop in a seven or ten-year rotation. Flax also has the advantage of requiring a shorter time to mature than the other grain crops, thus making it possible to sow later in the spring.

Prof. Bull urges that all farmers raise some flax and that they start to raise No. 25 as soon as possible. He thinks farmers should pay more attention to the experiment station's work. The Minnesota experiment station has found that Minnesota No. 25 is wilt-resistant; that it gives larger yields. These results were obtained both at the station at St. Anthony Park and the Northwestern experiment station at Crookston.

BEAR ISLANDERS KICK.

Expected $25 Payment and Are Getting but $5.

Indian Agent Frater is making an annuity payment of $5 per capita to the Leech lake Indians. The older Indians and the Bear islanders are greatly dissatisfied, for they expected a payment of at least $25, as in other reservations.

They assert that there is $6,000,000 of their funds in the treasury at Washington and that they have received nothing from the sale of their timber in recent years. Many chiefs are refusing to accept the payment.

But little liquor is being sold, the Indians buying provisions chiefly. Having no funds to buy clothing, they are bound to suffer this winter.

In spite of the rough sea many Indians paddle across the lake to trade in Walker. They are sober and orderly and show good judgment in their purchases.

KILLS A BIG LYNX.

Brainerd Farmer Found That He Needed All His Shells.

One of the biggest lynx ever killed in Crow Wing county was shot just outside the city limits of Brainerd by Peter Rosko, a farmer.

Rosko was husking corn when he noticed an animal about as big as a large dog come out of the timber and trot along the road. He hurried to the house where he put two buckshot cartridges into his shotgun and slipped another shell into his pocket. He then succeeded in heading off the animal and putting a charge of buckshot into its shoulder.

The lynx leaped about eight feet into the air and then made a bee line for a tree, climbing it to the very top. Rosko fired the second time, apparently without effect. Then, going directly beneath the tree, he fired the third shot and brought it down

BEREAVED GIRL IS SUICIDE.

Loses Mother and Sweetheart Within Twelve Months.

Grieving over the loss of her mother and her betrothed within a year, and being unable to gratify a desire to revisit her home in the East, Lizzie Erickson, aged twenty-five years, living on a claim three miles north of Stanley with her brother, committed suicide by shooting herself in the head with a shotgun. The brother, with whom she lived, had gone to the barn. He heard a shot, rushed into the shack and found the girl lying by the bed with the side of her head blown off. The girl's mother died a year ago and her betrothed within a month. Friends refused to allow her to visit her old home on account of her disposition to brood over her sorrows.

North Dakotans continue to take an interest in fruit growing and the state will some day raise as fine apples as any other section of the country.

FOR GOOD ROADS WORK.

Scholle Warns Farmers Against Increase of State Funds.

A Winona County Good Roads association was organized at Winona, representative farmers from all parts of the county being present. Gustave Scholle, president, and George W. Cooley, engineer, of the state highway commission, attended the meeting.

Mr. Scholle urged those present to vote against the constitutional amendment providing for the appropriation of one-fourth of one mill on the assessed valuation of the state. He said that under the system now in force in this state it has been demonstrated that at least $70,000 of this amount will be wasted, because a minimum amount to be given to each county is provided under the present law. It has been shown that many of the counties will not expend this money according to any system, and very often will do very little work and that of no general value, and consequently the people who pay the taxes will not be benefited. The present law provides that one-twentieth of one mill be levied for good roads aid, and he believes that enough is wasted out of this amount.

Mr. Cooley devoted his time to a practical talk on good roads building, and giving suggestions on the formation of a goods roads association. The organization was completed by the adoption of a constitution and the election of the following officers: President, W. J. Landon; secretary and treasurer, C. A. Boalt.

An executive committee composed of seven members is to be appointed by the president, and this committee and the president are to appoint one vice president from each town and incorporated city and village in the county.

LID IS ON AT ORTONVILLE.

Citizens Lost Patience; Used a Sharp Stick.

After several ineffectual attempts, the lid is apparently on securely in Ortonville at last. Ortonville has been a wide open town for years, the Sunday closing laws having been enforced only for short periods in the term of the present mayor.

Two weeks ago written notice, signed by several citizens, was served on the mayor, to the effect that unless he enforced the laws relative to Sunday closing of saloons and the use of slot machines, immediate steps would be taken against him personally for malfeasance in office.
